Question 4's electricity shutdown would be expensive – economically and environmentally

ECONOMIC COSTS

Question 4 would:

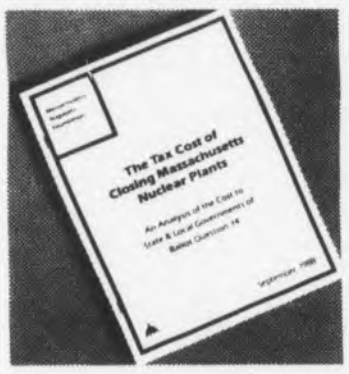
Cut off nearly 20 percent of our in-state power supply – forcing expensive power shortages.

Our state already faces the prospect of serious electricity shortages this winter.

Question 4's shutdown would cut off over 4 billion kilowatt-hours of electricity annually – nearly 20 percent of our in-state power supply – and make our electricity supply problems even worse.

Cost taxpayers and ratepayers billions of dollars.

If Question 4 passes, the State of Massachusetts would have to pay for the arbitrary shutdown of the power plants.



These huge costs would be paid by Massachusetts taxpayers.

A September 1988 Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation study concluded that: "Likely compensation to the plants' owners would be somewhere between $1.3 and $2.1 billion. The annual carrying costs... would put a $150 million to $250 million a year dent in state and local budgets for each of the next 20 years – a total fiscal impact of $4 billion."

In addition, electricity rates would rise to pay for the high costs of replacement power.

Cause thousands of Massachusetts workers to lose their jobs.

Question 4's shutdown would cause the more than 1,000 men and women who work at the plants to immediately lose their jobs.

The increased electric bills and taxes that would result from the shutdown would increase business costs and damage our state's economy – putting thousands of other Massachusetts jobs at risk.

ENVIRONMENTAL COSTS

Question 4 would:

Increase oil and coal burning: adding as much as 44 million pounds of sulfur dioxide and 7 billion pounds of carbon dioxide into the air every year.

If our state's nuclear electricity plants are closed, most of the replacement power would come from oil and coal plants.

By forcing this switch to oil and coal burning, Question 4 would add to already serious air and water pollution problems – including ozone pollution, acid rain, and the global warming Greenhouse Effect.

Increase Acid Rain.

Sulphur dioxide pollution is a major cause of acid rain – which is destroying our lakes and streams, and agricultural and forest resources.

Question 4 would lead to increased sulfur dioxide pollution, making our acid rain problems even worse.

Add to the Greenhouse Effect.

By forcing a switch to oil and coal, Question 4 would increase the carbon dioxide emissions that are creating the global warming Greenhouse Effect – a problem which could have worldwide environmental impacts.

As the Boston Globe stated in an August 15, 1988 editorial: "If (Massachusetts' nuclear electricity plants) were replaced by fossil-fuel plants the emission of gases that cause acid rain, as well as the warming of the atmosphere would be increased by 15 percent – at a time when every effort should be made to reduce such emissions."

Question 4 would permanently shut down the generation of electric power by Massachusetts' nuclear electricity plants.

Worries about housing plan

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Members of the Curtis Estate Action Committee and town officials are concerned that their proposal to use the Jerusalem Road property for "needy housing" may be lost if the housing authority does not begin to cooperate.

Action committee spokesman Joseph McElroy warned selectmen Monday night that if the town does not present a unified plan to the attorney general by the end of the month, their efforts to gain town ownership of the property may be ruined.

The town is currently in a legal battle against the trustees who own the 55-acre parcel. The trustees of the estate, James DeGiacomo and Evan Crosby have petitioned the court to break the terms of the will of the late George E. Curtis. They plan to sell the property to a private developer and use the proceeds to provide grants to a designated charity.

The action committee and town officials, including the selectmen, have asked the court to transfer the property to the town under the jurisdiction of the housing authority. Their plan would include rehabilitating existing buildings to provide housing for the retarded, the homeless, and the handicapped.

Although efforts were made to have members of the housing authority attend Monday night's meeting, they were not present.

Housing authority defends its absence from meeting

The chairman of the Cohasset Housing Authority had requested that Monday night's discussion about the Curtis Estate plan be postponed because a state official would be unable to attend.

John Muncey, chairman of the local housing authority, said he requested that selectmen postpone the discussion until an Executive Office of Communities and Development official could attend. "I wanted EOCD's input into this because they're the ones who hold the purse strings," he explained. "I tried to get someone down to the meeting but I couldn't. I wanted everyone to sit down with EOCD and talk about the plan. That would make the most sense - to have the man we have to deal with there at the meeting."

At Monday's meeting, members of the action committee stated that unless they can come up with the technical data and costs of renovating the Curtis Estate buildings, the town might lose its fight to gain control of the Jerusalem Road property.

During Monday night's meeting, action committee members and selectmen said repeatedly that the housing authority must be the agency to apply for the necessary state funding.

Muncey said he has tried to explain to selectmen that the housing authority cannot apply for funding at will. "The state provides the prospectus and tells us they will accept applications for certain funding. We can't just pick up the phone and say we want some money. We have to sit down with EOCD before we do anything," he noted.

Regarding the Curtis Estate Action Committee's plan, Muncey said the housing authority voted May 13 to support a plan that includes Chapter 705 affordable family housing, a shelter for the homeless, and Chapter 707 housing, for single-room occupancies. The plan endorsed by the authority does not include the eight units of housing for the retarded, as proposed by the action committee.

"It's not that we object to housing for the retarded, but EOCD has told us they have now gone to funding for single-floor residences. This is a two-story building. We tend to believe what EOCD tells us," Muncey said. "They hold the purse strings."

The housing authority is currently negotiating to purchase property on Elm Street next to the fire station. If the deal is completed, the housing authority plans to build a one-story facility which

At third debate

Candidates divided on local issues

Once again, the differences between the two candidates were apparent during a third televised debate in the race for state representative.

Issues that sharply divide incumbent Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray and her opponent John Silva run the gamut from solid waste management, to restoration of the Old Colony railroad, to their responses on the referendum questions. They made their opinions known during a debate held Oct. 20 by the Hingham League of Women Voters which was televised by Continental Cablevision.

When asked whether she supports the prevailing wage referendum question, as she indicated during a previous debate, Rep. Murray stated, "I don't have the prerogative to let the public know how I stand on referenda. I've always made it a policy of not letting people know how I stand on referenda. As a representative, you represent the majority of the people in your district."

Silva noted his opposition to a repeal of the prevailing wage law. "If tax savings is the issue," he said, "and not decreasing wages, then why doesn't question two require all wage savings returned to the taxpayers? Repeal of the prevailing wage will only cut wages."

Although Rep. Murray says she has not heard from constituents concerning this issue, Silva said this is the number two-ranking issue with residents he has met while campaigning in the Third Plymouth district.

The candidates were asked if they support affordable housing constructed through the state-regulated comprehensive permit process.

Rep. Murray and Silva opposed the comprehensive permit process, noting that the state has no business regulating what local communities must allow within those cities and towns.

No trick, teens don't want treats

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

A group of Cohasset teens will be trick or treating Halloween night, Oct. 31, but they won't just be asking for sweets.

Instead, they will be gathering canned goods and other food staples for Project Shelter, sponsored by WCVB-TV.

"There are hungry people who need food," said Ted Graham, 15, of Cohasset, one of the teens involved in the event.

"We hope to get a good reception," said Graham, a member of St. Anthony's Church.

The event for 9th to 12th graders is being held by a town-wide council of churches, according to the Rev. Gary Ritts of The Second Congregational Church.

It will begin at 6 p.m. Oct. 31, with a hot dog supper at Second Congregational.

Then the teens will be divided into groups of four, and given a list of items to collect as they go trick or treating to help the homeless.

"It will be like a scavenger hunt list," explained Rev. Ritts.

"It will include things like a particular kind of soup or brand of tuna. It will all be non-perishable."

Food items may also be dropped off at the church, he noted.

The teens will meet back at the church about 8:30 p.m. and prizes will be awarded to those who obtain everything on the list, he said.

"It will be the same list for everyone," said Rev. Ritts.

Cohasset's week...

No more money

Selectmen voted Monday night not to continue their involvement in a regional lawsuit against the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority.

They authorized a total payment of $10,000 for previous litigation against the MWRA. Cohasset agreed last year to participate with Hull and other coastal towns to prevent the MWRA from locating a sewerage outfall pipe less than three miles off the Hull coast. The towns were attempting to participate in a U.S. District Court case involving the mandated clean-up of Boston Harbor.

Although the South Shore towns' petition was denied, those communities decided to continue the legal fight by appealing the decision to the U.S. District Court of Appeals.

Although Cohasset originally agreed to pay $5,000 for the court costs, the appeal necessitated a second $5,000 payment.

Selectman James Gallagher noted that the MWRA recently decided to locate the outfall pipe eight to nine miles off the coast "so our objective has been accomplished. Any more money would be a waste of the taxpayers' money," he said.

Selectmen voted not to appropriate any additional money, but they will honor the second $5,000 payment which the town is obligated to pay.

The new Cohasset-Scituate Continental Cablevision studio celebrated its new Gannett Road location with an Open House last week. Among the hosts for the event were (l to r) Wendy Forman, Scituate manager; Patricia Farrell, production manager and Robert Belleveau, Cohasset manager. (Dave Sullivan photo)

- Thomas B. Welch, seeking to rent additional parking in conjunction with an automobile rental and leasing business at 138 Chief Justice Cushing Highway from Robert V. and Barbara Davenport at 132 Chief Justice Cushing Highway.

Recreation office needs

The chairman of the recreation commission has requested a meeting with selectmen regarding furniture for the commission's office in the new wing of Town Hall.

According to chairman Richard P. Barrow in his Oct. 14 letter, less furniture than is needed has been ordered.

Barrow explained that the commission is moving into new spaces four or five times the current office size.

"Compounding this factor, was the lack of any existing office furniture worth saving. . All our current furniture came from the disposal area, courtesy of Mr. Joe Laugelle, about 12 years ago, and a couple of more pieces, just recently.

"The furniture, which is now held together with coats of paint, wire and string served us well, but its usefulness has long since past."

According to Barrow, Jack Worley met with then executive secretary Donald Andrew in June to review the list of needed furniture.

"At that time, Mr. Andrew said that we would be allowed the furniture we had requested, excluding possibly an easel and bulletin board which we might have to purchase on our own.

However, Barrow said that he has learned that the only furniture that has been ordered for the commission is a secretarial desk and three bookcases.

"...Somewhere along the line, it would seem that little attention is being paid to our needs, and to the statements made by the executive secretary last June," stated Barrow.

"Because of the lack of furniture being ordered, we would like to request a meeting with the Board of Selectmen in order to rectify the problem as quickly as possible so we may order furniture, and relocate our office in the new wing.

"The list that was submitted to, and approved by Mr. Andrew, was a minimum order list, requesting only essentials, allowing us to function in a somewhat normal manner.

"The entire recreation commission feels very strongly about this issue, and in view of what monies the selectmen have spent upon their office furniture, during the past couple of years, it is beyond our comprehension that we not be allowed what we have requested."

Conservation meeting

The Conservation Commission's continued hearing on the former Cox estate previously scheduled for Tuesday, Oct. 18, has been rescheduled to Tuesday, Nov. 1, at 7:30 at the Town Hall Auditorium.

New harbormaster

Selectmen voted to appoint Irving Gadow the new Cohasset harbormaster. He will begin October 31.

Gadow, a 32-year veteran of the Coast Guard, lives in Plymouth. Although Selectman Martha Gjesteby initially expressed concern about the distance Gadow would have to travel in an emergency, she voted for the appointment.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle attempted to nominate James Sheerin of Cohasset, but the motion was not accepted. Selectmen Laugelle and James Gallagher voted against Gadow's appointment.

Officials concerned about Curtis Estate plan

Without more specific plans for the property, and state funding to rehabilitate the buildings for specific uses, the plan will be shot down by the attorney general, McElroy warned. Those plans must be developed by a cohesive group with all parties working together, he added.

He noted that the attorney general, who is the one who must support or deny the petition to break the Curtis will, "has turned around almost 100 percent" regarding the town's proposal. But McElroy added that Asst. Attorney General Gwen O'Sullivan, who is working on this case, has indicated that the town must provide a progress report on the specifics of the plan by the end of October.

What the state requires, he said, is additional technical information regarding the existing structures on the property, along with an indication that funding from the Executive Office of Communities and Development is forthcoming. And the only agency that can apply for those state grants, he noted, is the housing authority.

Maria Plante, another co-spokesman for the action committee, said the housing authority originally supported this plan. She also noted that the attorney general would not approve a plan that includes only housing for low income. The plan must also include housing for the retarded, as it most closely resembles the original terms of the Curtis will.

Plante said she was told by EOCD officials that there is state money available to renovate a two-story structure for housing for the retarded. It is currently proposed that the main house on the property be converted into housing for retarded adults.

Deborah Grywacz from the Department of Mental Retardation, assured selectmen there is $22 million in funding available for such a proposal.

"It's time the housing authority came up to the net and indicate if they have reservations about the recommendations of the district attorney and the attorney general (to support housing for the retarded at the Curtis Estate property), and what those reservations are," McElroy stated. "It is crucial that the housing authority puts its best foot forward and makes sure we mean business. The (assistant) attorney general wants to support us but she can't without specifics which I feel are reasonable."

"This is a golden opportunity for the town of Cohasset. If not, it will be sold to a developer because the housing authority is dragging its feet, Old Pasture Road resident R.M. Campbell stated. "His (chairman John Muncey) lack of the cooperation is putting the town at great risk of losing the Curtis Estate."

Town Counsel Richard Henderson advised selectmen that the attorney general is the only advocate in these legal proceedings. If the town committee's can not come to an agreement to present to the attorney general "you're going to lose," he said. "Without a unified case, you have no case at all."

McElroy suggested that some of the housing advocate agencies, such as the South Shore Association for Retarded Citizens and the Hingham Interfaith Shelter, could present their own proposals for use of the property. But he noted that one "umbrella" agency, such as the housing authority, would be the best method to convince the attorney general to support the town's plan.

"SSARC (South Shore Association for Retarded Citizens) could go it alone," Patrick Plante said. A member of the association, Plante noted, "Most important is the will itself. We can show that we can do something by involving SSARC - it's really what the Curtis will states should be done."

Selectman James Gallagher noted that at a meeting last May which was held to discuss the action committee proposal, Muncey indicated the housing authority's support for the plan. "I can't believe he jumped off the bandwagon," Gallagher said. "The housing authority needs to answer some questions."

McElroy suggested that selectmen meet with the housing authority to get a "firm commitment" from the authority regarding the Curtis Estate Action Committee proposal.

"And if we can't get any answers, we'll go to the state,' Selectman Rocco Laugelle said, explaining that the state has jurisdiction over the locally-elected housing authority.

will house eight retarded adults. EOCD has guaranteed the housing authority $700,000 to construct the facility in the rear of the property. The current home will remain and will be renovated into a residence for frail elderly, Muncey explained.

"It's not as if we've been sitting on our hands," he noted. "And we're certainly not against housing for the retarded. But we can't devote all our land to the retarded - there has to be some mix. What we are going to do on Elm Street is exactly what Maria Plante (vice president of the South Shore Association for Retarded Citizens) is planning for the Curtis Estate."

Muncey anticipates that construction of the Elm Street housing for the retarded will begin in the spring.

At Monday night's meeting, action committee members explained that the attorney general has given them until the end of this month to prepare more technical data and to provide state funding for the renovations of the Curtis Estate buildings.

"That was the reason the selectmen didn't want the meeting postponed," Muncey said. "But I have the same copy of the letter sent by the assistant attorney general and there is no deadline. I think we should have waited until a representative of EOCD could be there."

He explained, "It's EOCD that provides the money for the housing. It's the Department of Mental Retardation that would staff and occupy the building."

In the meantime, Muncey said the housing authority is busy overseeing almost $1 million of state-funded renovations to the elderly housing complex at 60 Elm Street.

In addition, they will again review the Deck Point housing plan. Although the housing authority initially gave its approval for the development, which will provide about 30 units of affordable family housing through the comprehensive permit process, the agency now has some serious questions about the proposal.

"It's our job to encourage developers to build affordable housing. When we look at these plans, we have to say 'fine'. But then as the plan is reviewed by various town boards, other questions come up. Right now, we're very concerned about the lack of play area for the children who will live at Deck Point. We could possibly be looking at another 200 kids there, and right now there is no place for them to play. We want to take another look at this plan," he said.

Candidates clearly divided on local issues . . .

"I've got a major problem with comprehensive permits," Silva answered. "And I have a problem with the state walking into a community and upholding the right of a developer, who because he proposes a certain percentage of affordable housing in a community, can then bypass local rules and zoning restrictions."

Silva noted that the South Shore Coalition, of which he is chairman, has developed an affordable housing blueprint, "which would allow towns to form their own affordable housing partnerships designating what land they would like affordable housing on, how much, and what it will look like."

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray

Rep. Murray said she has never approved of the comprehensive permit process, and her voting record has long substantiated her stand against state inference. "I think towns should have a right to say if they want a development or if they do not," she stated.

Once again, the question of the Old Colony railroad restoration project was posed to the two candidates. Rep. Murray, who initially filed legislation calling for a study on a monorail system down Rte. 3, said she "is not opposed" to the commuter rail restoration project.

"I have no problem with the trains coming to the South Shore. I have a problem with the environmental issues. They promised us an Environmental Impact Study by September, and it's not in the offing. They're spending all kinds of money for the Greenbush line to come back on, but we've seen nothing substantial to say if we should go ahead with it or not," she noted.

The 12-year incumbent said she worked to include the reconstruction of the Neponset Bridge into the transportation bond issue, but she was informed that will be in the last stages of the commuter rail project. Until the bridge is rebuilt, Rep. Murray said the Greenbush project "makes no sense."

Silva said the commuter railroad project is one area where an effective legislator should have been in the forefront, working in behalf of the "overwhelming majority" of constituents who voted for the plan four years ago. He said now the debate on the commuter line should be centered on where the stations should be located in regard to public safety, "not based on waiting for an environmental impact study.

"In my mind," he continued, "this is where a state rep stands up and looks at the issue and stakes a stand one way or another and explains that to the voters."

With plans to increase recreational activities at Wompatuck State Park, the candidates were asked if they would pursue an additional access road in another community.

Rep. Murray said she would oppose many of the projects currently planned for Wompatuck State Park, noting that a small town like Hingham can't support a full-service park. She also said there is too much traffic on Main Street in Hingham, adding that she would "certainly fight for another access."

John Silva

Silva agreed, saying that Wompatuck is a regional resource and, "the only people who use it are not just from Hingham.

"I believe there should be a share of the traffic by Norwell in some fashion. I do not see any reason why, when there is an access from Hingham, we can't have an access from the Norwell side," he said.

Given his record of support for three local tax raises in Hull, Silva was asked if he would support raising state taxes to support additional state services.

"Absolutely not," he answered. "I support the state getting its act together, not to pass programs that they have no idea how to fund after year two or three."

Rep. Murray said she has a strong record of "One of today's greatest challenges is the handling of our solid waste problem. If we do not meet the challenge, we will drown in our own trash. As Chairman of the South Shore Coalition, I am proud that our organization has been funded by the state to develop a solid waste disposal blueprint for the South Shore – the first such grant of its kind. This program is typical of the kind of representation I want to bring to our district – environmentally and economically sound solutions to the problems we share. Consensus, not conflict. Action, not reaction."

Cohasset Assistant Treasurer Tom Murphy on Horizon Passbook Savings.

"9%? AT THIS RATE, WE'LL HAVE TO HIRE EXTRA TELLERS."

"People are going for our new Horizon account in a big way. I think they like the security of having a passbook, and knowing what their balance is at any time.

"And they really like the special introductory rate: 9% annual interest on any amount over $1000. That's an effective annual yield of 9.55%. You just can't beat that one. Especially since there's no maturity date, and interest is compounded daily and posted monthly. Of course, accounts are F.D.I.C. insured.

"One person said he thought you had to be a big-time investor to get a deal like that. I told him that at Rockland Trust, all our customers are big-time investors."

Candidates corner . . .

Atkins endorses Silva

Introducing John M. Silva, Democratic Candidate for State Representative in the Third Plymouth District (Cohasset, Hingham and Hull), as "a true leader, someone who is not afraid to stand up for his region no matter how controversial the issue." U.S. Congressman Chester Atkins lent his support and that of the Massachusetts State Democratic Committee to Silva's candidacy.

Congressman Atkins was the guest of honor at a reception held for Silva at the home of Jack and Diane Sullivan of 708 Jerusalem Road in Cohasset, October 22.

Silva, who also serves as the Chairman of the Hull Board of Selectmen and the 10 town South Shore Coalition, said he was "deeply honored that the Congressman had taken time out from his busy schedule to endorse his candidacy for State Representative."

Atkins also spoke from his position as Chairman of the Democratic Party in Massachusetts by indicating that the Third Plymouth District contest had been targeted by the Party as a "must win." "This district has too long been without an effective voice in the State Legislature. With exploding issues surrounding us like solid waste management, harbor pollution, revitalization of commuter rail and ensuring quality public education for our children in increasingly financially strapped communities, the time is now for effective leadership on Beacon Hill. John Silva has been at the forefront of these and other issues. His effective and articulate leadership is necessary if the South Shore is to continue to offer the excellent quality of life its residents currently enjoy."

Atkins concluded his remarks by stating that, "John Silva has proven his ability to build effective coalitions, to bring disparate groups to the table to resolve problems. He has also shown that he is not afraid to take courageous outfront stands on controversial issues that affect his community and his region. His style of leadership would truly be an asset not only to the Third Plymouth District, but to the South Shore."

MTA supports Silva

The Committee to Elect John Silva, Democratic candidate for the Massachusetts House of Representatives, Third Plymouth District, announced today that their candidate has received the endorsement of the Massachusetts Teachers Assocation (MTA).

The MTA's Voice of Teachers for Education (VOTE) Board of Directors - in a letter signed by the Chairman of VOTE, Michael R. Bardsley, and its Executive Director, Arline Isaacson — gave its full support for Silva's candidacy, recognizing his long-standing advocacy on behalf of public education and educators.

Silva said, "I am ecstatic about this endorsement, and I thank the Board and membership of VOTE for their generous support. There is no more crucial role in society than the one that our teachers play in our communities and our lives, and there is no other institution more important to me than our children's education. On Beacon Hill I will continue to be an active and enthusiastic supporter of public education."

Murray supports bill

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray reaffirmed her commitment to environmental and health issues by stating her strong support for the Toxics Use Reduction bill.

H.5653 is a bill whose passage would contribute greatly to solving the Massachusetts hazardous waste problem by reducing the amount of toxic substances used in manufacturing. MASSPIRG (the Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group), a statewide citizens' organization, is leading the fight to pass H.5653.

Rep. Murray responded to the inquiry of John Furlong of Hingham and other concerned citizens that she support the five key points of Toxics Use Reduction.

"It is high time that we look at ways to reduce our dependence on hazardous substances instead of focusing on disposal issues after the fact," Rep. Murray said. She also pointed out that other governing bodies, such as Mass. Assoc. of Health Boards already lead the statewide list of endorsers for the bill. "I encourage other legislators and groups to do the same," said Murray.

Auto insurance legislation

State Senator William B. Golden (D-Weymouth) announced the passage of a Senate proposal for Auto Insurance premiums that will have a projected 16.1 percent savings for consumers.

"This is a bill responsive to the citizens' demand for lower auto insurance premiums" said Golden. "The Senate proposal significantly strengthens provisions passed by the House earlier this year, and effectively addresses consumer concerns over recent increases in auto insurance premiums."

Though generally pleased with the provisions of the bill, Senator Golden cautions: "Some persons are likely to find varying changes in the amount of coverage the new reforms afford them. All consumers should carefully review their individual insurance needs with their insurance agent and attorney to ensure they can both benefit from the legislated reforms and obtain proper and adequate protection."

Silva's campaign proceeding

John M. Silva, Democratic candidate for the Massachusetts House of Representatives, Third Plymouth District, met with his campaign staff workers and other supporters to reaffirm his commitment to his bid for the House seat.

Citing his platform of bringing strong, knowledgable, issue-oriented leadership to the communities of Hull, Hingham and Cohasset, Silva said, "I want everyone to know that it's 'full-speed ahead' for me and my campaign. I will be working hard to confirm your confidence in my candidacy, and I know I can count on your continued support. Active and strong representation in our district has been long absent; we can demonstrate to the voters that they have a chance to remedy that this November 8th."

He went on to say that despite a tight budget, he felt confident in his ability to communicate his platform to the people via increased exposure and face-to-face debates with his opponent: "There is no shortage of enthusiasm, commitment, and belief in this campaign. We will be working hard all the way, and we will be successful," he said.

A hallowed eve

While bearing in mind the oft-repeated cautions about trick-or-treat safety and perhaps a few new ones about drinking and driving to the increasingly popular adult costume parties, this is a week to reflect on the other meaning of Halloween.

It's become a children's holiday, a boost to the candy and costume industry.

We don't often hear sermons reminding us to reflect on "the true meaning of Halloween" as we do at Christmas.

That may be partly due to the fact that while this is a religious festival, it is not one of the more hopeful days on the theological calendar.

Halloween is a contraction meaning "All Hallows' Eve"—the eve of All Saints Day. Traditional Catholics go to Mass on Nov. 1 to honor the saints and to pray for their help and guidance as we struggle to follow them into Heaven.

But the evening before has been shrouded in the darker mysteries of the spirit. It combines Christian and pre-Christian ideas with the awe-some forces of the natural world.

The fall equinox, when the sun moves across the equator, forbodes the onset of winter in the northern hemisphere, particularly those regions, like ours, where seasons are marked strongly.

For primitive people, the most important event of the year, the harvest, came at this time. In Britain and northern Europe where many of our Halloween traditions were born, those ancient were totally dependent on what they saw as the earth-spirits to grant them a life-giving harvest.

The Druids, a pagan culture in Britain, built bonfires to keep at bay the evil spirits thought to reside in the surrounding darkness. Apples, cakes and other "treats" were fruits of the harvest, shared at festivals and offered to deities including the earth mother, who was Demeter to the Greeks, and Pamona to the Romans.

The earliest costumes were disguises worn to fool evil spirits, and tricks were played to emulate them.

The jack-o-lantern symbol is based on a Celtic legend of a man who after death was not allowed into heaven because of his miserliness. Because he had once tricked the Devil, he was not welcome in Hell either.

So he was doomed to spend eternity roaming the world with his lantern, halfway between good and evil, between death and salvation.

To us he has become a silly pumpkin face. The original lantern of Jack was a turnip containing a live coal. Now we use one of the popular fruits of our own New England harvest.

The witch has become another symbol, of one who uses supernatural powers to harm the living. But as late as the 17th century in our part of the world, witchcraft was not only believed in, but the cause of widespread hysteria which sent many a hapless victim to the gallows.

When the early Christian church designated All Saints' Day at the time of the ancient new year marked by harvest and the sun's departure from the northern hemisphere, many powerful symbols were united.

Homage was paid to the power of death and the hope of resurrection, to the mysterious force that makes the earth bear life-giving fruit, but can just as easily leave her barren and cold.

The Easter season in the spring marks the hopeful phase, of renewal and birth. This season, Halloween, marks the other end of that cycle.

So, have fun at the party, and enjoy the cute costumes of young trick-or-treaters while saving a few Hershey minatures to munch later.

But let us also remember that "civilization" will never quite drown out the voices of our ancestors calling out to the spirit world.

Each of us walks through life carrying our own lantern, trying to light the way among the forces of good and evil in ourselves. - Paula Lobo

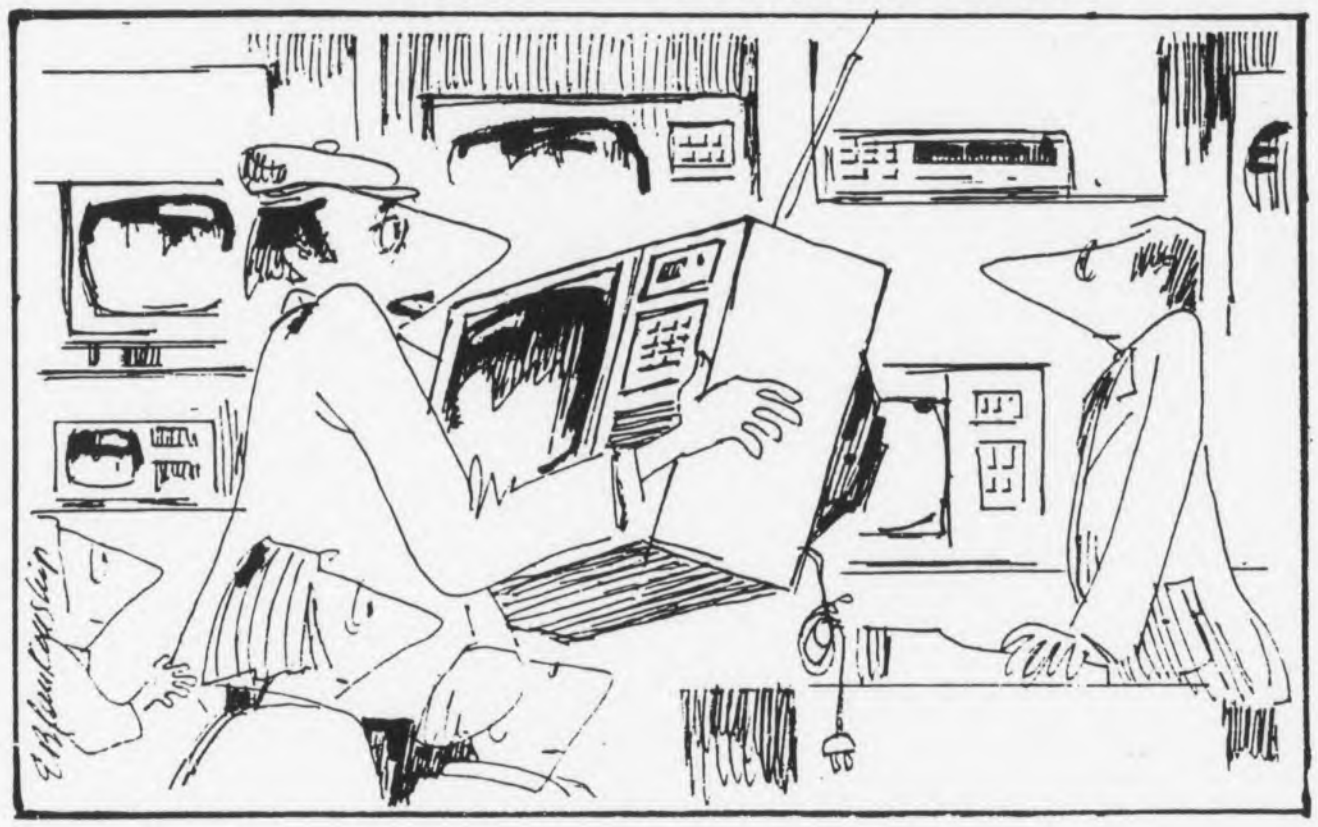
NEWS ITEM — Are we running out of electricity? 'Yes,' say energy officials recalling last summer's record heat wave causing N.E. power pool 5 percent voltage reduction an unprecedented 10 times. Power outage close calls plus unprecedented building boom in the area prompts energy officials to urge vote against Nov. 8 ballot question 4, which would close Pilgrim and Yankee Rowe power plants forever



"...Just in case they shut down Pilgrim for keeps...you have one of these that runs on kerosene...?"

Letters

To the Editor:

The bi-centennial of the signing of the Constitution was observed in Cohasset in September 1987 with ceremonies on the Common and at the newly designated Constitution Park, next to the post office. At that time, the Highway Department and the Tree and Park Department plus the Community Garden Club and the Amateur Gardeners all collaborated in the initial landscaping of the park. In addition, Mr. Lee Palmiter's family donated a handsome bronze plaque to mark the occassion.

Again this September, the Town departments and generous citizens have stepped forward with time, efforts and donations in a further phase of the ongoing improvement of the Park — not only to continue the Constitution observances but for the future enjoyment by Cohasset people.

The one-time members of the Constitution Committee want to recognize these contributions: the Highway Department under Harold Litchfield for his excellent clearing and filling job; the Tree and Park Department under Peter Laugelle for his fine continuous maintenance and the clearing of brush; three generous donors of loads of loam for the Park — Robert Pape, Frank Williams and William "sonny" Barnes. A key effort was made by the Rotary Club which not only contributed money but whose members donated more loam, some equipment usage and some real muscle: Mike Spirito, Wayne Sawchuk, Doug Peck, Mike Bleakie and Paul Laugelle. The Community Garden Club of Cohasset under President Phyllis Peck and with Bunny Wagner on the project has used all these fine contributions in completing the 1988 phase of their five-year landscaping plan. The back of the Park has been seeded, thus increasing the size of the Park by a third. In addition, some new pine trees have been planted and the Park looks beautiful indeed.

Everyone who has been interested in this continuing, "living legacy" observance of the Constitution bi-centennial and who have contributed so much are to be commended by the Townspeople of Cohasset. Meanwhile, readers, look for more of those excellent Constitution vignettes written by David Wadsworth, ex-chairman of the Constitution Committee, over the past two years.

State increases health care coverage

To the Editor:

Over the past twelve months there have been several issues in home health care that received media attention. Two of the major crisis effecting home health care were the Medicare "Denial" situation and the short-fall of payments from State government for Medicaid patients. These two issues ran hand-in-hand. The Federal government scaled back on its commitment to home health care to Medicare beneficiaries, therefore, the State government chose to increase its coverage for such care. It was a classic case of shifting responsibility from the Federal government to State government.

Recently the crisis had abated and the situation is improved for patients requiring home health care. We should thank our Federal and State elected officials who deserve the credit for the change and who were so supportive during difficult times. We are fortunate on the South Shore to have elected officials who are not only willing to listen to a problem, but to see the solution through even though it may be byzantine and require a great deal of perserverance and patience.

Representative Mary Jeannette Murray and Senator William Golden were most responsive and helpful. I wish to publicly thank them and acknowledge their efforts. Both Representative Murry and Senator Golden intervened on behalf of the VNA of the South Shore before the State Rate Setting Commission in an effort to insure that reimbursement for Medicaid patients would be adequate to allow us to continue our work. They ensured that the Rate Setting Commission responded to the need. Relief would have been difficult without their help.

Observe What?

Why worry so much about science, now — when no truth
can be found?
Geoff Chew, a research
physicist, said simply:
"Theories are approximations,
each and every one;
facts are not truths;
there are no absolutes."

"None?" I ask.
Then let me attach myself to all the webs spun 'round —
in corners of my house; and let me revere
the congregation —
white, like churches —
of egrets, out there, on the rocks.

Let me
and see!
For me, truth
is found in any tree, in the dropping autumn leaves, and in the kingfisher
upon our dock.

Natural food store makes move to Cohasset

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

Bigger isn't always better, according to the owners of Nuth'n More Natural, a natural food store which recently opened at 5 Brook St., Cohasset Village.

"We want to stay as small as we can, and to offer as much as we can," said Linda Pratt of Kingston, who owns the business with her brother, Bob Gramarossa of Marshfield.

Both are in their 30s.

"We want to know our customers," she said.

The business moved three months ago from cramped quarters on Route 139 in Marshfield where it had been located for five years.

"We were very happy and successful," said Pratt. "But the location was limited.

"It was a hard decision.

"Relatives let us know that this was available. It had been The Linen Chest before.

"We were sad to leave Marshfield, but not unhappy because here we can offer more."

The store offers everything from organically grown cornflakes to fresh organic produce to organic pet shampoos and herbal flea and tick collars.

"We also have body care, vitamins, books, herbs and spices," she said.

"The breads are very popular, as are the cereals, granolas and pastas.

"We don't really feature weight and diet products. Every store sets its own limits.

"We try to keep competitive prices.

"Whatever we are able to purchase on sale, the savings are passed along to the customer."

Pratt explained that the store is not just for people interested in natural foods, products without pesticides and preservatives.

"It's also for people with allergies, or salt or sugar restricted diets," she said.

The clientele, which is mostly through word of mouth, varies from high school students to senior citizens, according to Pratt.

"We try to have something here for everyone," said Pratt.

Neither Pratt nor her brother had any business experience before they decided to open a natural food store five and a half years ago.

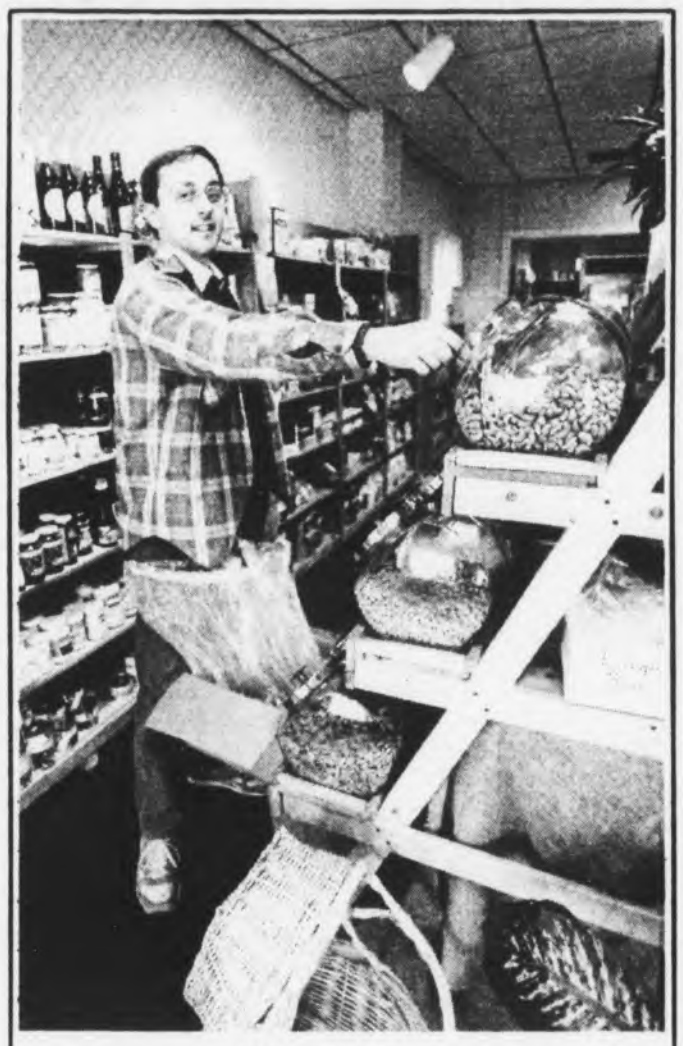
"We both liked good, healthy food, and this was one way to have access to it. It's nice to be able to pass it along," she said.

"We learned by experience.

"You really have to like what you do.

"There are sacrifices, but it's all worth it."

Both try to adhere to a vegetarian diet.



Bob Gramarossa

Gramarossa said be became a vegetarian because of ethical considerations 12 years ago.

"I started shopping in stores like this,saved up some money, and decided to open a store," he said.

"I am totally committed to natural foods and live that life.

"But I'm not a campaigner; I don't twist any arms.

"I feel a lot better since I became a vegetarian.

"I have limited health problems, and I feel like my immune system is as good as it has ever been."

"One of the real rewards of the business is seeing people help themselves. It's kind of gratifying."

Gramarossa said that there might be a process of readjusting taste buds when people switch to natural foods.

"You can't try it once and say you don't like it," he said.

"You have to be a little open-minded," agreed Pratt.

But both feel the result is worth it.

"What you put inside you affects how you feel," he said.

"There are enough environmental hazards every day."

He noted that the store carries a non-dairy type chocolate.

"It's cholesterol free," he said.

"A real chocoholic might say it's not chocolate.

"But it's a fairly decent substitute.

"We're a store for alternatives."

Both are originally from New Jersey.

Pratt married a man from Cohasset in 1979 and lived here for a while.

"My brother would come and visit," she said.

"Both my parents and in-laws are in Cohasset now."

Pratt and Gramarossa are always at the store which is open Monday, 9:30 a.m. to 8 p.m., Tuesday to Saturday, 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Parking is available at the rear of the building. Visa and Mastercard area accepted.

A part-time employee, Barbara O'Lendzki, also works two days a week.

So far, business has been good, they said.

"The most fun is the diversity of clientele," said Pratt.

"We enjoy our customers.

"We spend a lot of time with them.

"Smaller stores are able to give personal attention.

"You aren't always able to get that at larger stores."

Pratt noted that there had been a health food store in Cohasset two or three years ago.

"We knew there was a void," she said.

"There's something here for everyone. You don't have to be upwardly mobile (a yuppie) to find something here."

Gramarosso said that some people do their week's shopping at the store, while others just pick up one or two items.

"The clientele makes your inventory," he said.

"We listen to our customers."

They also try to be helpful in explaining products to customers.

"I can talk about general facts, but don't do evaluations," said Gramarosso.

"I'm not a nutritionist. I haven't studied."

Both are glad they made the move to Cohasset.

"I like the old-fashioned flavor of the store," said Pratt, "the country atmosphere.

"There are no UPC codes here."

Gramarosso added, "Cohasset needs a store like this.

"I think we'll do just fine at this location."

Resident says thanks for ecumenical service

To the editor:

Smiles were never more beautiful, promising and prominent than on Oct. 12 when the Commission on Aging and its myriad of cheery volunteers joined to host the elders of the various local communities for the NOW annual ecumenical service.

This year, St. Anthony's beautiful church was the meeting for the services which were light, happy, full of kindly affection. We had an opportunity to join in anthems and to listen to beautiful solos. We were introduced, some of us, to new hymns — all of them inspiring. But one that was new to many of us was "On Eagle's Wings" by Michael Joncas. We also joined in singing the "Prayer of St. Francis" and closed our ecumenical services with "How Great Thou Art."

Kathy Bryanton, Senior Center director, along with others tied this inspiring package together. It took a lot of "doing." We also had an opportunity to see old friends from the various homes in the area — and knowing that they were not forgotten made the day seem more joyous. We also had the opportunity to see, once again, the great volunteers in this town and the contributions they are always making for the benefit of their neighbors — with unstinting generous use of their time.

The Community Center's "Great Hall" was set up with round, individual tables, flower bedecked — and waiting for our arrival. A delicious full course dinner was served and we joined in gratefulness to be together for yet another happy occasion. But as elders we want everyone to know that we are daily conscious of the needs of the young and very young — the homelessness of some and the struggles of others. We are appreciative of the kindliness of friends, mindful always of the despair of others — especially the young who cannot even afford apartments nor homes — the skyrocketing prices of the necessities of living good, healthful lives. We know well that even some of those serving us have griefs of their own.

But this is about "gratitude" and it makes me grateful always — to know that Cohasset without its volunteers — serving in many, many ways — help to keep this a community of beauty and a deep-seated feeling of service.

The Ecumenical Services — held in various towns throughout the areas — are one of the more positive efforts to tie us together — and we ask a special blessing on the Rev. John J. Keohane who insists that he was head of the Committee For Good Weather. Perhaps there is some truth in the old adage, "You need to know someone" after all.

There was music and many of us joined in line dancing and that gave a real party atmosphere — and somehow gave an impression that "older can be fun."

Preparations begin for Village Fair

The pace of preparations has heightened in the past week for those working for the Cohasset Village Fair. This is the town's big ecumenical fund-raiser which will mark its 48th year with activities on and around the Common Saturday, Dec. 3 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Used book offerings for the fair can be left at St. Stephen's Church, 16 Highland Avenue, Monday through Friday, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. A location for leaving articles for the Bargain Bazaar will be announced in the near future.

The Village Fair is an annual joint fund-raising effort by five Cohasset churches: St. Stephen's Episcopal, First Parish Unitarian, Second Congregational, St. Anthony's Roman Catholic and Panagia Greek Orthodox.

Under the system of rotating leadership, St. Stephen's is the host church this year, succeeding to the role that St. Anthony's occupied a year ago. Heading the Central Committee which has overall direction of the effort are Chris Wasson, Sheila Wallingford and Kathy Dennis as a tri-chair.

Already in place are the representatives from the participating churches to this Central Committee as well as chairs of the various features that have stood the test of time as popular favorites of the Fair.

Making up the Central Committee are Donna Blain as representative from St. Stephen's; Lou Simeone and Kathy Brennock from St. Antony's; Linda Campbell and Debbie Anderson from the Second Congregational; Madelaine Olney from First Parish Unitarian; and Kiki Booras, Cindy Dedas and Linda Argeros from the Greek Panagia. James Hooper and John Mullett will serve in the important role of treasurers to advance funds for preparations, and provide change and collect receipts on the day of the Fair.

This 48th "running" of the historic Fair will include all the successful features of the past, with principal attention on Christmas gifts and decorations. A major focal point will be the boutique in the town hall, matched by the sale of wreaths and swags. Other attractions will, as usual, include a Children's corner, secret room for shopping by youngsters, Santa, plants, books, baked goods and candy, popcorn, cheese, a chowder bar, grabs, snack bar, general and special raffles, children's activities, and the Village Fair dinner. Behind the visible scenes of the fair in the various buildings around the Common will be the hard-working support staff that provides procurement, transportation and clean-up.

Gourmet Guild meeting

The Scituate Gourmet-Decorating Guild will meet Tuesday, November 8 at 8 p.m. at the First Trinitarian Congregational Church on Country Way in Scituate.

The meeting is entitled "Tisket A Tasket." The committee members, who participated in a workshop, will display and explain how baskets and bows can be used creatively for decorating and gift giving.

Librarians look to future budget needs

The school librarians last week outlined improvements being made to the libraries, but they called for an increase in their budget for the purchase of more up-to-date materials.

Deer Hill School librarian Marge Murphy told the school committee that much of the money from this year's book budget went toward the purchase of books about Africa. "We were still in the Congo," she said, referring to the out-of-date reference materials which were replaced this year.

Murphy said any outdated and inappropriate texts are being removed from the library.

But head librarian Susan McFadd said the greatest need in all three libraries is more money in the annual book budget. "Above the PSO and the school budget, we have a great need for new books and repair of existing materials," she explained. The greatest need is at the Osgood School library.

Murhy noted that a new encyclopedia set was purchased for the Deer Hill library this year. The oldest encyclopedias in the classrooms have been taken away, and the older library editions have been distributed into the classrooms. "We're not wasteful in what we get," she said.

The Deer Hill librarian also explained the automation program which she iniatiated this year with a grant the school received. Murphy has spent several months cataloguing the library books and materials into a computer for the students' use. She is attempting to catalog each book by section into the system, and is currently working on the biographies.

McFadd said she would like to see the high school library computerized in the future. It would provide data base training for students who will have to utilize a similar system in college, she noted.

The most expensive purchases in the high school library are in the reference section where the cost of materials is "out of sight," she said. A new 20-set collection of reference books recently cost the library $1,600, McFadd said, adding that this price was $500 less than she originally anticipated. "It was well worth the cost," she said. "The average reference book today costs between $80 and $100."

After presenting a video tape of students and teachers using the school libraries, John Blanchard, head of the school's audio-visual department, talked about the school's cable television equipment. He stressed the need to continue to replace video equipment on a seven-year plan which has been initiated. He also noted that although there is a cable studio within the high school, a lack of staffing has prevented the school from cable casting productions from there.

Blanchard also re-emphasied the need to computerize a complete list of school equipment. Such a list would enable teachers from K through the 12th grade to know exactly what equipment is available for their use in the classrooms.

Spensley director cited by Vo-tech

Service Director Paul Milone was named Spensley Chevrolet Outstanding Alumni at Quincy Vocational Technical School.

Milone graduated from the vocational school in 1966 and credits his achievement, and his personal and professional growth to the occupational training and education he received from Quincy Voc-Tech. Milone, who has worked in Cohasset for five years, received an award last week from the Massachusetts Department of Education, Division of Occupational Education, in recognition of his achievements.

Milone, who has been in the auto mechanic trade for 26 years, insists that the basic foundation of knowledge and information he received from his teachers in Quincy have been instrumental to his success. "This is true," he said, "even though in our business there has been a 200 degree change, and everything keeps changing as more and more technology is introduced," he said, "necessitating that each month we send our technicians for updating to General Motors school."

A senseless, cruel murder

When 71-year-old George* went out one night to check on his neighborhood hardware store, his wife didn't think much about it.

But when he didn't return by midnight, his worried wife called the police to check on him.

The patrolman found George in a pool of blood on the floor of the hardware store, an unarmed, elderly gentleman bludgeoned to death by being struck in the head 17 times with a claw hammer. George's wallet was missing and the dial had been knocked off the safe.

The next day, a local dry cleaner notified police that a bloody sweater had been dropped off. Police arrested a 24-year-old man for armed robbery and murder.

The young man, who had recently been released from jail for a previous breaking and entering, was convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment without parole.

That might be the end of the story, except that the young man applied for a Governor's commutation of his sentence so that he would be eligible for parole. The pardons board recommended clemency.

The victim's son was "absolutely opposed." His grandson found the situation "insensitive and offensive" to the family. The district attorney called the crime a "senseless, cruel murder" of an outstanding citizen. And the victim's wife called the recommendation a "travesty of justice."

When the case came before the Governor's Council for a vote, your councillor called the killing a senseless, vicious act.

He pointed out that the victim had been brutally murdered by a young man one-third his age.

He noted that the younger, stronger man could certainly have taken the older man's money, without taking his life.

And he argued that bludgeoning an elderly gentleman 17 times with a claw hammer, crushing his skull, deserved no clemency.

Your councillor voted no to commutation.

Your councillor is Peter Eleey. We hope you'll remember that when you go to vote November 8.

* The name has been changed out of respect for the victim's family.

voting against any new taxes and fees. "And I will continue to as long as I am in the legislature," she said. The incumbent said rather than forming a new state agency, the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority, the governor should have demanded that the MDC give priority to the Boston Harbor cleanup.

When asked if she felt the MWRA was a "six billion dollar waste of money," Rep. Murray replied, "I'm saying the cleanup could have been done for less money if the commissioner had been told to clean up the harbor as his first priority. Originally there were to be 600 employees and now there are 1,600. Now we're going for more studies - hopefully this will get off the ground."

Silva noted that he supported the formation of the MWRA, but there are recent events, including $700,000 in pay raises, that he would oppose.

In her closing statement, Rep. Murray said she has obtained millions of dollars for her district, including money for road improvements and dredging in the three towns.

"A special area is the elderly," she stated. "they have done us a great service by paying for public education. They need special consideration."

Rep. Murray praised her constituent work, saying that is "ninety percent of a legislator's job."

Silva noted that in his six weeks of campaigning door-to-door, he has found that people are most concerned with the environment, the quality of public education, transportation and affordable housing.

Opposing the incumbent's pledge to stay away from local issues, Silva said the state representative "is a local representative. Local issues should be his or her issues. " He cited the fight which he led on the South Shore against the MWRA to locate an outfall pipe 2.5 miles off Hull.

"It's time for a leader who does get involved," he said. "As a state representative, I would get involved on a grassroots level, as I have as a chairman of the selectmen and as chairman of the South Shore Coalition."

IT'S A FACT
Chiropractic Can Help
Chiropractors have a very special education and training in treating nerve-related health problems caused by spinal misalignment. Chiropractors find the areas along the spinal column where nerves may be "pinched" by a spinal vertebra. After finding the problem, the chiropractor manipulates the misaligned vertebra back toward normal. This restores normal nerve supply and function. The result is that the body heals itself with no drugs, surgery or continued discomfort.

Art center joins with ARC to help young artists

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

A new program introduces the imaginative world of art into the lives of some eager young artists.

The visiting artist program, sponsored by the South Shore Association for Retarded Citizens, has linked developmentally disabled youth with the world of fine arts. It is accomplished through the cooperation of the South Shore Art Center, and some distinguished local artists.

Irene Volpe is recreational coordinator for South Shore ARC. It was her belief that developmentally disabled youngsters, children who perhaps can not participate in sports or other activities, may find relaxation and solace in creating quiet artwork among their peers.

"The social aspect of this class at the art center is also important for many of these youngsters," she added.

The artists who teach these courses must also be able to deal with the youngsters - to communicate their ideas to their students. Irene made a list of artists who are willing and quite able to teach a small class of young artists in a workshop-type setting.

Nancy Connolly, a familar face at the South Shore Art Center, just completed a three-day workshop with three students. Although she originally planned to complete a banner, the small class size prevented such a project. Rather, she decided to introduce the students to various art materials, including crayon, paints and cray pas as they mixed them into their individual collages.

Connolly has taught the developmentally disabled in the Cohasset schools through grants funded by the Arts Lottery Council.

During this workshop, she has been explaining to Peter Plante, 13, and Jay Nothnagle, 14, what shapes and colors can be mixed toegther to form a collage drawing. Jay was able to work on his own on an intricate and precise drawing of a skyscraper.

With much attention to detail, Jay drew the windows that reached the top of the structure. It was, he said, a rendering of the place in Boston where his father works. He needed little encouragement to continue as he continued to finish the drawing.

Peter needs much more individualized attention, Volpe explained. But with Connolly at his side, Peter was selecting his own crayons and the shapes of his material to create an interesting montage of color.

SSARC recreation coordinator Irene Volpe watches the technique of teacher Nancy Connolly and her student, Peter Plante.

All the artwork, Connolly explained, will be exhibited during the art center's open house in January.

The collaboration between the art center and South Shore ARC began last winter. This workshop, Volpe noted, is their third venture. The first was a mini course in dance and movement, and the second workshop was mask-making with Syma.

"Those two programs took place in Norwell," Volpe explained. "This is our first program at the art center. We figure this is a natural relationship, since South Shore ARC covers the same towns as the art center with its satellite centers.

"This collaboration will allow us to hold workshops in many other towns."

According to Volpe, the art center education dierctor, Linda Keating, had been anxious to establish a special needs art class at the center. And since Connolly, an art center teacher, also had experience in the Cohasset school system, it seemed to be a perfect fit, Volpe said.

She found the art center artists "very open"- a perfect way to communicate to and motivate the disabled, Volpe noted. "I found that most professional artists are very open, very positive people, and that is just right for this type of classroom."

"We have the tools to help Nancy with the class. We have the kids and the art center has the space," Volpe stated, although she is somewhat disappointed with the small number of kids who have attended the workshops.

"Perhaps it's just because it's a new idea," she said. "Perhaps some parents can't understand how their developmentally disabled child can do well in an art class. But it's very possible. It's a time for them to relax and to be creative - they don't always have that opportunity."

There are many reasons behind the art workshops, she explained. "It's a time to have people who have not explored their creative skills to have that opportunity. It opens new doors to them. It actually may fill a gap in the educational opportunties available for them. It's therapeutic for them to be doing something different."

South Shore ARC plans to sponsor these art workshops every fall, winter and spring - with a different theme for each session. Their intention is to keep the cost of the classes low, and they are pursuing various grants for that purpose.

"We'd love to see six to eight students here," she said while observing the small classroom one evening this week. "We can focus on all ages, but generally it's the teenagers who are interested."

Recreation activity for the developmentally disabled is a relatively new concept, Volpe explained. "Some more moderately disabled actually lead full lives, and they may not have time for a lot of leisure activities. So I'm focusing more on the younger kids and the more severely disabled. It's harder to get them here, but it's a real underserved group. We'll do anything to get them here."

Smoking policy at Vo-tech may need 'stronger teeth'

By Patricia Masterson
Mariner correspondent

Disciplinary measures are not deterring student smokers at the South Shore VoTech Regional High School, and both students and administrators are concerned that the problem will escalate if something is not done.

Smoking is not allowed in the school building, but students break the law and smoke in areas, such as lavatories, according to students.

School committee members heard from Crystal Fusco, student representative of the committee, last week.

"It is a health hazard, and it is breaking the law," said Fusco. "We can't walk into the bathroom because there is so much smoke. We are looking for your advice and for you to give a message to the Student Council."

The committee voted to write the Student Council a letter endorsing Fusco's message. The committee will remind the council that they do not endorse smoking on the premises just as they do not condone drugs, alcohol or firearms. Penalties are stated in the student handbook. Carrying smoking materials is also punishable.

Superintendent Clifford Easton said suspending students has not curtailed the problem.

"The policies in the student handbook are adequate, but maybe there needs to be additional teeth in them," said Easton. "We do not have the personnel to monitor the bathrooms, and the curtailment issue is a personnel issue.

"This is also a rebellion issue, as a matter of beating the rules," he said. "We need more surveillance. When you raise the level of concern, you more likely increase compliance.

"When you are on the highway and see a police car, you take your foot off of the gas pedal," said Easton. "It is the level of proximity to the law."

Corridor and bathroom monitoring is done during lunch hours, but there are not enough teachers during classroom hours. Easton said that physical education teachers will be teaching indoors soon, and they will act as additional monitors.

"Another aspect of this is that it is an addiction," said Dr. Leonard Cody, Director of Guidance, who calls himself an inactive smoker. "They are smoking because they have to smoke.

"More and more, we're being told as educators that we're not only responsible for student education but for moral upbringing," he said.

Easton said he tries to instill in students the idea that if they break the rules and regulations now, they will break the rules and regulations later in life.

Drama workshop fall productions

October 28 and 29 the Cohasset Drama Workshop will present its first production of the 1988-1989 season.

Something old and something new will make up an evening of one-act plays as the Workshop presents the classic thriller "Sorry, Wrong Number" and the recently published "Pals."

Featured in "Sorry, Wrong Number" as the neurotic invalid who overhears a murder plot is senior Allison Reilly. Her only link with the world outside her room is the telephone. Portraying the various people she encounters via this instrument are seniors Erin Monaghan and Jay Staunton, juniors Jason Cameron and Pam Haase, sophomores J. Gaston, Doug Moe, Jen Plante and Patty Tolini; and freshman Lynda Hague.

The more recently published "Pals" won the Maine drama competition a few years ago. It deals frankly, yet entertainingly, with serious issues. Featured in the cast are senior Jack Beddows and juniors Liz Buckley and Zach Hochkeppel.

Both plays are being directed by Ron Emmons, Cohasset High School Director of Dramatic Arts.

They will be performed at 8 p.m., Friday and Saturday, Oct. 28 and 29 at the CHS auditorium. Tickets are $3 in advance; $4 at the door.

"Sorry, Wrong Number," revolves around the bedridden Allison Reilly and telephone operators: (l to r) Pam Haase, Lynda Hague and Patty Tolini.

Cohasset recreation programs

The Cohasset Recreation Commission extends its thanks to Paul Laugelle, Tree and Park Supt., for cleaning out Elm's Meadow for us again this year.

Laugelle volunteered his time to scrape the vegetation from the meadow in preparation for flooding the area with water for safe, lighted ice skaing this winter. We owe Paul a debt of gratitude for his time and efforts on our behalf.

DOG OBEDIENCE TRAINING

The next session scheduled for Dog Obedience Training will begin early January 1989. Registration notices will be posted during early December, 1988. Classes are held at the G.A.R. Hall in Scituate, and are offered to both beginners and intermediate/advanced groups. Each session is eight weeks, and cost is $25 with checks made payable to the 'Town of Cohasset.' The Cohasset Recreation Department is planning to conduct the Blue Hills Ski lessons again this winter. Classes, which are five weeks begin Thursday, Jan. 5, 1989. Watch for more information in early November. Registration will be in November. Bus transportation to and from Blue Hills will be provided.

BASKETBALL REGISTRATIONS

The Cohasset Recreation-Boosters basketball registration will be held during November. The program is open to all Cohasset boys and girls grades 2 through 9. The program is sponsored by the Cohasset Boosters Club and Cohasset Recreation Department.

RECREATION PROGRAMMING SURVEY

There will be a program survey coming home shortly, that is designed to isolate and identify the recreational needs of children and youth. Take a few minutes to complete and return the survey. It will provide data for the Cohasset Recreation Commission so it can best serve you and your family's leisure needs. You may use the back of the survey to write in any comments, because each survey returned will be individually read.

The department is interested in knowing your feelings about after school sport/games programs for children, primarily in grades K through 6. The department would like to get a better idea of exactly what type of programs are in demand, which days and times are best to conduct the programs, and at which facilities.

There are many programs that are under consideration most of which fall into one of two categories; passive recreation or active recreation. Passive programs only require supervision, such as 'open gym'. Active programs require a higher degree of structure, and usually include the teaching of specific skill, such as creative dramatics. We would like your input, generally and specifically, regarding types of programs and their structures.

Teens wants treats for homeless

"It will be up to the kids if they want to collect candy for themselves, too," he added.

"It's a town-wide project. All the churches in town have been planning it."

The most active churches have been Second Congregational, First Parish, St. Anthony's and St. Stephen's, he said.

The church planning group has been meeting once a month since last December, according to Rev. Ritts.

The group has been talking about hiring a part-time, town-wide youth director, he said. Each church would contribute toward the salary.

Activities held by the group so far have included a trip to Riverside Park, Agawam, and an ice cream "eat."

"We're trying to do things once a quarter," said Rev. Ritts, "to get all the youth groups in town involved, not just the churches, but the schools, too."

A car wash was also held last spring.

"We raised $120 for Project Shelter with the car wash," said Graham.

He explained that he became interested in helping Project Shelter last year after hearing a speaker from that organization.

"The speaker gave the facts on Project Shelter and a lot of kids became interested," said Graham.

He and seven of his friends will be among those involved in the Halloween event.

"Some will wear costumes to get more into it," he said.

Graham wrote the flyer for the event which was mailed to over 80 Cohasset youths.

He had a friend, Dudley Bryant, draw a comic strip on the flyer.

"The comic strip is about a man who goes out for trick or treating," explained Graham. "At the end, it turns out he's not wearing a costume.

He said he hopes the event will get a good reception.

"We hope we can make a difference," said Graham.

Spooky stories from Osgood students

GHOST STORY

The ghost is named Leatherneck. He had a pocket knife and a M-16 machine gun. He was out on a Halloween night. Leatherneck jumped out of the bushes and saw Rambo and Mean Green Fighting Machine with their weapons and mean faces. They stole a goody-bag. They stole five goody-bags. The next morning, they ate all the candy up.

GHOST STORY

I am a ghost. My name is Willy. I would like to play with my friend. Her name is Witchie. I would like to play with my other friend. His name is Bite, he is a vampire. We will play bobbing for spiders. You get spiders down your throat. Witchie got a black spider down her throat. Bite almost got one down his throat, but he pulled it out of his mouth. Then, we went and bought some pumpkins. We made scary faces on the pumpkins. We took the spiders that were in the pan and we put them in the pumpkins. We put fake blood over them. We showed our mothers and they freaked out. We put the pumpkins out until we came back from dinner. When we came back from dinner, the spiders had made a spider web from the blood. Then, we dumped the spider webs out of the pumpkins and put lights in the pumpkins. We put the pumpkins next to the door, so everybody could look at them.

GHOST STORY

I was going trick or treating by myself. I went to the house beside my house. Something made a noise. I went in to see what it was. A ghost! He chased me to my house. He made a mess. He scared my sister, and me, and my mom, and my dad, my brothers. Then, the ghost went away and died. Then, we had a nice life. The end.

GHOST STORY

My ghost's name is Magic. Magic was going outside to scare some people. He scared 200 people. He went home to his mom. He was excited. His mom was proud of him. His dad was proud of him, too. Next Halloween, I'm going to do it again. I'm a real ghost who scares people. Boo Whoo!!!

GHOST STORY

The ghost went in a haunted house and found a broom that is magic. That was the witch's broom. The ghost took the magic broom to his house. The witch said, "Where is my broom?" The witch went to the ghost's house and said, "Do you have my broom?" The ghost lied, "No, I do not have your broom." So, the witch went to Frankie's house and said, "Do you have my broom?" Frankie said, "Go to the ghost's house, because the ghost has your broom." Then, the witch went back to the ghost's house. The witch said, "You lied. That's my broom." The ghost gave her the broom back and they had tea together.

GHOST STORY

The ghost went to the pumpkin house. He saw a lot of pumpkins and blueberry pies. The ghost put a pumpkin in his bag. The ghost left the house and went to the witch's house. He said, "Trick or treat." the witch laughed. The ghost got angry. The witch went downstairs to throw the pumpkins outside. The witch threw the ghost's pumpkin outside. The ghost looked in the bag and said, "Where is my pumpkin?" The ghost left and found a new pumpkin. He put it in his bag and said, "Here is my pumpkin." The ghost went back to his home. The ghost called the witch. The witch asked, "What do you want?" The ghost said, "You stole my pumpkin." The ghost got angry. The witch said, "I will give your pumpkin back." The ghost and the witch became friends.

GHOST STORY

Once upon a time, a ghost lived in a house that was dreary. The house that was dreary was all broken. The ghost liked his ghost pet cat. The ghost and his cat haunt people's houses and haunt them. They like to say, "oo—oo—oo," and jump out on them. The cat meows to scare people. When they are done, they go back to their house.

Arts Boosters open new season

The Cohasset Arts Boosters Club held its annual organizational meeting recently at the South Shore Art Center to plan support for the arts at Cohasset Junior/Senior High School for the 1988-89 academic year.

Chairmen to assist teachers with each scheduled event were named and officers were elected: President, Sue McNamara; Vice-President, Karin Bartow; Secretary, Carole Proodian; Treasurer, Carol Martin.

Following the meeting the Arts Boosters hosted their annual tea to honor Cohasset High School teachers of the arts, including Ginny Burbank, Ron Emmons, Colleen Foley, Colleen Lucas, Bryan Marks, and Jo-Ellen Wood. Art Center Director Lancie Valentine and Art Center Education Director Linda Keating explored cooperation between the Art Center and the schools for promoting, exhibiting and teaching the arts.

Teachers enthusiastically described the two new high school courses, WAM, Writing with Art and Music, taught by Ginny Burbank, and History of Art and Music, with team teachers Colleen Foley and Collen Lucas. Parents quickly asked permission to audit!

Please mark your calendars with the 1988-89 arts events, beginning October 28-29 with the Drama Workshop's fall production, "Sorry, Wrong number" and "Pals" at 8 p.m. in the high school auditorium. Teachers and students alike are working hard on their productions, and if past performances are any indication, they will provide excellent entertainment for community audiences all year.

Crucial to their success is community support, as audiences and as patrons of the arts. The Cohasset Arts Boosters Club recently mailed its annual fund-raising letter to all Junior/Senior High School parents and to business patrons requesting financial support to assist Drama Workshops, Literary and Arts Magaznies, Junior/Senior Chorus, Show Choir, Barbershop, Jazz Ensemble and to fund scholarships and the acquisition of necessary equipment.

Please consider becoming a patron of the arts and send your tax deductible contribution, payable to Cohasset Arts Boosters Club, to Carole Proodian, 25 No. Main St., Cohasset.

If you wish further information or would like to work with the Arts Boosters, please call Sue McNamara, 383-6954.

Wildlife trust

The Orenda Wildlife Trust was established in 1986 for the purpose of helping and protecting wildlife. OWT has three goals: rehabilitation, sanctuary and education.

The rehabilitation program consists of carefully trained, licensed volunteers who care for sick, injured and orphaned wildlife in their homes. Many of these people have been assisting distressed wildlife for years as individuals, but under Orenda, they have been able to form a rehabilitation network to share their knowledge and resources as well as to provide a 24 hour hotline for anyone seeking information on wildlife. They have found that with organization comes greater efficiency and specialization, which in turn affords the animals the best possible care.

Working with wildlife is a commitment. Orphaned mammals need to be fed every 2 hours day and night, while baby birds require daytime feedings of 15 minute intervals. So that the volunteers are not overburdened, oftentimes they will specialize in certain species ranging from pigeons to raccoons. If an animal or bird is sick or severely injured and requires medical treatment, the rehabbers work with the veterinarians in the community until the animal is strong enough to recuperate at home. The rehabbers efforts are currently focused on the South Shore and Cape Cod.

For more information on the organization, please call the administrative office in West Barnstable at 362-4798 or the OWT Hotline at 826-5834. The address is: Orenda Wildlife Trust, P. O. Box 669, 1000 Main St., West Barnstable, MA 02668.

High school honors its artistic achievers

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

"Very often its the sports heroes who get all the attention," said Colleen Lucas, Cohasset Jr./Sr. High School art teacher.

"This is a chance to take artists and show them off," said Lucas, who has instituted a Student Artist of the Month program.

The student who is selected presents a display of his or her work near the art classrooms.

September's student of the month, Melissa Nothnagle, 17, presented a display of paintings, sculpture and handmade paper, according to Lucas.

This month's artist is Susannah Lean, 17, with a display on printmaking.

November's student artist will be Alexandra Redfield, 17, who will display silk screens, drawings and collage, said Lucas.

"Susie and Ali are thinking about studying art," she said. "They're putting together their portfolios.

"Not all the students are going to art school, but they'll have portfolios."

Lucas, an art teacher at the school for four years, feels there is a real need for such a program.

"We wanted to create a niche where artists could get recognition," she said.

Response has been good, she said.

"You'll hear other students say, 'I didn't know so and so was such a good artist.'

"Apparently, this is an area where kids are not getting recognition.

"Kids enjoy having positive labels, there is always room for that.

"Students can be the best examples; student peers really make an impact.

"A living, breathing person can relate to another student as a role model."

The 10 students who will be selected as students of the month this year will also learn discipline in presenting themselves as artists, according to Lucas.

"In a way, they are creating an art gallery of their work," she said, "they are learning how to catch people's eye and reflect something about themselves."

The students chosen as artists of the month are announced over the school's public address system, and will be the subject of an article in the school's Living Arts News due out around Thanksgiving, according to Lucas.

The News also includes stories about music, industrial arts and home economics, Lucas explained.

So far, Lucas has made the selections for student artist of the month. But in the future, she may ask art club members for recommendations.

Melissa Nothnagle, Susannah Lean, and Alexandra Redfield are among the honored artists of the month at Cohasset High School. (Nancy McLaughlin photo)

Criteria for selection varies, she explained.

"It could be an excellent artist, or it could be someone who has made incredible strides in what they are doing," said Lucas.

Being the best artist in the school won't necessarily guarantee selection, Lucas said.

"How hard someone is trying, their commitment to art, willingness to go that extra bit, involvement in art club activities, all would influence selection," she said.

"Being a clone of Rembrandt won't necessarily mean selection."

This is the first time that Lean has had a showing of her art.

"I got a lot of feedback," she said.

Nothnagle said a lot of people commented on her work as well.

"It's a great boost for the kids to get recognition," said Lucas.

"It makes students want to do more.

"For the teachers and students, it's been a real positive experience.

"Not every show is going to be liked by everyone," she noted.

"But that's good.

"The role of art is to create discussion, debate.

"It's good to shake people up."

Lucas feels the displays will naturally differ from month to month.

"Every individual brings a different kind of art," she said.

"It's their chance to present a show that 's all their own," said Lucas

"What are they going to do?

"Helping kids make decisions is part of education—part of art education."

Nursing home cost planning

The Cohasset Community Center is offering an evening seminar which will provide invaluable information on planning and dealing with nursing home costs.

The seminar will be conducted by Michael McNamara, a private investment Counselor, along with several experts in the areas of estate planning and nursing home insurance.

The date and time of the event will be announced.

The subject of paying for nursing home expenses is sobering and, according to Consumer Reports, most people will need nursing home care for themselves or a parent. The House Select Committee on Aging says that over one million middle class people are impoverished because of medical bills, but these people have too much money (at first, anyway) to qualify for welfare assistance when the illnesses first strike. Medicare covers less than 2 percent of nursing home costs. In the Northeast, the average cost of nursing home care runs close to $40,000 per year and the average stay is three years.

This seminar will provide answers to the following questions: Who can afford a nursing home? What does Medicare cover? What does the new "Catastrophic Illness" Health Care Bill approved by Congress cover? Are there ways to insure that the spouse not in a nursing home will have enough money to remain independent of children? Are there ways, under current laws, to protect assets from nursing home liability?

If you have some concerns for yourself or a loved one about nursing home costs, you can't afford to be without the information provided in this seminar.

For information, call the Cohasset Community Center at 383-0088.

Art center volunteers

Do you have an interest in the visual arts? Do you have a few hours a month to volunteer?

If the answer is "yes," the South Shore Art Center needs you and invites you to attend a volunteer orientation meeting on October 26 at 10 a.m.

Learn the ins and outs of gallery exhibitions, the gift shop, membership, data entry, mailings, opening receptions, and others. There is a need to fit anyone's skills. Experience in the visual arts is not a requirement — only an interest in learning and an open mind.

Training and benefits are part of your volunteer commitment as well as a stimulating and congenial work environment.

Call 383-9548 if you would like to participate or for more information. The art center is located at 119 Ripley Road.

'Sugar Babies' rehearse

Cohasset and Hingham residents fill a long line of credits as they rehearse for the November production of "Sugar Babies," to be presented by the Cohasset Dramatic Club.

After more than 20 years, the Dramatic Club will be performing a musical. "Sugar Babies," a recent Broadway success, will be the first play produced by the Dramatic Club in its new Cohasset home - the former Greenhouse Restaurant at 8 Stagecoach Way.

The first South Shore production of "Sugar Babies" will be held November 10,11, 12, 17,18 and 19 at 8 p.m. Tickets are $8 each and are available by calling Barbara weekdays at 749-4800, or by contacting any member of the Dramatic Club.

Sue Delorey and Dianne Flanagan of Hingham have captured two of the eight coveted roles of Sugar Baby, along with Cohasset's Micheelle Massa.

Bill McColgan of Hingham will sing and dance, along with Cohasset's Scott Ketcham, as members of the Gaiety Quartet. Scott is also designing the set for the production.

Ron Massa of Cohasset will portray the amusing Character Man. Julie Olson of Hingham is stage manager for this production. Susan Shellmar and Deidre Merritt, both veterans of St. Paul's musicials, are handling costumes along with Ruth Farrara, a familiar name in the Hingham theatrical circuit.

"Sugar Babies," is a rowsing musical patterned after the old-time original burlesque shows, according to its director Bob Harlow. A former professional ballet dancer with the American Festival Ballet and the Boston Ballet Co., Harlow brings many years of professional experience to the Cohasset Dramatic Club.

The play will be presented cabaret-style, with beer, wine and champagne served before and after the production.

There is plenty of free parking right outside the doors to the Dramatic Club's new home. Seating will be reserved for all performances, so interested patrons are urged to purchase tickets early.

An evening of harmony

The South Shore Men of Harmony, 1988 Division IV Championship Men's Barbershop Chorus, directed by Phil Carter of Hingham, will perform for special needs adults at 8 p.m. Friday, Nov. 4 at Cohasset High School, 143 Pond Street (off Route 3A).

Tickets are $5 adults, $3 students. They will be available at the door, or they may be purchased from Kathy Bryanton, Council on Aging Director at 3 No. Main St. in Cohasset.

Elderly who will need transportation to the show may call Bryanton at 383-9112 daily between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. Refreshments will be available.

The "Evening with the South Shore Men of Harmony" is being held to raise funds to help sponsor an exercise class called "Age of Fitness" for Special Needs Adults.

Featured with the Men of Harmony will be a Cohasset High School Barbershop Quartet of students directed by Bryan Marks, Music Director for the school.

Chorus members live in 28 different towns in Massachusetts with one member each in Bristol, N.H. and Lincoln, R.I. making the South Shore Men of Harmony the largest chorus in Massachusetts with an age span from 16 to 86 in the 100-man chorus.

Any male interested in singing as a hobby is invited to join in The Men of Harmony any Thursday at 8:15 p.m. at the Community Center, 70 South Street in Hingham.

All you need is a love of music and the ability to carry a tune.

Huge yard sale Oct. 29

There will be a gigantic 300-family yard sale Saturday, Oct. 29 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at South Jr. High School, Rte. 228 in Hingham. The sale, featuring a variety of items, is sponsored by the South Junior PTO.

Humane Society sale

Are your garage and attic filled with treasures that you would like to earn money selling? Are you a flea market dealer with items to sell?

Standish Humane Society will hold an indoor flea market Saturday, Nov. 5, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Beal House of the First Parish Unitarian Universalist Church, Route 106, Main Street, Kingston.

Large cafeteria-type tables will be available for rent to individuals and dealers for the very reasonable price of $15 each. If you would like to rent a table, please call Edith Briell at 934-5498.

Having a table at the flea market allows the individual or dealer to earn money and help needy animals at the same time.

Standish Humane Society is an all volunteer organization operating without a shelter. In 1987, Standish placed about 600 pets in new homes and spayed and neutered over 1,000 dogs and cats. Sixteen veterinary hospitals participate in the reduced-cost spay neuter program. Standish is also actively involved in providing veterinary care and placement for pets in area pounds.

Standish helps place these pound dogs and cats through intensive publicity, photographs and adoption days. Proceeds from the flea market will be allocated to the Spay Neuter Fund and Pound Rescue Fund. For more information, call 545-3671 or 545-2808 or write to Box 824, Scituate, 02066.

More than 100 Cohasset, Marshfield, Norwell, and Scituate members of the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, met Wednesday, Oct. 19, at the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset to hear museum instructor Martha Wright speak about Fitz Hugh Lane and Luminism.

An exhibition of paintings by Fitz Hugh Lane, the nineteenth-century marine painter from Gloucester, will be on display at the Museum through December 31.

The talks are sponsored by the museum in appreciation of the support given the institution by its members.

Only members are invited, and since the series is consistently oversubscribed, guests cannot be included. There is a $5 fee for each lecture.

Membership in the Museum begins at $35 for Individual Membership and $45 for Double Membership. New members will be eligible to attend future events to be held this season in the area.

Membership forms may be acquired by calling the Museum of Fine Arts at 267-9300 and requesting the Members' Room.

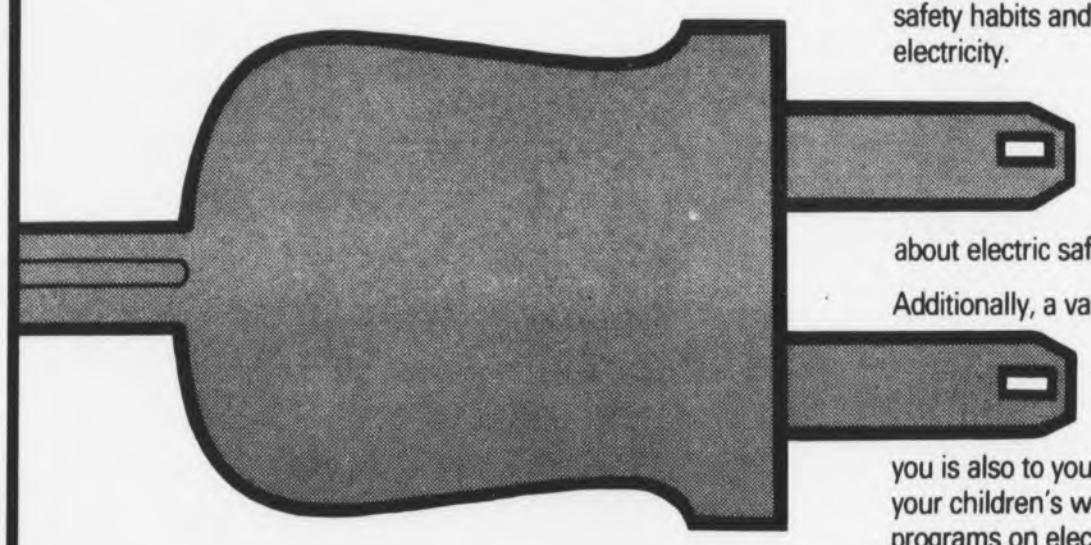
Plug in to Energy Education



At Eastern Edison Company, we take your children's safety seriously. And we want to provide your children with the information they need to protect themselves — so they stay safe.

That's why Eastern Edison works hard providing programs like "Electrical Safety — From A to ZAP" and "Stay Clear, Stay Alive." Such programs are designed to teach your children basic electric safety habits and answer their questions concerning electricity.

In the 1987-88 school year, nearly all third grade children, in the communities we serve, participated in "Electrical Safety —From A to ZAP". This program teaches about electric safety in and around the home.

Additionally, a vast majority of fifth graders took part in "Stay Clear, Stay Alive" which emphasizes electric safety outdoors.

At Eastern Edison, our commitment to you is also to your children. We're determined to contribute to your children's well-being by continuing to provide free programs on electric safety.

To participate, your children should ask their teacher to contact Eastern Edison. For further information on these and other programs, the person to contact is:

Cohasset soccer travels again to state tourney

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

For the fourth consecutive year, the Cohasset High School Boys Soccer Team has captured the South Shore League Small Schools title October 24.

After the Skippers (14-2 overall, 11-1 league) jumped out to a quick 2-0 lead in the first half, Cohasset needed a game-winning goal from junior Jim Reidy with 17 minutes left in the contest to pull out a 3-2 victory over Norwell at Milliken Field. The win also assures Cohasset a higher seed in the Division Three South tournament rankings that are due out next week. Cohasset will be making their fifth trip to the state tourney (the last two years have seen the Skippers end up as state finalists).

"It is nice to win the league all by ourselves, instead of sharing it with Norwell," said the elated coach, Dan Magner, who is often mistaken as one of his players. "With this victory, we evened the score with Norwell. We lost to them the first time around (Norwell, 1-0). Also, this gives us good preparation for the tournament."

Cohasset will have another test this week when they face undefeated Duxbury (11-0-1) at their place. Cohasset has never beaten Duxbury during the years they have been a varsity club.

Cohasset got on the scoreboard early, 1:29 to be exact, when fullback Jim Gallagher drilled a shot past the Norwell goalie from 30 yards out. Reidy set up Gallagher's goal with a nifty drop pass.

The early score seemed to spark Cohasset as they dominated the game. They were beating Norwell to the ball at every opportunity.

At 12:53 of the first half, Reidy connected on his first goal of the game, giving him a total of 22 for the year. A soft kick by Reidy stunned the goalie, who apparently timed his jump prematurely to make the save.

Norwell (9-3-2 overall, 9-2-2 league) closed the gap, 2-1, with a goal at the 25:03 mark. Jim's twin brother, Joel, made the initial save, but the ball bounced off the goal post and rolled in front of the grease where Sean Fogerty simply directed the ball into the wide open net.

"I hit my head against the post. It was one of those freak goals. But my head sure remembers that play because I came down with a headache after that," smiled the junior goalkeeper after explaining the Clippers' tally.

Just as Cohasset did in the first half, Norwell started out as the aggressor in the second half. They moved much better without the ball and their passing had improved dramatically.

The results finally paid off when, during a jam in front of Joel Reidy, Damon Sparrow's header into the far left corner of the net tied the contest at two (1:24 into the half).

From there, both teams exhibited playoff-caliber action. At the seven-minute mark, Norwell almost took the lead when Sparrow, looking at an empty net, blasted a shot that appeared heading into the right corner, but fullback Bill Baird, who positioned himself along the post, steered the ball away with his head.

Cohasset answered with a scoring opportunity themselves, but Ned Chase's pass to a streaking Reidy down the left wing missed the net by inches.

With the overcast sky beginning to show darkness on this chilly October day, Reidy became the beacon of light for the Skippers at the 22:41 mark. Between the Norwell goalie and a defender, Reidy out-jumped the two Norwell players and guided the ball into the net. It was Reidy's second goal of the game but, more importantly, the game-winner became his 23rd tally of the season, breaking the school's record for most goals in a season (previous milestone was held by 1988 graduate Todd Fitzpatrick who had 22 goals in his senior year).

"I was real happy to break the record, but I was more concerned about the game. I didn't want a tie. Norwell is a good team. They beat us early in the season. So, we wanted some revenge. I am glad we held on because the coach pointed out to us that a 2-0 lead is never safe," said the jubilant junior forward.

It may be too early to speculate, but the way this team is playing, a third straight trip to the finals is a real possibility. Let's hope the outcome is different this time around.

Football

Despite a long, sustaining touchdown to start the game and holding Norwell to one play in the first quarter, it just was not enough as the Clippers went on to score 30 unanswered points in a 30-6 league victory over Cohasset (1-5) October 23.

"We played two great quarters—the first and third," said Cohasset football coach Phil Pisano. "We were just victimized by the big play. Norwell is a very solid team."

Quarterback Dave Kaslauskas (four of seven, 70 yards passing) made Norwell's first key play, after Cohasset's tri-captain Paul Froio connected on a two-yard run that completed a 40-yard scoring drive.

When running back Todd Chicko slipped in the backfield, Kaslauskas tucked the ball underneath his arms and then took off on a 41-yard touchdown scamper around the left end, 7-6.

Chicko went 35 yards on a reverse to set up his own two-yard run and James White's conversion rush made it 15-6 at halftime.

From there, Norwell (4-2) pulled away with fourth-quarter touchdown runs from Brian Fish (six yards)

Coalition plans development workshop Oct.29

The South Shore Coalition has organized a workshop on "Planning for Community Growth: the Financial Impacts of Development" to be held from 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 29, at Hanover Town Hall on Route 139.

Staff from the state Department of Revenue's Division of Local Services will discuss revenue and expenditure forecasting, capital improvement planning, assessing expenditure and revenue impacts of growth.

Jane Malme of Hingham who heads the Division of Local Services will talk about strategies for addressing the impacts of growth, such as user charges; issuing debt; override for debt or capital outlay exclusions, impact fees and zoning and land use planning.

Lou Hayward of the Department of Revenue will discuss the financial capacity of the coalition communities, specifically, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell, Rockland, Scituate and Weymouth.

That includes the towns' valuation, levy limits and excess levy; override capacity, growth, reserves; and demographics — population growth and school data.

"This is an important workshop for all local officials and anyone who wants to understand the financial impact on growth," said Jean Christensen, director of the South Shore Coalition.

She said the workshop should help local officials to anticipate better the impacts of growth on municipal budgets by identifying the data needed to estimate the impacts of growth, estimating the capacity of existing services to accommodate growth, estimating growth's impact on capital needs and presenting historical financial information of local communities.

Oaks owners say give us piers, have a house

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

If the town approves a proposal to arrange 109 boat slips around the former Cox estate, the owners may reciprocate by donating the 58-room mansion to the town.

This was the scenario outlined Tuesday night to the conservation commission by the attorney representing The Oaks Realty Trust.

Atty. Paul Feldman told the commission at this third session of a public hearing, that the Oaks owners could pursue conversion of the former Yankee Oil executive offices to condominiums, or they could donate it to the town.

"What we do with the uplands (portion of the property) goes hand in hand with how we are allowed to develop the waterfront," Feldman noted. "(If the waterfront project is approved) it will give the owners the ability to donate it for municipal use."

The former home of the late millionaress Jessie Cox could be used as a town park, library or municipal building, he suggested.

But Feldman warned if the town does not approve plans for a private dock system on the property, "and if we go to war over that, the public use of the upland will not happen. The two things go hand in hand."

Feldman made the public offer after he was asked about the property's perspectus which stated that the property will be developed into condominiums with private docking facilities.

"I don't care what the prospectus says," Feldman answered, saying he had never seen the document. "Oaks Realty told me that we are committed to an alternative upland development other than condominiums." Speaking for the owners, Feldman said they would welcome an opportunity to negotiate the matter with an appropriate town committee.

The owners of the former Cox estate have filed a notice of intent with the conservation commission to construct 109 private boat slips around the perimeter of the property. In order to accomplish that, the owners will have to dredge a considerable amount of land where the tennis courts and garage are now located.

In return for the private dock spaces, the Oaks Realty Trust will donate 48 new slips to the town, including four spider docks near Cohasset Yacht Club, 30 slips off Lawrence Wharf and six slips from the public access point off Margin Street.

At the second session of the commission's public hearing held last month, town counsel

More than 200 new voters will cast their ballots in Tuesday's election

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

Cohasset Town Clerk Frances Marks won't be surprised if voter turnout for the Nov. 8 election matches the 82 percent of the presidential election in 1984 — the highest turnout she can recall.

"There is going to be a very heavy turnout," said Marks, who has been town clerk for five years and assistant town clerk for 13 years.

"There has been a heavy request for absentee ballots so far," she said.

In fact, said Marks, absentee ballots alone should surpass the 7.8 percent voter turnout for the primary election in September.

"You always get a high voter turnout for presidential elections," she said.

Marks said she does not feel there is more interest in the campaign because a native son, Gov. Michael Dukakis, is running against vice president George Bush.

"I'm not getting those vibes," she said.

"The people in Cohasset are very concerned. They feel this is their duty and obligation to vote."

The town clerk's office has been preparing for the last month or two for the election which will cost the town about $1,500 for election workers, according to Marks.

The 16 workers, chosen by selectmen last spring, are equally split among Republicans and Democrats, and include two independents, she said. They will work while the polls are open, 7 a.m. to 8 p.m., then until the results are in.

"That should be no later than 9:30 p.m. if everything goes good," said Marks, "and maybe before."

The town's 50 punch card voting machines for two precincts will be set up in the old town hall auditorium, she said.

"We'll have a demonstration table for people new to town," said Marks.

"It can also help other people because they don't do it (vote) that often, so they do forget."

The heaviest times at the polls tend to be when they open at 7 a.m., at lunchtime, and then from 5 p.m. on, according to Marks.

"We've never had any big lines," she said, "but with the ballot questions you never know."

Minot's Light replica restored for Hull museum

Sunday's presentation of a three-foot replica of Minot's Light to the Hull Lifesaving Museum was the result of a nearly year-long collaboration between two historical groups struggling to preserve part of the past.

It was, according to Judy Weirs of Hull, a perfect collaboration.

In a brief ceremony, members of the Bare Cove Fire Museum of Hingham, transported the lighthouse on one of its antique vehicles — a 1935 Ahrens Fox — from their museum to the former U.S. Coast Guard Lifesaving Station in Hull.

The lighthouse model was used extensively on the lecture circuit by famed author and lecturer, the late Edward Rowe Snow.

His widow, Anna Myrle Snow of Marshfield, a member of the Lifesaving Museum, thought it would be an appropriate place to keep this curio.

"He would have wanted the lighthouse to be here," she said.

Last January, however, when she donated it to the Hull facility, it was not in top condition.

Paul Bonanno, president of the Bare Cove Fire Museum, read last winter about the replica donated by Mrs. Snow.

"Even though it had nothing to do with firefighting, I really thought it sounded interesting.

"It said that this model had been given to the Hull museum and was in need of some tender loving care.

"It was something I was instantly interested in," he said.

Whether it was a premonition or not, Bonanno said he instinctively knew what the model looked like.

When he arrived at the lifesaving museum, Weirs showed him the replica, and Bonanno was not surprised at its condition.

"The top was destroyed, and there were pieces that were falling apart," he recalled. "I pulled nails and rods out that were inches long."

According to Mrs. Snow, her husband began his

Negotiations lead to new station site

By Jane Lane and David Johnson
Mariner staff

A proposal to relocate the North Scituate commuter rail station site demonstrates the MBTA's willingness to respond to the concerns of the public.

That's what Old Colony Project Manager Stephen Polechronis said this week after plans to relocate the proposed North Scituate station were made public.

The proposal to relocate the station to the former Treasure Chest Advertising building on Country Way evolved after months of discussions and negotiations with local merchants, residents and state and local officials, Polechronis said.

"It certainly demonstrates that we as an organization are interested in what the public is saying - that we are open to ideas and suggestions, and we will provide changes. This is a good example of how the community and the MBTA works together," he added.

Last week, Polechronis outlined a plan which would relocate the North Scituate station from the 4.5 acre site originally planned behind the Anderson Fuel Inc. building. The station site would have required some land taking, including portions of private property.

Neighbors in the Kathy Path and Gridley Bryant Road strongly opposed the original proposal. During the past year, they have met several times with Scituate Selectmen Richard Bowen and Joe Norton, along with Polechronis. The change in

Election day

The polls will open in Cohasset at 7 a.m. Tuesday, Nov. 8. They will close at 8 p.m.

Precinct One and Two voters will cast their ballots at the Town Hall auditorium, Highland Avenue.

Cohasset's week...

Special town meeting

A special town meeting has been scheduled for Monday, Dec. 5, at Cohasset High School.

At their meeting Oct. 31, selectmen said the special town meeting would be held to ratify the firemen's contract which is approaching agreement.

Selectmen are scheduled to meet with the personnel board next week to discuss it.

Residents may also vote whether or not to allow the housing authority to use 8.6 acres of school department land to build 12 units of affordable housing.

The school committee is taking under advisement the proposal for the land which is adjacent to Evergreen Lane.

"The school land has to be transferred to us, then it can go to town meeting," explained selectman chairman Burt Pratt.

Board members noted that the housing authority could lose over $1 million in grant money if progress is not made in providing affordable housing.

"If we don't come up with a site, we won't get the grant," said housing authority executive director Barbara Clain after the meeting.

She said the authority has already received a planning grant of less than $10,000.

The grant for over a million dollars would be for the actual construction, Clain said.

Selectmen said they will keep the warrant for the special town meeting open until Nov. 8.

New firefighter

Selectmen voted unanimously Monday night, Oct. 31, to appoint James F. Curley, 29, of Norfolk Lane, Cohasset, as a firefighter with the Cohasset Fire Department at a salary of $19,702 a year.

Curley will start toward the end of the month, according to Fire Chief Daniel Brock.

For the last 10 years, Curley has been employed by the Cohasset Highway Department. He started as laborer/-truck driver and had been a heavy equipment operator.

He has also been a call firefighter for the town for 10 years.

"My knowledge of the town, its roads and hydrants, and most important its people will be a benefit to those who would require my assistance and services," said Curley in a letter to selectmen.

Curley was among three Cohasset men interviewed for the job Monday night. The other were Michael J. Polito of Lambert's Lane and Edgar Dawe of Elm St.

Curley was recommended by Chief Brock.

"He's a good man," said Brock.

The fire chief told each candidate that if selected, they would have to complete an emergency medical technician course during the first year and would be prohibited from smoking according to a new state law.

He also said the appointment is contingent upon a strength and agility test, medical exam, and routine police background check.

Crystal Woods comments

The Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency is soliciting comments from the community for the proposed Crystal Woods development in Cohasset.

According to MHFA associate director Edward T. Calnan, the agency has received a site evaluation application for the development.

"To make this review as complete as possible, we are soliciting comments from the community regarding this project," stated Calnan in the Oct. 25 letter.

He said the comments should focus on the level of contact that the developer has had with the community to explain or negotiate details of the development, and detailed information about the development.

"Please address your comments to Tom Gleason of my staff within 30 days of the date of this letter," Calnan said.

"Once these comments have been received, or this date has passed, we will issue our decision as to the acceptability of the site and the general consistency of this development with the guidelines of the HOP program."

The MHFA is located at 50 Milk St., Boston, Ma., 02109.

Special needs meeting

Cohasset Public Schools is preparing its Annual Special Needs Plan.

Any interested parents are invited to attend a meeting on Thursday, Nov. 17, at 7 p.m. in the Superintendent's Office at which time the plan will be discussed.

Interested participants should call the Superintendent's office at 383-6111.

Notice to Cohasset taxpayers

The first-half fiscal 1989 tax bills were mailed Oct. 28. This payment must be received in the collector's office on or before Monday, Nov. 28 at 4:30 p.m.

For any payments received after Nov. 28, interest will be computed at 14 percent from October 28. A number of property tax bills have been returned to the tax collector's office because of improper mailing addresses. Any property owner who has not received a tax bill should contact the collector's office at the town hall, 383-0611.

Failure to receive a tax bill does not waive payment of the tax and does not excuse the homeowner from interest charges on payments received after the due date.

The town hall hours are Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.; Thursday, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., 5:30 p.m. to 8 p.m.; Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

'Beware bogus fitness center

Hingham residents and commuter boat parkers have recently been barraged by leaflets, mailers, and newspaper ads announcing that a pro-fitness and raquetball center would soon open in the Hingham Shipyard.

The promotion states that the first 150 respondents would receive a 60 percent discount on a membership. Interested parties were requested to call Jonathan Davey at a 262 telephone number.

According to Paul Neelon, developer of the Hingham Shipyard, "this is false advertising in the truest sense of the term." Neelon says there never have been any negotiations between the Hingham Shipyard management and Davey, nor is there space available now for a fitness center.

The false advertising program has been reported to the Hingham Police and the Plymouth County Better Business Bureau.

Bank's net income increases

Cohasset Savings Bank (NASDAQ:CHTB) reported net income of $260,000, or $.26 per share, for the third quarter ending Sept. 30, 1988, representing a 32.0 percent increase over results for the quarter ended 1987.

The net income for the nine months ended Sept. 30, 1988 totaling $584,000, or $.58 per share, an increase of 38.4 percent over the $422,000 earned in the first nine months of 1987. Per share data for 1987 is not presented as the Bank converted to a stock form of ownership in May, 1987.

An increase in loan interest on a loan portfolio that has increased by $6.85 million since the end of 1987 was a factor in the results. Deposits have also increased by $4.8 million in the first nine months of this year.

Net interest income, reflecting the Bank's ability to invest the increased deposits effectively, also continued to improve over 1987. For the three months ended Sept. 30, 1988, net interest income was $599,000, or 8.5 percent higher than the $522,000 reported for the similar 1987 period.

For the first nine months of 1988, net interest income was $1,757,000, compared with $1,422,000 reported for 1987. In the third quarter ending Sept. 30, 1988, the Bank's securities sales netted to a gain of $183,000, as compared to $23,000 in the third quarter of 1987. For the nine months ended Sept. 30, 1988, securities sales accounted for a net gain of $310,000, as compared to a net gain of $79,000 for the same nine months ended in 1987.

Selectmen transfer liquor license

The Cohasset Central Market could reopen by Christmas if all goes well, according to the attorney for the new owner.

Selectmen voted 3-2 Monday night, Oct. 31, to transfer the market's all alcoholic-retail license from James Finucane to J. Kevin McManus of Scituate.

Voting against the license transfer were selectmen Rocco Laugelle and Martha Gjesteby.

Laugelle had earlier made a motion to deny the request after complaining about delays in the transfer. The motion did not carry.

The market at 60 South Main St. has been closed since June 29 when Finucane informed selectmen that renovations and restocking would take place over seven days.

He later requested extensions because he said he was involved with negotiations for the sale of the business.

At this week's meeting, Atty. Edward Lonergan of Cambridge said that McManus runs a catering business, the Borrowed Butler.

Lonergan said his client hopes to enhance the history and tradition of the market.

"We had hoped to have it open by Thanksgiving, but now we might be able to make it by Christmas," he said.

In response to questions by Laugelle, Lonergan said that McManus' two businesses would be kept separate.

"It (Central Market) will be a 100 percent retail market," he said.

"They will be two separate entities," agreed McManus. "There will be no catering at this location."

Laugelle noted the delays and said, "I've had a belly-full of this. As far as I'm concerned, the license is kaput.

"I just knew we were getting the run-around.

"I make a motion that the license be out until they can prove what they are going to do there."

Selectman Cliff Mitman said that the business has a responsible buyer, and the board would be running the risk of interrupting the process.

Atty. Warren Baker, who represented Finucane, said that "everything is purchased and ready to go."

He acknowledged an "initial misunderstanding."

"We worked hard to get a buyer, and Mr. McManus is an excellent candidate," said Baker.

"He can bring the market back to where it should be."

Selectman James Gallagher said, "I think these guys have legit intentions."

"I'd like to see the business in order," said Laugelle. "You can't buy a business contingent on a liquor license."

Resident Robert Davenport noted, "When you buy something like that, a liquor license is worth money."

"I believe this is an opportunity for the market to reopen," said Selectman chairman Burt Pratt.

Laugelle said he was concerned that the market will be a package store.

McManus said that will not be the case.

"We want to restore the market as it was," said McManus.

"It was a central part of the whole community.

"With my expertise in food, we can bring along some specialty items, plus the old style meat, produce.

"We're also thinking about restoring deliveries.

"We want to clean up the market and make it really nice."

Building problems

The planning board was scheduled to discuss the problems Dwyer's Cleaning Spot is experiencing in the efforts to rebuild their Rte. 3A headquarters.

The board was scheduled to meet informally Wednesday night with Robert Dwyer, owner of seven cleaning stores located throughout the South Shore.

An August 5 fire destroyed the Rte. 3A store. Since that time, a temporary shop has been established at the old Stop and Shop store at the Tedeschi Plaza. Damage from the electrical fire was estimated at about $1 million.

Although Cohasset Building Inspector Donald Robbins reviewed the plans for the new cleaning headquarters, he did not notice it included two-and-a-half stories in the front. The former building was only one-and-a-half stories in the front, he said.

Robbins ordered a stop to all construction at the building on October 21. He also directed Dwyer's to discuss the renovation plans with the planning board at its Nov. 2 meeting.

Minot's Light replica to Hull museum . . .

lighthouse lecture tour sometime in the 1930s. However, he didn't bring along mementos and models until the 1940s, she figured.

"I'd guess that this model of Minot's Light was built sometime in the 1930s or '40s," Bonnano agreed.

"I'm pretty familiar with old models — and this is a rough one.

"More modern models are prefabricated and more sophisticated."

Because of the handmade authenticity built into the model, members of the Bare Cove Fire Museum did not want to "modernize" it during the renovation.

The only addition they allowed was the electrification of the legendary 1-4-3 "I Love You" light.

The original Minot's Light was fueled by kerosene and later by gas, but it was modernized by electricity many years ago.

The model's new solid state electrical unit continually flashes the 1-4-3 signal at the press of a button.

Bonanno's brother-in-law, John Chase of Pembroke, added that contemporary touch to the replica.

Other members of the Bare Cove Museum who donated their labor to the project were Victor Bernan and John Vahey, both of Weymouth, Chris Scholtes and Galen Hersey, both of Hingham.

Bonanno figured it took more than 200 hours to complete the restoration. "We never considered the amount of labor," he explained. "It's just something we wanted to do."

And no one is more grateful for that spirit of cooperation than Judy Weirs.

"I think this effort is tremendous," she said. "And I feel there is a deeper connection between the two museums.

"At the lifesaving museum, we're trying to tell the story about rescues at sea.

"The Bare Cove Fire Museum is telling the story about rescues on land.

"We're like twins — trying to tell the same story."

The Hull museum is located in the former lighthouse station overlooking the entrance used many years ago into Boston Harbor.

A second floor room is dedicated to the memory of Edward Rowe Snow, the man who loved to talk about the history and legends of Boston Harbor.

Snow was also known as the "Lighthouse Santa," flying over the lighthouses along the eastern seaboard, dropping packages of gifts to the isolated lighthouse keepers.

He was also an avid admirer of Joshua James, the man who had lived at the lighthouse station and directed its heroic rescue missions.

"He was a wonderful man," Weirs noted. "And Mr. Snow was fascinated with him.

"It's very fitting that we have dedicated a room to Mr. Snow in this house."

His 78-year-old widow continued her husband's lecture series until, she said, her blood pressure started rising.

And now, the lifesaving museum is a fitting place for the model to remain.

"He knew more about Boston Harbor and the lighthouses than I can remember," she added. "This is the perfect place."

And for the Bare Cove Museum members who worked on the restoration of the model, it was a labor of love.

"Our obligation with our museum is to establish credibility within the community.

"And when a person such as Mrs. Snow feels comfortable enough to donate one of her husband's prized possessions to a neighboring museum, we feel an obligation to lend a hand.

"The Hull museum and our museum have the same basic mission — to educate the public and to be a welcomed part of the community," Bonanno explained.

He continued. "If someone feels strongly enough about us to donate grandpa's fire department uniform and badge to our museum, he has to know it will never be mistreated.

"It's the same way with the Hull Lifesaving Museum. They take great pride in what they are accomplishing."

Paul Bonanno (l), president of the Bare Cove Fire Museum, presents the renovated Minot Light replica to members of the Hull Lifesaving Museum, Anna Myrle Snow, widow of Edward Rowe Snow, who owned the replica, and Judy Wiers of the Lifesaving Museum. Richard Cleverly of the Hull Historical Society, also attended the donation ceremonies.

Oaks owners say they will make a swap questioned how the owners could proceed with their plans when a variance negotiated five years ago states the grounds shall be maintained in its current condition.

Feldman answered that question Tuesday night by explaining that because they are abandoning the previous use of the building, they will also be abandoning that variance. He noted that the variance was granted so that Yankee Oil could use the property for executive offices. That use will no longer apply to the new owners' plans, he stated.

"If we abandon that variance - using the property for executive offices, then it is reasonable for the variance contained in the agreement for judgement to disappear," he said, noting that if the new owners wanted to continue to use the property as corporate headquaters, they would be restricted as to any improvements or restorations they planned.

The new owners intend to keep the variance until they receive a permit to convert the property for another purpose, he added. In the meantime, they are obliged to obey the restrictions of that variance.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson, who attended the hearing late Tuesday night, said it would appropriate for the new owners to abandon the restrictions of the variance if they abandon the current use of the building.

Feldman acknowledged that the issue could develop into a "legal battle" if the town resisted the owners' efforts to convert the use of the property from executive offices to residences.

But he and the commission members agreed this hearing will center on the merits of the notice of intent, and not on zoning issues.

It was decided that a fourth session of the commission's public hearing will be scheduled after the owners' consultants submit more technical data. After the information is received, the commission will set a date for a subsequent portion of the hearing.

Among the information the commission has requested is a detailed analysis of the sediment in the proposed dredging area. The owners have agreed to undertake the study, but they are unsure about the time it will take to complete the testing, according to Oaks Realty Trust environmental attorney, Richard Nylen. the commission agreed to postpone another session until that information is submitted.

The commission's engineer, Robert Maki, requested a seasonal quantitative study of the wildlife habitats that may be disturbed by the dredging and construction of the piers.

And commercial lobsterman Herbert Jason warned that a meeting is necessary between the fishermen and the property owners. Under the current proposal, the owners intend to move the commercial lobster cars and fishing vessels to accommodate the public piers. Jason objected to that, saying the owners have never discussed the plan with the local commercial fishermen

Feldman agreed the owners would sit down to personally discuss the plan with the fishermen.

New voters to cast ballots

The questions involve the treatment of farm animals, generation of nuclear power plants in the commonwealth, salary increase for the legislature and wages paid to persons employed in the construction of public works.

Marks said that there are 1,189 registered Republicans in Cohasset, 1,249 Democrats, and 2,759 Independents, for a total of 5,197.

The 1988 census for Cohasset lists 7,311 residents, including children.

As of Oct. 11, there were 252 new registered voters in town, she said.

Election time is always busy, but that was compounded this year because of the move into the town hall addition, she said.

"We moved the last week in September," said Marks, "that was right in the middle of things.

"It makes things a little more difficult.

"I was concerned that the ramp (for the handicapped) might not be ready. But now it is done.

She noted that the ramp is sometimes easier than stairs for the elderly, as well.

Marks said that absentee ballots will be available in the town clerk's office until Monday, Nov. 7 at noon.

Hours in the town clerk's office until then will be Monday to Thursday, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Thursday, 5:30 to 8 p.m., and Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

"The office will be closed in preparation for the election Nov. 7 at noon," she noted.

The absentee ballots are for those who will be out of town on election day, including college students, explained Marks.

Cops and Robbers

When police learned that robbers were planning to hold up the Red Coach Grille, they sent Patrolman Augustine Belmonte and others to stake out the restaurant to catch the crooks.

The robbers turned up as expected, but one grabbed a waitress, waiting outside for a ride home, as a hostage and held a pistol to her head as he dragged her inside, hoping to escape the consequences of his crime.

A shootout with police followed, and when Officer Belmonte wounded the defendant, his cohorts turned on Belmonte and shot him dead. One of the robbers was also killed. While the hostage escaped with her life, Officer Belmonte did not. He was killed in the line of duty, trying to save a life, prevent and robbery, and enforce the law.

A dead robber and a dead cop. But what of the wounded robber? He thought he should go free. After all, he didn't pull the trigger, and was hurt himself in the robbery attempt.

But we've had a rule in criminal justice dating back for hundreds of years. That rule says that when you set out to commit a crime of violence, you have to take the consequences of what might happen. It's called the felony murder rule, and it's intended to make would-be criminals think twice before they victimize others.

So when the robber, who had been armed and masked and ready to commit armed robbery, came before the Governor's Council asking to be relieved of his responsibility for Officer Belmonte's death, Peter Eleey said no.

Other said yes -- in fact, everybody else said yes -- the vote was 6 to 1 in favor, with only Eleey opposed -- and now the robber is back on the streets.

Maybe, as the robber argued at the hearing, he was a drunk, talked into participating in the robbery by an older compatriot; but he hadn't had a drink that night. Maybe he wished he hadn't gone; but he went. Maybe he's sorry; but that doesn't bring Augustine Belmonte back to life, or console his family. He escaped the consequences of his deliberately premeditated criminal conduct, because others would not stand firm.

Peter Eleey did stand firm, a lone voice. We hope you'll remember that when you vote November 8.

Chamber auction to be held Nov. 4

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

"It's a chance to do some Christmas shopping, and it's a nice night out," said Marie Higgins, chairman of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce's auction Friday, Nov. 4, at Kimball's-By-The-Sea.

"We hope to get a lot of people, and there are sure to be bargains," she said.

The event, open to the public and with no admission charge, will begin with a preview at 7 p.m. There will also be a free dinner of hot dogs, baked beans and brown bread.

The auction will start at 8 p.m. with Fran Coffey as auctioneer.

"There will be some great things," said Higgins, who explained that about 50 items have been donated by local merchants and residents.

Among them are a Christmas set of china with service for eight, Christmas wreath, luggage, antiques, dinners at restaurants, a stay at the Marriott, Lisa Bemis watercolor and 18-karat gold pendant with diamond.

"We decided to try something different this year," said Higgins, who explained that the fundraiser is being held instead of "White Christmas" which had been held for the past four years.

That event included Santa Claus, games, toys and pony rides.

"We were disappointed with attendance last year," said Higgins.

"It was too cold for people to enjoy themselves.

"This is like a branch of White Christmas indoors."

A number of door prizes such as gift certificates, cookbooks and Christmas items will be offered during the evening, according to Higgins.

"It should be a fun night.

"I've had a great staff helping me this year."

Committee members are Tanna Kasperowicz, Janet Mahoney, Bob Martin, Dick Straley, chamber president; Valerie King, Dan Leahy, Doris Golden and Francis Coffey.

"The money (from the fundraiser) will go right back into the community," stressed Higgins.

She said that among the activities of the chamber are donating money for an Easter egg hunt and decorating the common with holiday lights.

"It's important to let people know where the money goes," said Higgins.

"This should be an evening of fun," she added.

"I'm kind of excited about it.

"We'll try it out and see if everyone enjoys themselves."

Watercolor workshop in November

Edward Minchin will conduct a three-day watercolor workshop at the South Shore Art Center.

Minchin, watercolorist, comes to the Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset, for a special watercolor workshop November 15, 16, and 18, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Advanced registration is required for this workshop.

His first approach to successful watercolor painting is to do small thumbnail sketches so the artist knows how to capture the subject in the final piece.

His second teaching method is a spontaneous or "grand doodle" approach of taking plain white paper and simply splashing color on it. He then has his students take that paper and turn it in all directions to see what the colors and shapes suggest.

Using this planned approach to painting, Minchin wants to work with his students to establish confidence and know how to tackle a problem. He wants them to develop confidence in their own ideas and to focus on the fun aspect of painting.

For information and registration for this workshop and other educational programs, call the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548. Programs of the Center are supported, in part, by a grant from the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities, a state agency.

It's almost over

Election day is less than a week away.

For many in our community, it signals an end to weeks of busy campaigning - of telephone calls, knocking on doors, licking envelopes and endless volunteer hours in behalf of their candidate.

Next week's election is important on a national scale. The governor of this state is in a dog fight for the presidency of the United States. Not since the early 60's have so many Massachusetts residents been so intimately involved in the outcome of this race.

Those were days of political innocence - when campaigns were not decided by daily media polls, and candidates were not managed by powerful Madison Avenue public relations corporations.

Today, the difference between victory and defeat for a candidate may be decided by whether he or she smiles convincingly, rolls up his shirtsleeves and appears in control, is photogenic, or has an attractive family. The victor, in this media-controlled campaign, may very well not be the best candidate, but the best-managed.

At least on the national level, it is no longer a contest between ideologies, but between appearances and perceptions.

Some of that superficiality may be slipping into state and local elections, but we tend to think we're too smart to swallow it in our own backyard.

The candidates for our state positions, including U.S. Senator, have worked hard and in earnest. Sen. Edward Kennedy, a noted longtime member of the U.S. Senate, is taking very seriously a challenge from newcomer Joseph Malone. The two agreed to a statewide televised debate, and Kennedy has spent a lot of money on television and newspaper advertising.

State Senator William Golden, another local incumbent, has worked hard during this re-election campaign. He accepted various dates for debates against opponent William Robinson of Hull. Sen. Golden knows he cannot slack off simply because he has the experience. People make their choice not only based on past performance, but also on promises for the future.

On a local level, longtime State Representative Mary Jeanette Murray is being challenged by Hull Selectman John Silva. For the past weeks, they have dueled during several debate forums. The public has had ample opportunity to see and listen to the candidates. They are sharply divided on many local issues. Voters should be thankful they have been given a meaningful choice in this race.

So as the campaigning draws to a close, and workers breathe a sigh of long-awaited relief, we have one more task to complete. We must cast our ballot at the polls. A national leader, as well as our local leadership, will be selected by our vote.

November 8 is our day to stand and be counted. Our vote will decide whether the campaign promises, the debate rhetoric and the trendy commercial advertisements have made any difference. After all, in the end it is our ballot that carries the most important message.

Letters

Support nuclear plant shutdown

To the Editor:

I 'm writing in response to Mr. Katzenstein's letter of two weeks ago and to the full-page ads being run in local papers.

Mr. K. says our fossil fuel generators are wearing out and will have to be rebuilt. He neglects to mention that the Yankee Atomic nuclear power plant in Rowe is THE OLDEST plant in the U.S. and was built before current safety standards were developed. Rowe does not meet current N.R.C. safety standards i.e. it could not be built today. Not only does Rowe lack a concrete containment structure, the plant itself is built up on stilts. The plant also is close to the Deerfield river which feeds into the Connecticut river.

Mr. K. talks about health and safety. He states that not one person has died in the U.S. as a result of 33 years of nuclear power. However, a Mass. Dept. of Public Health study states that men living in the towns surrounding the Pilgrim nuclear power plant have a 76% higher than average rate of leukemia. Ask them how they feel about Mr. K.'s statement. Ask the people around Three Mile Island how they feel about it. And you should ask Karen Silkwood, but you can't, she's dead.

Mr. K. talks about waste. Last week the news reported about a boxcar full of radioactive waste items in Colorado that they couldn't get rid of. And by the way, where is all the contaminated clothing and debris produced over 28 years in Rowe, and 16 years in Plymouth? Where is it?

Then Mr. K. suggests to bury the waste in glass and metal caskets and forget about it. He says, ". . . what will happen to the people thousands of years from now should not be of concern." I care more about future generations than that.

Big Businesses and their expensive t.v., radio, and newspaper ads are trying to scare us out of our common sense. They're putting up their dollars to beat our sense. DON'T LET THEM!

COMMON SENSE tells you that there are safe clean alternatives to nuclear power if only we would commit to their research and development. Think about what the over 7 (yes, seven) million dollars the utilities spent on trying to defeat question 4 could have done in research instead.

COMMON SENSE tells you that the future does not have to be nuclear. Pilgrim hasn't operated in over two and a half years. Did you miss the power? I didn't. And a major utility is finally building a co-generator plant in Pittsfield which will produce more power than Rowe does, so we won't miss that either.

One last point of DOLLARS AND SENSE. Boston Edison spent first 200 million and an additional 300 million was needed to try to make Pilgrim safe and workable. If they had spent that same amount of money on converting the light bulbs in Boston to more energy efficient ones, they would have saved (at no change in lifestyle or inconvenience to anyone) the same amount of power that Pilgrim produces.

You see how they look at dollars and cents? Now I hope you can look at DOLLARS AND SENSE.

Vote yes on Question 4 !!!

Quayle will be ready for presidency

To the Editor:

This is a summary of an article I read in September.

Senator Dan Quayle, his wife Marilyn and four children attended the Presbyterian church in Indiana for many years. Rev. William Pauley described Senator Quayle as a "person who's anxious that he lives his life in according with the scripture."

In Washington, the family attended the church in Bethesda, Md., where he and his wife took part in the adult Sunday School class for five years. Since early this year Senator Quayle and his family have attended the Presbyterian church in McLean, Va., and his four children, the oldest boy 14 years old, have attended Sunday School there.

Dan Quayle met Marilyn when they both attended law school.

In Washington Mrs. Quayle takes part in Friday Bible study with a score of congressional wives, in the home of Rep. Jack Kemp, R., N.Y.

Senator Dan Quayle has been a senator for six years. If Vice-President Bush is elected president, Senator Quayle as vice-president would follow his president's direction. In four years hopefully there would be intelligent peace to bless all of us. Senator Quayle knows his way around already, the transition would not be too great a burden for him.

America was founded with faith in God; these statements have that faith.

Vote yes on nuclear question

To the Editor:

It seems important that a certain point of information should be generally known to voters as they consider Question 4 on the national ballot.

A great deal of money has been spent by Edison in its effort to diffuse the energy generated by those who worry about nuclear waste.

The most recent mailing was sent in the name of Paul Tsongas, a gentleman of deservedly fine reputation.

The problem here is that Mr. Tsongas is part of the Edison organization (a director, in fact) and therefore not free to make an unbiased judgment on what is clearly a vital issue.

Former Secretary of the Interior, Ohio's Governor Cecil Andrus said it best, and I quote "If we can't resolve what we're going to do with the waste, then we have no business generating it."

I'm grateful for the opportunity to vote Yes on Question 4 next Tuesday.

The law provides a salary increase, effective January 7, 1987, for the members of the legislature and certain constitutional officers of the Commonwealth.

Thereafter the salaries of each member of the legislature will be increased by the same percentages as the salaries of full time state employees subject to the collective bargaining agreements.

location was the result of those discussions, according to Polechronis.

"It was a change that occurred over a matter of months," he stated. "There were substantial reservations voiced over that location. And truthfully, there was some concern over our part that the location was a little bit isolated."

Although the MBTA originally reviewed the Treasure Chest site and decided it was too small, a second look proved more successful, he said. The plans now call for the MBTA to take the building and about 2.5 acres of land to the right of the structure for the station and vehicle parking.

The municipal tennis courts located on Gannett Road would be taken by the MBTA for additional parking. Polechronis estimated the two areas would accommodate 400 parking spaces, the same number as the Anderson Fuel site.

"My sense," he noted, "is that the Scituate selectmen and the local merchants feel this is a pretty viable solution. And because the commuter rail tends not to attract a lot of business on Saturdays, the merchants will have that extra parking area on their busiest day."

The former Treasure Chest building is currently for sale. Polechronis acknowledged that purchase of the property by the MBTA will be more expensive than the land-taking proposed at the Anderson Fuel site. He also noted that the owners are free to sell the property while the MBTA is conducting an environmental review report.

"We don't have any kind of hold on the owners. They're free and clear to sell the building, because until we have the necessary permits, we're not able to purchase anything," he said. "We have no claim to this land. Those folks are free to maximize their return on the building.

"We'll still retain our rights to an eminent domain taking. Although it might be more expensive and disruptive, I have a strong sense that people feel much better about this site."

Perhaps some, but not all.

One Cohasset abutter on South Main Street said she is strongly opposed to the relocation - and to the entire commuter rail project.

"I hope the trains don't go in at all," grumbled the resident who asked not to be identified. A South Main Street resident for the past five years, she has lived in Cohasset for 17 years.

The proposed Old Colony rail line would travel about 200 yards from her expansive backyard. She is worried about the safety of her 14-year-old child, the noise and the devaluation of her property.

"I don't commute to Boston because I work locally," she said. "I wouldn't want to commute to Boston, and I wouldn't want to use the train."

Regarding the station site change, the Cohasset resident envisions increased traffic in her neighborhood.

Another abutter, Sandra Pratt of South Main Street said she is looking forward to the rail restoration, and does not object to the North Scituate station.

"This area is business-zoned anyway," she noted. "I lived in Cohasset when the trains ran, and I think it will be wonderful when they return. My husband grew up in Cohasset with the trains in his backyard - and he's looking forward to it again.

"The trains they have now are much different than in the past - they're not loud or smelly. I'm a basket case when I have to drive to Boston, with the parking and traffic. It was simple when we could take the train."

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray said she has received no comments about the station relocation plan. "I've heard nothing - for or against," she said this week.

Pamela Wolfe, of Sverdrup Corp., consultants for the Old Colony project, said the consensus of the local merchants is positive. "We have talked informally with the merchants and the neighbors, and the feedback has been very good," she commented. "The merchants really seem to like the new location. In general, people seem to agree this will help solve some problems."

North Scituate residents appear to be pleased with the possible new station site.

Donna Dunn, 26 Kathy's Path, an outspoken foe of the proposed station behind Anderson Fuel said, "I think it (new site) is wonderful. I'm delighted the station has been moved."

Dunn said the new location will make the station less of a nuisance to Scituate residents and will improve the traffic flow in North Scituate Village.

She said she has heard no opposition to the new location, "As long as there is no problem with the town changing the placement of the tennis courts."

However, Dunn said she remains "iffy on the train." Asked if she still opposed rail service to Scituate, Dunn said, "I'm not sure."

Dunn said that she and another anti-train activist Janet Dolan, 13 Gridley Bryant Road, met with Selectman Joseph Norton several times to discuss another station site.

The trio then met with Steve Polechronis, the consultant working on the train proposal.

This week Norton said, "I'm pleased that there's another option." However, he said he is not endorsing either location.

"I think it shows that all parties are trying to listen and come up with the solution that pleases the most people and if this is it, good," Norton said.

He said he remains hopeful that the train will still come to Scituate. "We have to make all those plans (traffic) in anticipation of the train."

He also said some of the credit for the change belonged to Selectman Richard Bowen, Scituate's liaison to the MBTA.

Both Norton and Dunn urged Scituate residents to attend the Nov. 15, 8 p.m., meeting at Scituate High School, when the MBTA will present the new station plan to the town.

League of Women Voters information

Who really elects the president?

People are often surprised when reminded that the votes they cast in presidential elections are not for candidates for president and vice president, but are for a slate of electors. These electors are frequently not listed on the ballot and are almost always unknown to voters. In other words, voters in the United States do not directly elect the two people who hold the highest offices in the land.

As stated in the Constitution, Article II, Section 1, "A. The executive power is granted to a President of the United States of America who together with a Vice President, is to hold office for four years. They are to be elected as follows: B. Each State is to choose a number of electors equal to the number of Senators and Representatives the State is entitled to send to Congress. Senators, Representatives, or Government office holders cannot be electors. C. The electors are to meet in their own states and vote by ballot for President and Vice President, one of whom at least cannot be a resident of their own state . . ." Article XII provides for a "contingent" election if no candidate receives a majority of the electoral votes. The House of Representatives elects the President; the Senate elects the Vice President.

The Constitution directs each state to appoint electors equal to the number of members of the U.S. House of Representatives (435) plus U.S. Senators (100) and three electors for the District of Columbia (23rd Amendment) for a total of 538 electors. A nominee must receive a majority of electoral votes (270) to be elected. Massachusetts has 13 electors.

Originally, electors were chosen by state legislatures, by popular vote or a combination of the two methods. Now, electors are chosen by popular vote.

In some states only the names of electors appear on the ballot, not the candidates for president and vice president. In some, both candidates' and electors' names appear. In Massachusetts and some other states, only the candidates' names appear.

Voters in all states are actually casting their ballots for a slate of electors pledged to either the Republican or Democratic candidate or a slate pledged to an Independent or minor party candidate.

Electors are chosen by party officials, in primaries or conventions. Electors for minor party or Independent candidates appear on the ballot by petition. In Massachusetts electors are chosen by meetings of their respective state parties. Electors meet in their state capitals on the Monday following the second Wednesday in December after the presidential election. Electors cast their votes which are then approved on January 6 by the U.S. House and Senate.

The Framers of the Constitution intended that electors be independent, knowledgeable people and did not bind the electors to vote for the candidate to whom they were pledged. There have been several occasions when an elector pledged to a candidate actually voted for another a so-called "faithless elector." In 1976 an elector in Washington, who was pledged to Gerald Ford, actually voted for Ronald Reagan. The outcome of an election has never been changed by faithless electors, but it could happen. Only one-third of the states bind electors. Massachusetts does not bind electors.

Only in Maine is the electoral vote allocated in proportion to the percentage of the popular vote each candidate receives. In other states the system is winner-take-all; if the winner in a state receives 10 million votes and the opponent receives 5 million, the loser gets no electoral votes from that state.

It is possible for a candidate to receive a majority of the popular vote, but not win enough electoral votes to be elected president. This is due to the winner-take-all system and the total number of electoral votes assigned to the states. California has 33 times the number of votes as Nevada, but only 12 times the number of electoral votes.

While no candidate has won the popular vote and lost the election in this century, it did happen three times in the 19th century. In 1980 Ronald Reagan had 51 percent of the popular vote, but had a landslide electoral victory.

Political analysts say that in 1988, it is entirely possible that one candidate could win the popular vote and the other the electoral vote. Republican candidates have been victorious at least five times since 1952 in 39 states which have a large number of electoral votes.

The reasons delegates to the Constitutional Convention in 1787 chose this indirect method for electing the president and vice president lie in the political and social attitudes of the times, as well as the inefficient transportation and communication of the 1700s.

Fear of the power of monarchies was fresh in the minds of the Framers. The Articles of Confederation which had loosely bound the states together provided for no strong executive department. Some delegates worried about the wisdom of giving direct power to choose the head of government to men who were not well educated or well informed about important issues. Delegates were also concerned about the long delay in the process of electing the president. Months might pass before all the votes could be collected from the states and transmitted to the capital.

More than 500 proposals to amend the Constitution have been submitted since 1797. An amendment must first be approved by Congress and then ratified by two-thirds of the states.

Proposed changes range from changes in the Electoral College system, such as choosing electors by congressional district, to abolition of the Electoral College and adoption of direct popular vote. There has been no major effort to abolish the Electoral College in Congress since 1979.

This Electoral College information was prepared by the League of Women Voters.

Art center receives Drown grant

For a fourth year, the South Shore Art Center has been selected a recipient of a $30,000 Joseph Drown Foundation grant, which the Center has designated for use in expanding its young artist programs.

Lanci Valentine, director of the Center, explained that part of the funding will be used for more programming for special needs students. One such program, already under way, is a collaborative effort between the Art Center and the South Shore Association for Retarded Citizens to offer workshops structured around one art medium for special needs students.

Looking out to the future, both the Art Center and SSARC would like to see the workshops expanded to the South Shore Art Center's satellite locations, of which there are now six — Hull, Hingham, Scituate, Norwell, Quincy and Weymouth.

The original concept for the Center's satellite locations was created under the first couple grants awarded to the Center by the Drown Foundation, a Los Angeles based philanthropic group. The satellite concept brings the arts to the communities, thereby opening up more avenues of arts education for children.

For any information on the South Shore Art Center's educational or exhibition programs, please call the Center, 383-9548. Programs at the center are also funded, in part, by the Massachusetts Council on Arts and Humanities, a state agency.

Artist of the Month

The Artist of the Month program got underway at Deer Hill in October. The students were introduced to the colorful, unusual compositions of Henri Matisse. Students enjoyed working with many decorative patterns in order to try and imitate his work.

Paintings by Fitz Hugh Lane are on exhibit at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston until December 31; therefore, the artist we will be focusing on in November is Lane. We encourage you to take your children to see this worthwhile exhibit.

Halloween Celebration

The Faculty Senate and Student Council jointly sponsored a Halloween Celebration which included a Monster Walk and Halloween Party in the gym seventh period Monday, Oct. 31. The activity had a duel purpose: to have fun and to raise money for the homeless. Homeroom teachers collected any coins students wished to contribute. The collection also took place at lunch with the help of Student Council members. Monday seventh period class was dismissed for those who were in costume and participating in the Monster Walk. Awards of $10 gift certificates were given in each of the following categories: funniest, scariest, prettiest, weirdest, ugliest, best group costumes.

This is the first joint venture by the Student Council and Faculty Senate to help everyone get in the spirit of the day and have some fun and help the homeless of Boston.

Family Feud at Deer Hill

Mr. Becker's sixth grade class hosted a contest in their school library based on the television show "Family Feud." Teams from Mrs. Cisneros's and Mr. Shultz's sixth grade classes were the contestants. After six rounds, one of Mr. Shultz's teams was declared the winner.

Helping to conduct the surveys and organize the date were Candice Buckley, Kristin Niessink, Jessica Snow, Joey Slotnick, Anthony Wigmore, Liz Corcoran, and Dorian Bryan. Mike O'Hearn was the offical scorekeeper for the games. the set decorations were handled by Nicole Vasseur, Kathy Smith, and Kristin Wilson.

At the conclusion of the championship round, the host, Mike Lennon, called on some teachers in the audience to play. The team of Mrs. Silvia, Mrs. Cisneros, Mr. Deakin, and Mr. Becker beat the team of Mrs. Magoun, Mr. MacInnis, Mrs. Rega, and Mr. Shultz.

Deer Hill art displayed

Now you can enjoy art along with your breakfast and lunch. Once again, Peter and Judy Kulturides have shown their support for children's art by displaying the creative efforts of Deer Hill fourth grade students.

Thirty colorful and imaginative masks cover the inside walls and look out the windows of their Log and Live Restaurant.

The works of art are the results of a paper sculpture art lesson taught by Jean O'Malley, with emphasis on three dimensional qualities, expression, and imagination. More creations can be seen decorating the halls of Deer Hill School. So come and enjoy.

Tough. Smart. Qualified.
Ready to meet the challenge.

Here's what the candidates said during their debates about the issues confronting us...

Silva: "I support the revitalization of commuter rail, which voters overwhelmingly supported 4 years ago..."

Murray: "I won't know until I see the study..."

Silva: "I took the lead in opposing the MWRA's outfall siting, organized communities, brought Director Levy to the South Shore to meet with residents, appropriated legal funding to fight this. Now I sit on 2 monitoring MWRA committees..."

Murray: "I called the director and told him of my opposition..."

Silva: "As chairman of the South Shore Coalition, I am proud we are compiling a solid waste management blueprint for the region – the 1st of its kind."

Murray: "I have always supported sound methods of disposal..."

Silva: "I think people have a right to know where I stand on referenda questions and all local issues..."

Murray: "I don't get involved in local issues... I have always made it a policy of not letting people know how I stand on referenda..."

Silva: "I think the Intermunicipal Agreement on sewage disposal, which I helped make a reality, is a solid example of tri-town cooperation..."

Murray: "That's a local issue. I don't get involved..."

Silva: "We need effective representation on Beacon Hill. Can you think of any major legislation that my opponent has written and gotten approved on behalf of this district in the last 12 years?"

Murray: "I've supported many bills..."

Accomplishments listed by Rep. Murray

State Rep. Jeanette Murray, Third Plymouth District outlined her accomplishments at coffee hours and meetings with her campaign workers.

Speaking at these various events in Cohasset, Hingham and Hull, Rep. Murray emphasized and reiterated her strong home rule position as well as her dedication to her constituents in the three towns.

Rep. Murray's commitment to the taxpayers by voting against tax increases, fee increases and against larger and new government beauracracies was also pointed out to those in attendance at the functions.

"I have filed and obtained passage of legislation to assist the senior citizens in the area of abatements and increased the estate assets to $200,000 for inheritance tax for this very special group of people who have done so much for our communities over the years", was also included in Mary Jeanette's remarks at her meetings.

Rep. Murray also is on record in support of real auto insurance reform which will benefit the safe driver and decrease their cost of auto insurance.

Rep. Murray explained how she is the leading legislator who halted casinos from invading not only the Commonwealth but New England.

She further commented on her legislation in the war against Drugs and Crime. Rep. Murray was also an activist in the Automobile Lemon Law and the Drunk Driving Legislation. She currently has legislation pending to apply Drunk Driving to water craft.

Silva supports train

John M. Silva, Democratic candidate for State Representative announced his support for commuter rail to service the towns of the Third Plymouth District (Hingham, Hull and Cohasset) at the Hingham League of Women Voters debate.

"Southeastern Massachusetts is the second fastest growth area in the state. The growth of the region, coupled with the construction associated with the depression of the Central Artery and the third harbor tunnel make transportation from the South Shore top priority."

"Representative Murray has repeatedly stated that she has no position on the restoration of commuter rail. She now states that she is awaiting the release of the Enrironmental Impact Study. She feels that she has already addressed the transportation problems of the South Shore by perenially introducing the Routh 3 monorale project."

"There is no other reasonable answer to our growing traffic nightmare than the restoration of the Old Colony line. The residents of our region voted overwhelmingly to restore commuter rail service to the South Shore over four years ago."

"I believe that rather than waiting for an environmental impact statement on a line that was in operation until 1960, a representative should be focusing on what is best for the region in terms of long term, realistic solutions and addressing the public safety and station location issues that are the fundamental problems associated with the revitalization of commuter rail on the South Shore."

The Hull Democratic Town Committee at a recent meeting voted unanimously to endorse John Silva, candidate for State Representative for the Hull, Hingham and Cohasset District.

Silva has served in numerous appointed and elected positions in the Town of Hull, but more importantly has been serving on important committees that encompass not only the Tri-Town District but other South Shore areas.

Silva is Chairman of the South Shore Coalition, Vice-Chairman of Save Our Beaches, and Vice-Chairman of the Tri-Town Committee. He serves on the SouthShore Coalition Long Range Planning and Finance Committee, South Shore Executive Committee, Solid Waste Technical Advisory Committee of the South Shore Coalition and the MWRA Citizens Advisory Committee and the MWRA Siting Outfall Sub-Committee. These are but a few of the tasks Silva has undertaken and has a fine record of accomplishment.

Silva has the combined Municipal and business professional experience that are necessary to properly represent the District. John is a man of action, not reaction. Someone who's old enough to know what to do and young enough to do it, the Democratic committee members stated.

2½ PAC for Murray

Citizens for Limited Taxation's 2 1/2 Political Action Committee has endorsed Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray for re-election to the Massachusetts House.

Rep. Murray is running in the 3rd Plymouth District, comprising the towns of Cohasset, Hingham and Hull.

Barbara Anderson, vice chairman of CLT's 2 1/2 PAC commended Rep. Murray for her strong pro-taxpayer position on many economic issues over the past few years. "Rep. Murray has shown her consistent support for the taxpayers of her district and deserves to be elected to another term.

"With a fiscal crisis facing the Commonwealth, taxpayers will need every friendly face they can find on Beacon Hill. We urge the voters of the 3rd Plymouth District to support Representative Mary Jeanette Murray and vote for her re-election on November 8th."

CLT's 2 1/2 PAC is the political action committee of Citizens for Limited Taxation, a statewide taxpayers organization which placed Proposition 2 1/2 and the state tax cap on the Massachusetts ballot, and which lobbies for taxpayer interests on Beacon Hill.

Silva leads seminar

John M. Silva, Chairman of the Hull Board of Selectmen and Democratic candidate for State Representative in the Third Plymouth District (Cohasset, Hingham and Hull) presented a workshop on community development planning sponsored by the South Shore Coalition of which Silva has been Chairman for the past two years.

The symposium entitled "Planning for Community Growth: Financial Impacts of Development" was held Saturday, Oct. 29 in Hanover. It was attended by residents of the Coalition's ten member towns as well as by state and local officials. The workshop was conducted in order to assist towns in identifying and analyzing the effects that growth and development have on municipal revenues, expenditures and finance.

Silva stated "This workshop is a part of a continuing cooperative effort between the Coalition and the Common wealth to address the issues facing the towns in our region and to provide assistance and meaningful resolutions to them."

We Must Vote NO on Question #2

WE MUST KEEP TAX DOLLARS IN OUR COMMUNITIES!

"Having a prevailing wage requirement helps workers and their families. But it also keeps the community thriving. A decent standard of living translates into stable local tax revenues."

- WBZ (TV) Boston

WE MUST GUARANTEE EQUAL PAY FOR EQUAL WORK!

"It is ironic that as the construction trades are opening up to women seeking jobs, the owners should try to repeal the long standing prevailing wage structure which provides a decent wage."

- Molly Yard, President, National Organization of Women

WE MUST SUPPORT QUALITY CONSTRUCTION IN OUR CITIES AND TOWNS!

"In my experience, you get what you pay for. If we take the low bid, we want to know all bidders are using equally skilled craftsmen."

- Kathy Sullivan, Selectman, Town of Stoneham

WE MUST KEEP MASSACHUSETTS WORKING MEN AND WOMEN WORKING!

"The only clear result of question #2 will be lower wages for Massachusetts residents and a lower standard of living for local workers and their families. The cost of repeal would be a fiercer competition for local jobs from out-of-state workers and contractors and less money spent in local small businesses."

- Independent Economic Study by Data Resources, Inc. of Lexington, MA.

WE MUST PAY SKILLED CRAFTS-PEOPLE AN ADEQUATE WAGE!

"The average wage for a Massachusetts construction worker in 1987 was $26,734."

Silva endorsed by AFL-CIO

John Silva, Democratic candidate for the Massachusetts House of Representatives, Third Plymouth District, has received the endorsement of the 400,000 member Massachusetts AFL-CIO.

In a letter signed by Arthur R. Osborne, President of the Mass. AFL-CIO, and Martin V. Foley, Director of the AFL-CIO's Committee on Political Education (COPE), the labor organization wrote: "Your advocacy on behalf of the working women and men of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts is greatly appreciated. It was, in fact, a major factor in our decision to endorse you. We would be proud to have you as a friend and ally on Beacon Hill. On behalf of the 400,000 members-strong of the AFL/CIO, we congratulate you on compiling a record worthy of labor's support."

Silva said, "I thank the membership of the Massachusetts AFL-CIO for their endorsement of my candidacy. My record and my agenda have always been pro-labor and pro-American, and I will continue to do my best to speak on your behalf on matters that affect you and your families, whether it's working against the repeal of the prevailing wage law or supporting legislation to save domestic job opportunities."

Elder Affairs grant awards

Elder Affairs has awarded Cohasset $2,763, Hingham $6,664 and Hulls award is pending at approximately $3300.

"Councils on Aging are the critical link at the community level in our aging network. This funding helps them to provide services to 360,000 elders across the Commonwealth," said Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray. "I am proud of their role and will remain committed to working closely with our Senior Citizens in fulfilling their important mission."

The funds are granted for a variety of purposes for local appropriations for council activities. Programs supported by the funds include: staffing; facility maintenance; and a range of transportation, outreach, health fitness, nutrition, and peer support program activities.

Over 3,000 Massachusetts Scientists and Engineers Urge a NO vote on 4

"Ballot Question 4 would permanently shut down the generation of electric power by existing Massachusetts' nuclear electricity plants.

It is an important issue. Nuclear energy supplies 33% of our region's electricity. Our state's nuclear electricity plants alone provide nearly 20% of our in-state power supply.

Of course, the issue goes beyond the threat of electricity shortages, and economic consequences.

It is important to consider the complex scientific questions involved, including the adverse environmental and health effects of the likely replacements to nuclear energy – oil and coal.

When looking at the scientific issues, please consider the views of my colleagues in Massachusetts' scientific community, who overwhelmingly recommend a No vote on Question 4.

– Thank you."

"Nursing Homes, Medicaid and Your Financial Survival" — is the topic of a lecture given by Harley S. Gordon, Attorney, on Tuesday, November 1 at 1 p.m. at the First Parish House, 23 No. Main St., Cohasset.

The numbers can no longer be ignored. One out of five people between the ages of 65 and 75 will be confined to a nursing home during their lives, 75 and beyond it's one out of two. The cost is staggering, $30,000 a year average. Who pays? You do!

"Nursing Homes, Medicaid and Your Financial Survival" is the title of the lecture given by Harley S. Gordon, attorney, who concentrates on protecting the assets of older Americans from catastrophic illness. The lecture provides answers to tough questions and helps explore the options that can prevent financial disaster in the future.

Also covered is an explanation of the dramatic changes that took place when the Medicaid Spousal Impoverishment Act of 1988 was passed. The legislation makes it more difficult to protect your home and life savings.

Please plan on joining us on Tuesday, November 1 at 1 p.m. at the First Parish House, 23 No. Main St. or call 383-9112.

Sea Cadet open house

The U.S. Naval Sea Cadets and League Cadets, F.B. Battle Division, will host an open house Friday, Nov. 18 from 7:30 to 9 p.m. at the GAR Hall, Country Way in Scituate.

There will be demonstrations and short talks by the cadets to give parents and prospective cadets an idea of what the unit does.

Males and females within three months of their 14th birthday, and not yet 18, are eligible to join the Sea Cadets. Young people between ages 11 and 13 years 9 months may enroll as League Cadets.

Sea Cadet goals are to develop an interest and skill in basic seamanship and in its naval adaptations, to train them in seagoing skills, and to teach them patriotism, courage, and self-reliance.

Cadet training offers an opportunity for advanced courses aboard Navy and Coast Guard ships ranging from small harbor craft to large nuclear powered aircraft carriers. On shore, Sea Cadets study maritime history, navigation, seamanship, and similar subjects which would improve their chances for success should they decide to join one of the sea services.

All ages are welcome at the November 18 Open House. Refreshments will be served. For additional information, call Lou Cheverie (837-9258) between 7 and 10 p.m.

Flu clinics schedule

The Social Service League and the Cohasset Board of Health will hold the annual Flu Clinics this year at the Cohasset Town Hall Saturday, Nov. 19, from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. and on Saturday, December 10, from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

The Department of Health assures us that the time frame for receiving the flu shots is within the therapeutic range.

If you have any questions, call the Social Service League office at 383-0771 or 383-0821.

Soccer registration

Cohasset's Spring soccer program will begin a few months early this year.

Registration for the local Coastal League teams, for boys and girls from eight to 18, will be held Saturday, Nov. 5, at the Deer Hill School gymnasium. The registration for the league, which begins play next April, will be from 9 a.m. until noon.

"Our program is growing quickly," said town coordinator Larry Shultz, "and we're trying to plan more effectively to accommodate that growth."

Over 300 youths played on 16 Cohasset teams during the 1987 season, Shultz said. "And in four age groups," Shultz added, "we had waiting lists." According to Massachusetts Youth Soccer Association rules, no team may have more than 18 squad members.

Coastal League play covers most of southeastern Massachusetts, Shultz noted. Cohasset teams face opponents ranging from Hingham to Plymouth. Competition is held in five age groups: under 10, under 12, under 14, under 16, and under 19. Registration fees are $30 for the first child, $25 for the second, and $20 for all others.

Antique show and sale

The twelfth antique show and sale will be held Saturday, Nov. 5, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Deer Hill School, 206 Sohier Street, Cohasset, Ma. (off Route 3-A, just before the South Shore Music Circus.)

Admission to the show with a card or ad for one or two persons is $1.50 — regular admission is $2. Admission cards are available from dealers and members of the Beechwood Congregational Church.

Antiques such as glass, silver, jewelry, primitives and other collectibles will be on display and for sale.

A public snack bar will be held in the school cafeteria with sandwiches, hot dogs, homemade squares, coffee, tea and cold drinks. Homemade baked goods will be on sale at the ticket area.

There will be ample parking.

The following dealers will participate in this year's show: Eve Makowski, Dog Corner Antiques; Mary Hill, Tin Trunk; Paula Arms, Antiques Plus Interiors, Cynthia Peterson, Country Accents; Barbara Gong, Willow Farm; Madeline Hoagland, Eel River Antiques; Caroline Connor, Lincoln Mill Antiques; Marsha (Taffy) Manchester, Milady's Mercantile; Joan Talbot, La Petite Curiosity Shop; Linda Weyant, Weyant's Wares; Barbara Petit, Barbara Petit; Janice Caldwell and Helen Pirtle; Barbara Donohue, Full Circa; John Richardson, Indian Fort Bookshouse; John Brandt, Mixed Bag; Geraldine Pearle, Purple Peageon Studio; Susan Krueger, Older and Better; Caroline Cohen and Andea Hunt, Peg Leg Duck Antiques; Nancy Pereto, Cohasset Antiques; Mary Stoddard, Stoddard's Antiques; Maureen Brown, Sponged Bear; Catherine Whalen.

Soccer team defends Division III title

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

Girls' Soccer

The Cohasset High School girls' soccer concluded the regular season almost playing the role of a traditional spoiler. Instead, they lost a controversial, hard-fought match to Scituate, 1-0, enabling their cross-town rival to qualify for the state tournament. The Skippers finished the year at 8-8-2, missing the tourney by one victory.

"It was the best showing by us in a long time," said Cohasset coach Keenan Startszell. "We played real well throughout the season. We certainly gained a lot of respect from our opponents."

Their 7-4-1 record in the South Shore League Small Schools division placed them third behind Norwell (league champion) and Abington. In fact, all of Cohasset's eight losses were against tournament-bound schools (once to Rockland, who is ranked number two in the state and No. 6 Duxbury and twice to No. 3 Norwell, No. 4 Abington and Scituate.)

"We had an extremely difficult schedule. We played some highly-regarded clubs. Overall, I was happy with our group. Our experience and age is well-distributed on the team," added Startszell.

Seniors Katie Lord (center midfielder), Cindy Dormer (sweeper) and goalie Nancy Riley capped off a stellar campaign with an appearance in the annual South Shore League All-Star contest (played last Saturday night at Middleboro which ended in a 2-2 tie).

Startszell feels that the younger starters (two sophomores and a ninth and eighth grader) have gained significant exposure when playing alongside the older, experienced players.

"I hope these young athletes can instill the same excellent leadership next year that Katie, Cindy and Nancy exhibited this season. We are finally getting good soccer players."

Sophomore Kara Manion led the team in scoring.

Boys' Soccer

Cohasset will defend their two-time Division Three South Sectional crown when they open up against Canton this week at Milliken Field. If Cohasset (14-2-2) wins, then they will face the winner of the East Bridgewater-Nauset contest on Friday, November 4. The Skippers could host the quarterfinal round game which starts at 2:00 p.m.

Football team to battle Abington again

Friday, Nov. 4 — Quarterfinals

Football

What a difference a year can make.

The Cohasset High School football team has fallen on hard times after going 16-4 the previous two years. The Skippers are 1-6 this season.

Hanover, 2-8 last year in the South Shore League Large Schools Division, improved to 5-2 overall (3-0 in the Small Schools) with a 36-12 convincing victory over Cohasset at home last Saturday.

Cohasset, who extended their losing streak to five games, scored first and last, but Hanover scored often in between to remain atop of the SSL Small School standings, tied for first-place with Norwell (also at 5-2 and 3-0.) Norwell plays Hanover on Thanksgiving Day with the winner presumably capturing the league crown.

Cohasset's Kim Dwyer, #10, waits for the ball to be freed before she moves downfield.

The defense was successful for Cohasset once again against Hanover, with #26 Paul Froio, #51 Mike Meers, #58 Chris Froio, and #53 Craig Carter.

The Indians were paced by Mark McKeever (21 carries, 103 yards and two touchdowns) and Derek Richards (seven carries, 103 yards.) The Indians rushed for 263 of its 370 yards total offense.

Despite injuries to many key players, Cohasset allowed Hanover only three yards on six plays in the first quarter. Meanwhile, the Skippers marched downfield with a seven minute, 15-play, 70-yard drive.

With 9:02 left before halftime, senior fullback Matt Buckley fumbled an apparent touchdown, but teammate Sean McCarthy fell on the ball in the end zone for a 6-0 Cohasset lead.

Hanover countered by scoring three times in a 3:15 span.

From there, Cohasset concluded the scoring when tri-captain Paul Froio (19 carries, 143 yards) converted a two-yard run.

"All our players deserve a lot of credit for giving 100

Tennis and Squash Club tourney results

The second annual Cohasset Fall Tennis Tournament, with a record 44 entries, has begun play at the Cohasset Tennis and Squash Club. The finals, in four divisions, will be held Saturday, Nov. 12.

"The men's singles and doubles draws are especially strong," according to club owner Kathy Pocock. "We had a good showing in the tough South of Boston League last winter, and it's carrying over."

In men's singles A competition, top-seeded Bill Sprout of Hingham, formerly ranked number-one in New England in men's 50-and-over play, will face Mario Vivado, a 6-4, 6-4 winner over Wayne Barcomb. Second-seeded Chip Rowley, the 1986 club champion, beat Carl Slotnick in his quarterfinal match. Slotnick had topped Cohasset's Bob Leahy, 6-2, 6-0. Other men's A results include Terry Kahn over Don Zerendow, 5-7, 7-5, 6-0; Paul Carroll over Steve Weiner, 6-2, 3-6, 6-2; and Steve Maloney in a quarterfinal win over Carroll, 7-5, 7-5.

In men's singles B play, Caleb Slotnick beat Ken Roth, 6-3, 6-4, and now faces Jim Moore. Rob Spofford has won twice, knocking off Peter O'Loughlin, 6-2, 6-1, and, in a semi-final match, Jack Brister.

percent," Cohasset coach Phil Pisano said. "We are going through a rebuilding year with many young players who continue to develop their skills and character."

Cohasset will travel to Abington this Saturday (a two o'clock starting time because of the SAT exam in the morning.) It will be the second meeting of the season between the two schools. Abington won the opener, 27-6, at Milliken Field.

Prediction: Cohasset 14 Abington 13. The Skippers will know what to expect from Abington the second time around.

Chamber auction

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce will hold a fund-raising auction Friday, Nov. 4 at Kimball's by the Sea. The public is invited for beans, franks and brown bread (no charge), a cash bar. . .and pick up some early Christmas presents. Franks and beans at 7 p.m., auction at 8 p.m.

The Cohasset Chamber anticipates well over $4,000 in donations; auction items include several antique paintings and prints, a mantle clock, several trips and over-nights, an electric ice cream machine, clocks, many gift certificates, and many, many surprises. In addition to the regular auction, which starts at 8 p.m., there will be an on-going Chinese auction.

Over the past many years, the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce has held candidate forums, most recently the state representative race debate. Throughout the year it produces speakers on varied subjects.

Last spring, the community heard Senator William Golden on the train issue; talk show host Jerry Williams on the national elections and a "cruise" night.

The chamber has taken stands on numerous town meeting issues, including opposing the rezoning of a portion of Rte. 3A to residential.

Wednesday, Nov. 9, 6:30 p.m., Cohasset resident Jim Kuhn, publisher of Boston Magazine, will be the guest speaker at Hugo's Lighthouse.

Membership chairman is Robert Martin, president of Goodall Insurance. For information about membership in the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce call him at 383-0787.

Preparations for Village Fair

The treasures and treats that will be offered at the 48th annual Cohasset Village Fair, Saturday, Dec. 3, are now being crafted and gathered.

With committee assignments already made among the five congregations that jointly sponsor and benefit from the Fair, chairpersons are setting workshop schedules and drop-off instructions for donated articles. They extend an invitation to all to join in the work and the assembling, pointing out the fellowship that goes with the effort.

Each Tuesday evening from 7 to 9, workers for the Children's Corner meet in the basement of St. Anthony's Rectory under the leadership of Chairman Anna Abbruzzese to fashion items that will appeal to children or to parents shopping for children.

A group of boutique workers meets Monday evenings in Bates Hall of the Second Congregational Church to craft the articles that make the Boutique one of the most profitable features of each fair. All the five churches share in responsibility for the boutique, but the Monday evening group, with Marsha Silvia, Linda Campbell, Dot Parmenter and Margaret Bates prominent among the "regulars," has taken a leadership role.

"Books will be very big this year" according to Helen Hooper, whose committee stages one of the most extensive offering of used books in the area. The gift of an entire library by an anonymous donor is making possible the presentation of some very fine volumes, "the best collection ever." Of special interest are some large, fine art books of the "coffee table type," and the book group invites attention from art lovers.

Silva reels in wake of defeat by Rep. Murray

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

It was not as violent, but Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray's challenger likened his crushing defeat to annihilation.

"She killed me," said John Silva, the Hull Democrat who challenged the Republican incumbent for the Third Plymouth District seat in the state legislature.

Silva lost big in his bid for the state house, losing his hometown by more than 1,000 votes. Rep. Murray won all three towns in the district, compiling a three-to-one margin over her former legislative aide.

"I think the whole campaign boiled down to the type of individual I am. I take a stand on issues and I don't back down, regardless of whether it's politically prudent.

"Rep. Murray has not stayed in the legislature for 12 years by taking those kinds of stands. She has done a lot of constituent work, and people obviously like that. We brought a lot of issues to the people, but obviously the people are not interested in the issues.

"Unfortunately, that's hard to swallow," he noted.

The Hull selectmen knew from the start that he had an uphill battle to fight. His stand in support of an override in Hull which resulted in a recall petition against him, was not the kind of publicity any candidate seeks.

"But I'm not about to change," he stated. "If that's what it takes to get elected, to refuse to get involved in local issues and refuse to take stands on the issues, then I guess I'm not the right person for the job."

The chairman of the South Shore Coalition appeared in three cable televised debates against Rep. Murray. According to his estimates, he knocked on about 70 percent of the doors in Hingham and about 30 percent in Cohasset. There were leaflet drops, direct mailings keyed to new

The wedding that almost wasn't

Let the record show that Bill and Suzi French relied on the kindness of strangers - and it worked.

As Suzi explained, she and Bill were to be married October 8. Their wedding reception was to be held at Kimball's By The Sea - a place they "fell in love with" after scouring the area for an appropriately elegant hall.

But their carefully-made plans literally went up in smoke the night before. As most Cohasset residents are aware, that night a fire destroyed a two-story home on Lothrop Lane.

Suzi's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jones of Virginia, were renting that house for the week, in preparation of the hectic days they would spend arranging last minute wedding details with their daughter. Some of the bridesmaids and their husbands were also staying in the home for the weekend, along with Suzi and her husband-to-be.

The wedding party was out of the house that night, Suzi noted, attending a pre-nuptial dinner at the Barnside Tavern in Hanover. They did not return to Lothrop Lane until the fire was out.

"When we got there, just a few of the firefighters were left. It was them and a lot of School releases land for housing

The school committee voted Monday night to release more than eight acres of land so the housing authority can move forward with its proposal to construct 13 units of family housing.

In authorizing the release, the school department turns control of 8.72 acres of land bordering Rte. 3A and Evergreen Lane to the selectmen. Special town meeting in December will decide whether to approve the housing authority's proposal.

Supt. Stephen Hart emphasized Monday night that release of the 8.72 acres, in addition to the 14 acres declared surplus last month, leaves the school committee with more than 50 acres of land under its jurisdiction. The school committee voted in October to declare 14 acres of land surplus so the town could develop plans for a 5,000 plot cemetery.

"These two pieces together take up 22 acres of the 72 acres controlled by the school department," he said. Fifty acres remain. That land, he said, would be more than sufficient for the school department if a new school building is necessary in the future, or if there is a need for a school athletic field there.

"The (remaining) land more than meets the future needs of our schools. And this meets the community's needs without disrupting the schools' needs," he stated.

Notice to subscribers

To avoid increasing our subscription rates, we are streamlining our billing system to convert all our subscribers to a common expiration date. With rising postal and production costs, we need to reduce our billing costs.

If the mailing label does not have a January 1 (1/1) expiration date, you will receive a bill to extend your subscription to that date. For example, if your expiration date is 6/89, you will receive a bill for six months which would give you a January 1, 1990 expiration date. (We will still have our 2 and 3 year rates for those of you who prefer to take advantage of the extra savings of longer renewals).

We regret any inconvenience this may cause you, but by reducing our costs, we can also reduce yours.

If you have any questions regarding this new system, please feel free to call the Circulation Department at 837-3500/1-800-874-6969.

Cohasset's week...

Town meeting warrant

Selectmen voted Monday night, Nov. 7, to schedule the following warrant articles for the special town meeting Monday, Dec. 5, at 7:30 p.m. at Cohasset High School auditorium:

- To see if the town will accept a collective bargaining agreement made by and between the Town of Cohasset and Permanent Firefighters, Local 2804, and to see what sum of money the town will raise and appropriate to effectuate the agreement. (Submitted by selectmen)
- To see if the town will vote to petition the General Court and enact legislation that would create a Municipal Housing Authority. (By Planning Board)
- To see if the town will vote to amend Section 5, Area Regulations, of Zoning Bylaw regarding increased density — qualified housing. (By Planning Board)
- To see if the town will raise and appropriate, transfer from available funds or borrow money to acquire a van for the Council on Aging with insurance reimbursement of $9,024.25, making up the balance of the purchase price. (By selectmen, on request of council on aging)
- To see if the town will ban jet skiing on all inside water — Big and Little Harbor. (By selectmen)
- To see if the town will vote to acquire a site to develop 12 units of family housing under Chptr. 705. (By Cohasset Housing Authority)
- To see if the town will raise and appropriate a sum of money for acquisition and/or construction of shower and lavatory facilities for the wastewater treatment plant or anything related thereto. (By sewer commission)
- To see if the town will transfer from available funds sums for the payment of unpaid bills (By selectmen)
- To see if the town will amend the zoning by-laws regarding definitions of private docks and marina. (By Cohasset Harbor Committee)

Secretary starts Nov. 14

The town's new executive secretary, Greg Doyon, is scheduled to start his position Monday, Nov. 14, at a salary of $42,500 a year.

Doyon was formerly executive secretary in Hopkinton.

His contract will be for three years, according to selectman chairman Burt Pratt.

He will replace Donald Andrew, 37, who resigned in August to become Everett's city auditor.

Andrew had been executive secretary in Cohasset since June, 1985.

Pratt said that Doyon's contract is similar to that of Andrew, with a few changes.

For instance, it includes funds for membership in a professional association, Pratt said.

The contract was scheduled to be signed Wednesday, Nov. 9.

Janet Chalke has served as acting executive secretary. She is administrative coordinator in the selectmen's office.

Florence Kelly was temporarily appointed to assist Chalke.

Budget priorities

Selectmen voted Monday night, Nov. 7, to forward to the Department of Revenue a list of Cohasset's five priority items.

Selectmen chairman Burt Pratt explained that the DOR is making a study for the town.

"The DOR only wants five priority items," said Pratt, who compiled the list with Jane Goedecke and Ned Tebbetts.

The items are, transfer station, $550,000; sewers, $3,000,000; rehabilitation of the police/fire stations, $500,000; Milliken-Lillard Field, $500,000; and trucks and heavy equipment, $6,020,000.

"I think this is a good start," said member Martha Gjesteby.

Telephone recommendation

The town's telephone consultant will make a recommendation to selectmen Monday night, Nov. 14, on a new telephone system for Town Hall.

Consultant Dimiti Howard of ATI Telemanagement said she will fax her report to the town later this week.

At the selectmen meeting Monday night, Nov. 7, board members opened bids for the system.

They were Tel Plus Communications, $12,001; A T & T, $22,639.50; F.G. Walter Inc. Telecommunications, $13,663; and Executone, $11,123.15.

A bid by Interstate Telephone Communications was effectively ruled out because it did not contain the required bonding information.

Member James Gallagher requested the recommendation by Howard.

"I'd like to have more knowledge on it in making a decision for the townspeople," said Gallagher.

"We've already had a bid conference," noted chairman Burt Pratt.

Howard said that the town's older system is mechanical and is getting harder to have repaired.

"It's getting more expensive to maintain, and doesn't give flexibility," she said.

"You can't program it."

She explained that the town is now looking for an electronic telephone system with flexibility, that would allow a console operator or not.

"You can program it to specific department needs," said Howard.

It would allow call forwarding and call waiting, she said.

"It would also allow growth," said Howard.

"The system will grow with you, change with you as your needs change."

"Could we work in 911?" asked Gallagher.

"It's not part of the police/fire system," answered Howard.

She said it would take a few days to install the system.

Resident Robert Davenport said he didn't remember the board voting to hire a consultant.

"I know we did discuss it," said member Rocco Laugelle.

Pratt explained that 25 phones and 14 lines would be installed.

"We have eight borrowed phones in this building now," he said.

According to Pratt, $15,000 had been budgeted for the telephone system, and there is $12,800 left.

Landfill closed Nov. 11

The Cohasset Board of Health reminds residents and licensed trash haulers that the Cedar Street Solid Waste Facility will be closed for Veterans' Day, Friday Nov. 11, 1988. Please plan accordingly.

Reduce selectmen

The next annual town meeting will include an article which would reduce the number of members of the board of selectmen from five to four in 1990 and three in 1991.

The article was submitted to selectmen by Robert Davenport Monday night, Nov. 7, and accepted by the board.

"We can accept it at any time," said member Rocco Laugelle. "It's unusual that it's so early."

Davenport said he decided to submit the article now because he had it ready.

The article would amend the general bylaws by substituting: "For the period commencing with the annual town election in April of 1990 and ending with the annual town election in 1991, the board of selectmen shall consist of four members; commencing with the annual town election in April of 1991 and thereafter the board of selectmen shall consist of three members.

"The members of the board of selectmen shall be citizens of the town. One member shall be elected at the annual town election in 1990 for a term of one year. One member to be elected at the annual town election in 1991 to hold office for three years; and two members to be elected at the annual town election in 1992, one for a term of one year and one for a term of three years; and each to hold office until his or her successor is duly elected and qualified.

"Thereafter, when the term of a member expires, the town shall elect one member each year to serve for a term of three years and until his successor is duly elected and qualified.

"The members of the board of selectmen shall hold no other elected town office, and shall receive compensation as fixed by the town meeting, or act on anything relating thereto."

Selectmen action

Selectmen took the following action at their meeting Monday night, Nov. 7, at Town Hall:

- Granted a request by the Osgood School PSO to sell candy on election day.
- Voted to inform the Rotary club that its lease for the Bates Building will be up in 90 days.
- Town offices will move out of the building around Dec. 15, according to Selectman chairman Burt Pratt.

"It doesn't mean that on the 90th day, they (Rotary) have to be out," said Pratt.

"They have the option of staying after the 90 days if the town is not ready to move."

Board member Rocco Laugelle noted that Rotary has remodeled the upstairs of the building.

"They've done a whale of a job," said Laugelle.

"I would have nothing to do with throwing them out on short notice."

- Granted a license to expand underground storage facilities at Randy's Cohasset Service, Sohier St., subject to submission of a permit from the Health Board.

National children's book week

In honor of National Children's Book Week, Paul Pratt Memorial Library has chosen the theme "Reading Is Dino-Mite." The library is celebrating the week with posters, buttons, and bookmarks.

In conjunction with the school libraries, children will be asked to review their favorite "dino-mite" books. The reviews will be displayed as a mural in the children's room of the library. Parents might want to stop in and check this list of favorites as gift suggestions. Also for parents, there will be a display of books about reading with your child, and books to coax the most reluctant readers.

For more information contact the children's librarians at 383-1348.

Students host voter rally

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

They may be too young now, but they brought home a powerful message.

Deer Hill students gathered under a glorious morning sun Monday morning to call attention to parents and residents about the importance of casting their ballots November 8.

In a pre-election rally held on Cohasset Common, the students attempted to rouse the public's participation in the national election. Colorful signs and banners and lots of American flags were held high as speakers talked about the importance of the ballot.

The program was part of an on-going study of the election process by the fourth, fifth and sixth grade teachers at the school.

While Joe Martin (right) holds his sign, his classmates (center) listen to the speakers who participated in Monday's pre-election rally.

Principal Kenneth Ekberg related a story recently told to him by a student. The boy's parents had come home to have supper after a long day at work. The boy reminded them that it was election day, but the parents said they were too tired to go back out to vote. After talking to his parents about their responsibility, the adults decided to heed his advice and go out to the polls.

Ekberg urged all students to speak with their parents about their responsibility and opportunity to participate in this week's election.

Later in the program, Principal Ekberg reminded the audience about an election in Cohasset where two candidates for selectmen received a tie vote. That resulted in a recount and a special election. That election, he said, clearly demonstrated that each ballot does indeed count.

Three winners of the school's essay contest read their compositions to the Monday morning audience. Jane Singleton, grade four, talked about the lack of voting rights in other countries, where people are deprived of the right to vote by the color of their skin or their religious beliefs.

Jessica Sullivan, grade 5, talked about the difference one vote can make in any election. Each vote, she said, allows every person to have a say in how this country is run.

And Joey Slotnick from grade 6 talked about the millions of eligible voters who do not cast their ballots in elections. It would be unconstitutional to require everyone to vote, but Joey urged all residents to participate. "One vote can make the difference," he said.

Principal Ekberg singled out one of the many signs in the crowd of students, parents and town officials. It stated, "We're leaving it all up to you." He urged their parents to heed the message, noting that frequently, "decisions are made by the majority of people who vote, not by the majority of people."

"TRAVEL WITH THE CLIPPER"

Smooth election day

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Town Clerk Frances Marks has been around town hall for a few years. But she has never seen so many people and such long lines as she saw Tuesday.

Much to her delight, Cohasset's 4,420 ballots were counted and sealed away by 9:30 that night - just one hour after the last voter departed.

"We were super busy all day," she said, tired but exhilarated by the election day action.

The last presidential election attracted 82 percent of the registered voters in Cohasset. This week's election, featuring a Massachusetts politician in the major race and a number of intriguing referenda questions, brought more than 85 percent of all Cohasset voters to the polls.

"From all the elections that I've worked, that's the highest number of voters," she noted.

There were no major problems throughout the day, although several voters failed to file census forms and it was a problem locating correct addresses for the registered voters.

The intermittent rain posed a small dilemma during the day, Marks said. As night approached and a light rain began to fall on the lines of waiting voters, the registrars allowed them to move into the new town hall addition.

The voters waited inside the comfort of the town hall, with the line winding around the auditorium and into the voting booths.

Doors to the auditorium were shut at 8 p.m., but anyone already waiting in line was allowed to enter the voting booths. No one came to the town hall after the 8 p.m. closing time.

A young couple carrying an infant were the last to enter the door to town hall just before they closed.

But because there were so many people inside the town hall waiting in line by 8 p.m., the registrars had to extend the actual voting time until 8:30 p.m.

"Everything went very well," the town clerk stated. "It was pretty well organized."

Thanks to the computerized voting machines, the record number of Cohasset votes were tallied within an hour. By 9:30 p.m., the registrars were packing away the ballots and announcing the results.

The only complaint about the ballots, Marks noted, was the positioning of question four. Many voters failed to answer that question, she said, because it was tucked away in the lower right hand corner of the ballot.

"All in all," she said, "it was a very busy day, but it went very smoothly."

Golden's huge win marred by Duke's defeat

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

It was a night of mixed emotions for Senator William Golden.

His overwhelming victory over challenger William Robinson was tempered by the humiliating defeat suffered by his close friend and political ally, Governor Michael Dukakis.

"I'm very pleased with my win tonight," Golden said amidst a late Tuesday night victory with friends and family at his South Weymouth home. "But it really is a mixed bag for me. It was a real loss that the governor was defeated, although this state saw some great Democratic victories."

Golden, who won a third term to the state senate, intimated that his landslide victory indicates a brighter future for the South Shore.

"A lot of the things we are doing here, the state is beginning to take notice of. We're really starting to see the beginning of a new future for the South Shore, and the state is paying attention to that."

When asked if such notoriety might lead to a run for statewide office, Golden declined to comment.

"The state is now taking notice of the South Shore, through my efforts with the South Shore Coalition, our work on a solid waste management plan, and the steps we have taken to protect our environment. It's that kind of commitment that the state is taking notice of," he continued.

The 40 year-old Cohasset native marveled at the three-to-one margin he held over his Republican challenger. This victory, he noted, was greater than the one he waged in his first campaign, against Anna Doherty of Marshfield.

"We ran a solid campaign," Golden said. "The decision was made early to campaign continuously. There were no leaflets and sign waving or speech making. We decided to keep this campaign on the issues - on my continuing efforts to solve the significant issues of the South Shore."

That effort proved successful, as Golden gathered more, than a two-to-one margin over Robinson in Hingham, and Cohasset, and a three-to-one edge in Hull and in Weymouth.

Though disappointed with the results of the election, Robinson said he intends to become more politically active.

"I'm going to start boning up on my penmanship," he said, "and write letters to elected officials.

"I intend to be a sort of guardian presence, a scaled down Ralph Nader.

"I was particularly disappointed as to pointing out to people the foolhardiness of putting a sewer pipe in the ocean," said Robinson.

"People have the impression that the harbor will be cleaned up.

"The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority isn't going to clean up the harbor.

"They'll stop further pollution.

"Pollution from the harbor going to pollute the ocean sends shivers up my spine. It's like killing yourself slowly.

"You can see what happened in the harbor with flounder."

Robinson feels the real culprit in the situation is industrial users.

"Eighty to eighty-five percent of those who use sewerage are commercial," he said.

"That tells me something.

"Commercial companies can set up their own commercial treatment plant.

"Sen. Golden said that is pie in the sky, but it can be done with competency.

"The approach of the MWRA is political, it doesn't solve anything. It's not an ecological solution.

"The chain of life is being destroyed, sewerage is destroying marine life.

"People have to be informed."

Robinson also said that his solution to solving transportation problems on the South Shore would have been to relocate the Old Colony Railroad tracks through Wompatuck State Park.

"You can't use the existing line now," he said.

"It's very impractical to spend the money to fix it up. You might as well relocate them."

If he had it to do over again, Robinson said he would have started campaigning earlier.

"I started last summer," he said.

"I also would have formed a larger committee to help me, and used the media more."

Robinson feels he was "pretty aggressive" in the debates with Golden.

"I don't believe he is a strong candidate," said Robinson.

"I'm just a weaker one.

"He can be unseated."

Robinson said he spent $2,000 during his campaign.

"There needs to be reforms on campaign contributions after seeing Golden's war chest — $99,000 is obscene.

"(House speaker George) Keverian has over $300,000.

"They claim they are for the working people. Why don't they take some of that money and create housing for the homeless?

"Something has to be done."

Will Robinson run for office again?

"I'll definitely be a candidate in the future," he answered.

A major loss for Silva . . .

voters and extensive advertising.

"I'm not disappointed I lost - I knew it would be tough to win. But I am disappointed with the numbers," he said. "I guess people aren't as concerned about environment, the railroad and the serious concerns of this region as I thought they were.

"It's a major disappointment," Silva added. When asked if he would consider another run at a later date, the Democrat said he would need more time to think things over, to be with his family, and to get "reaquainted" with his job as executive director of the New England Community Health Center Association.

Rep. Murray, who won her seventh term to the House of Representatives, attributed her success to "my work crew was terrific in every town. They worked very hard for me and I really want to thank them all.

"I want to thank the people who voted for me, that came out and gave me a mandate that they like what I'm doing. They said I've always been accessible."

The incumbent, who will begin her 13th year at the state house, said she was "very, very pleased with outcome."

Her priorities for the new term will be to keep fees down, particularly the new speeding fines. Rep. Murray also intends to file legislation prohibiting the Registry of Motor Vehicles from seeling names to catalogues. That, she said, "is an invasion of privacy."

□ The South Shore League voted on All Stars for the fall sports recently, and Cohasset was well represented once again! When you consider the size of our enrollment, and see the number of athletes that represent us, that is a feat indeed. Congratulations to all of you.

□ Hats off to the Cohasset Strutters, who participated in the Governor Cup Walk. It took place at the Boston Common and there were over 5,000 walkers there. Cohasset's own Edna Towle finished the three mile walk in 39 minutes, a grand time to be sure. We are proud of you!

At what price?

Last week, the attorney representing the new owners of The Oaks estate revealed their willingness to negotiate with the town. The deal would be: the town's approval of 109 boat slips around the Cohasset Harbor in return for town ownership of the 58-room mansion once owned by the late Jessie Cox.

There are some people in town who are very anxious to work out some deal that would lead to town ownership of the Oaks mansion. A few years ago, before Yankee Oil purchased the harborside property, the town had an opportunity to buy it.

Since that time, Yankee Oil went bankrupt and was forced to sell the property for the highest price. The town could not compete with the millions of dollars available to some private developers.

A group of investors, Oaks Realty Trust, purchased the mansion and the land last spring. Since that time, they have appeared several times before town boards, and discussed proposals for the future use of the property.

At this time, the four owners have not publicly stated what they want to do with the house. Everything, they say, is contigent on what they are allowed to do with the waterfront property.

Their proposal is to construct 109 boat slips around the perimeter of the land. They have a lot of obstacles to overcome - including conservation commission approval and a permit from the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering and the Army Corps of Engineers.

The owners have contracted the services of many professionals to help them along the way - including environmental engineers and attorneys.

But it wasn't until last week that the attorney representing the owners publicly stated their offer to give the mansion to the town in return for approval of the waterfront project.

To some, that may appear like blackmail. Although in the corporation's headquarters, it is simply business as usual. You scratch my back, and I'll scratch yours.

It's an enticing offer. The mansion could be used in a number of ways, including a possible town library. The existing library could be converted in a number of creative ways that could mean more revenue for the town.

The town of Cohasset has always wanted to keep the harbor away from hungry developers, and this would be one way to honor that commitment.

But at what price?

A lot of people in this town are wary of an additional 109 boats in this small harbor. There are environmental concerns as well as safety worries. Should we skirt over those issues just to capture the big prize?

The offer was made to the town - you do what we ask, and we'll reward you. You reject this offer, and you've got a battle on your hands. No matter how pretty you package that message, it still sounds like blackmail to us.

Church urges end to hunger in U.S.

To the Editor:

An "offering of letters" will be sent to the President Elect from members of the Second Congregational Church urging him to lead the nation in efforts to reduce hunger, both in the United States and around the world. A letter writing party will be held at the church following the morning worship service Sunday, Nov. 20.

This appeal is being spearheaded by Bread for the World among churches throughout the United States. The appeal has been endorsed by the Board of Trustees of the Second Congregational Church.

In its appeal BFW notes, in our country millions of children still go hungry. Worldwide, hundreds of millions are hungry. So are countless adults. We can overcome hunger if we muster the will to do so. Four ways to do this are stressed by BFW:

(1) Education — Ensure that nutrition and health education reaches vulnerable children in the United States.

(2) Jobs with adequate pay — Provide employment with adequate pay for all who can work.

Letters

(3) Reduce our contribution to conflict — Find ways to reduce arms spending and military aid, which promote conflict in the Third World and lead to famine and misery.

(4) Relieve Third World Debt — Reduce the massive debt burden on economically poor countries that falls heavily on the poorest people.

The letter writing campaign is timed to give the new President an overwhelming show of support for action by the Federal government for hunger relief by the time he takes office next January. In further stressing this appeal, BFW said, "The solution to hunger walks on two legs. One leg is private voluntary assistance — always essential. The other leg is public policy. We must use both legs if we hope to succeed."

Vo-tech hosts annual tour day

To the Editor:

On November 17, 1988, the South Shore Vocational Technical High School is holding its annual Tour Day. Cohasseteighth-graders arebeing invited to visit the School and acquaint themselves with the seventeen vocational-technical programs which are available. These programs prepare students for careers that are fulfilling and financially rewarding. Each year in Cohasset about fifteen students graduate from the local high school and enter the job market without the skills that are offered at South Shore VoTech. This is a good alternative for such students.

Parents of eighth-graders are invited to visit the VoTech Open House, also on November 17th, 6-9 p.m. to see for themselves and to ask questions about opportunities for their children. Many students have greater aptitude for vocational training than for academics. At VoTech, both types of training are included and each year about 15% of graduates go on to higher education including four-year college. VoTech has a balanced program of academics and vocational/technical training plus sports and other extra-curricular activities.

Eighth-graders and their parents should visit South Shore VoTech and give these programs serious consideration. Further information can be obtained by calling the Guidance Office, 1-871-4153 or me, 383-6245.

A chronology of Minot Light reconstruction

By David Wadsworth
Special to the Mariner

The year-long project to renovate the uppermost section of historic Minot's Ledge Lighthouse, begun during the summer of 1987, has continued through 1988 and completion of the $300,000 reconstruction now appears in sight.

Recently, a U.S. Coast Guard survey of the 114' high granite tower disclosed numerous deep fractures and cracks in the walls of the light's Watch Room, its uppermost granite section. To prevent further damage to the stone structure, Coast Guard Engineers decided to replace the 42 granite blocks of the Watch Room with identical newly-cut blocks.

During the summer of 1987 the topmost part of the tower; its finely-crafted copper spire and globe, its copper-domed roof, and its Lantern House having framework of brass (called "mullions") and thick glass windows, was carefully disassembled and stored, to be used again when the light would be reassembled. Also saved were large brass deck plates forming the walkway atop the Watch Room.

From inside the Watch Room itself an antique "rotating mechanism" or lantern stand of iron, standing 9' high, was brought ashore to be preserved for its historical importance. The great blocks of granite forming Minot's circular "Watch Room" were separated from the structure by stone-masons to be brought ashore one-by-one in a spectacular helicopter airlift. Weighing in at about 2,200 to nearly 4,000 pounds apiece, each was lowered to the ground at Government Island, Cohasset Harbor, scarcely a score of yards from the site where they had been carefully cut and formed more than a century and a quarter ago. Some of the blocks were to be taken to New Hampshire to serve as patterns for those which would form the new Watch Room of Minot's.

As Contractor for the Minot's Ledge Light renovation the Coast Guard chose Gayle Electric Company of Whippenny, N.J., veterans of numerous lighthouse renovations. Stonecutting of the new granite blocks would be done by Barretto Co. of Milford, N.H. Roughly-cut granite for the Watch Room came from Virginia and was chosen for its close resemblance to the original stone used at Minot's, Quincy Granite from the quarries of nearby Quincy (the quarries at Quincy have long-since closed).

During winter and spring of 1987-88 new granite blocks were carefully cut to replicate the originals of the Watch Room and in July of this year were brought from New Hampshire to the Cohasset shore. Soon they were airlifted by helicopter the 2½ miles to the offshore lighthouse at Outer Minot's Ledge. Through August the work of assembling and locking together the blocks continued, and Minot's Light began to reassume its familiar form. Each of the four "courses" or levels of stone was carefully fitted and locked together until the Watch Room itself was completed, identical to the original design.

September saw the beginning of reassembly of Minot's Lantern House and uppermost structure. Deck plates, mullions and other original parts stored ashore a year earlier now were returned to the light in preparation for their re-use. Wherever Minot's original fittings could be utilized again they were used, as part of the historical preservation of the famous tower.

Painstakingly, working to most exact specifications, Gayle Electric Company's crew worked to duplicate the original appearance of Minot's Light. Deck plates, mullions and roof frame now have been reassembled, and work continues through the stormy weather of the autumn season. More than once, workmen have had to cease working and abandon the tower as fall's "Nor'east" storms rendered Minot's inaccessible. The only means of access to the light is by small boat, followed by a climb up the high exterior ladder leading from ocean to entrance door halfway up the side of the tower. Minot's Ledge Light has been described as the most dangerous lighthouse in the world to enter or leave; the least accessible of all lighthouses.

This fall, workmen at the light discovered for themselves the accuracy of that description, as they remained inside the tower for a number of days, separated from land by a surging and storm-wracked sea. A fall season "Sou'easter," lasting several days, drove ocean waves against the lighthouse in a way that ruled out approach by boat or vessel. Thus, perhaps for the first time since Minot's was automated in the mid-1940's and its Keepers assigned to other stations, a lighthouse crew has had the unique experience of "riding out" an ocean storm on the tower, an experience often described in old log-books of the Lighthouse Keepers and sometimes recalled by Cohasseters who served with the lighthouse crews in earlier years.

Renovation of the historic 128-year-old ocean lighthouse at Outer Minot's Ledge now continues through this fall season, and soon the familiar gleam of its lantern signaling the famous 1-4-3 should be visible to reassure those who journey on the sea as well as those who keep watch from the land's edge.

Anniversary of North Scituate railroad station

By Mila Bates Dixon
Mariner correspondent

Thursday, Nov. 10 was the 79th anniversary of the laying of the cornerstone for a new $20,000 North Scituate railroad station that now houses several small businesses.

Built by the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, operator of all Old Colony lines, the new station was completed in 1910.

It replaced an antiquated wooden structure which was opened in 1871 when the South Duxbury and Cohasset joined up with the South Shore Railroad at Cohasset and began moving southerly. The South Shore Railroad had been operating since 1849 between Cohasset and Braintree where it joined the Old Colony Line running between Boston and Plymouth.

The two smaller railroads were sold in 1878 to the Old Colony Railroad and were operated under the Old Colony name. In 1893, the New York New Haven and Hartford Railroad leased the Old Colony, making it a division of the larger system.

Service from South Duxbury was cut back to Greenbush in 1939 and, on June 30, 1959, all service on the Old Colony Division — to Greenbush, Plymouth and Cape Cod — was terminated.

The laying of the cornerstone for the new station was a big event — schools were closed for the afternoon so the children could attend, stores in the village were closed, flags were flown throughout the village and on private homes, and a huge flag covered the area where the cornerstone was to be laid.

About 1,200 persons attended, including 300 summer people on board two railroad cars attached to the 12:43 p.m. train from Boston; others came by automobiles and carriages from nearby towns.

The following is from the Nov. 11, 1909, Boston Herald, reporting the events of the day before: At the ceremony, Harry E. Mapes of the railroad's real estate division predicted that within the next decade (1920) "North Scituate Beach and vicinity would see electric service on the railroad, more trains and lower fares."

William H. North, a Boston businessman and North Scituate beach summer resident who also was the town's park commissioner, was credited with working tirelessly with railroad engineers to obtain a new station after the town had voted to discontinue a short street and the railroad agreed to abolish a grade crossing in order to build the new station just south of the original station.

Main speaker was Henry Turner Bailey, former member of the state board of education and well-known author. He spoke on "The North Scituate Station from the Viewpoint of a Townsman."

According to the newspaper report, he gave "many interesting historical facts about transportation from the time of the old packet lines from Hingham and Cohasset. He also told how Samuel Gannet used to start from North Scituate at 1 o'clock in the morning to walk to his work in Salem and walk home again on Saturday."

The ceremony concluded with the placing of a sealed steel box containing the plans for the new station, photographs of the site before buildings were removed, town records and other memorabilia in the cornerstone. No date for opening the box was reported.

According to the newspaper report, "One of the most interesting spectators at the exercises was former Postmaster Alfred A. Seaverns of North Scituate, who with his wife bought the first railroad tickets ever sold from North Scituate to Boston in 1871."

It is probably a coincidence, but next Wednesday on the eve of this station anniversary, the Scituate Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring a panel discussion on the social and economic impact of the proposed Greenbush line restoration project. The program will be preceded by dinner at Barker's Tavern. For information, call C. of C. vice president, Ann Cusick, at 545-1190.

The panelists are expected to discuss not only the site for the Greenbush station/parking lot-garage, but also alternatives for a new North Scituate station site — the previously-announced rear of Anderson Fuel Inc.'s property on Gannett Road or the property of the former South Shore Publishing Company, once the town's largest employer.

Panelists will be the MBTA's project manager, Steve Polechronis; North Scituate businessmen Harvey Gates and Gilman Wilder; Selectman Joseph Norton, and Safety Officer Bruce Hallgren of the police department. James Hunt, chamber director, will be moderator.

Recreation ski trip information . . .

The Cohasset Recreation Department will again this year sponsor a number of day ski trips to New Hampshire.

The costs vary from trip to trip, however, fee reflects the exact cost of each trip.

The first trip will be Sunday, Dec. 18, to Loon Mt. Registrations are now being accepted. Participants will have to be registered before Thursday, Nov. 10.

Generally prices range from $34 to $45 per person for the package, (ie: transportation and lift tickets). Rentals and lessons are an added cost and are not yet available, except for the December 18, Loon Mt. Trip. That will cost $11 per person for non-beginners, (ie: transportation and lift tickets except for gondola), and $40 for beginner package which includes transportation, beginner slopes lift ticket, lesson and equipment rental.

The $40 package will put you on the novice slopes with a lesson and all your gear for the day. Generally, buses will leave from town hall at 5:30 a.m. and return about 7:30 p.m.

Participants should report to town hall at 5:15 a.m. and parents should be at town hall for pick-up at 7:15 p.m. in the evening. The recreation office will be open both in the morning and at night for use of the bathrooms and telephones.

While registration will be accepted by telephone, they are not confirmed until payment has been made. Trips are registered individually and payments must be made by the designated time or the trip may not be conducted. It is essential that payments are made within the specified time limits.

A waiting list is usually maintained for the ski trip roster. If you are unable to make a trip that you have already paid for, call the recreation office as soon as possible. If no one is in, leave a message on the recorder. Messages will be checked as late as 9 p.m. the evening before the trip.

Because of the waiting list you will most probably be replaced on the tirp which will guarantee a complete refund. Should a replacement not be available, you will be refunded your lift ticket money, but will have to pay for your seat on the bus, or about 60 percent the fee amount.

Should you miss the bus in the morning, you have a couple of options. First, you might be able to catch up with the bus while it is still on the back roads, before reaching Route 3. Second, if you can get to the ski area, you can check in with our chaperone and come home on the bus. In either case, check with the recreation director at the recreation office, before doing anything.

The recreation department will have at least two chaperones on each bus. The chaperones are there to assist you should you require it, make certain everyone receives the proper rentals and lift tickets. The chaperones and ski patrol are also on the mountain all day. There have never been any serious accidents, over the years the department has been conducting ski trips. The recreation director will be available to receive calls from the chaperones and/or ski patrol in the event of an accident. Parents will be called right away. Therefore, if you are not going to be at your home phone during the day, please leave a number where we can reach you in case of an emergency situation.

Trips are for all aged students and usually all levels of competence. Chaperones are available to help less experienced participants with any problems they might encounter. Should a participant feel uneasy about skiing it is advised that they sign-up for a lesson before they attempt the slopes.

Lessons are usually available for all levels of instruction. Those interested in taking a lesson should indicate that at the time of registration. It is suggested that novice skiers who do not own their own equipment, rent equipment for their first trip. Rentals are always available at the ski areas, but it is also possible to rent locally before the trip.

Eating is allowed on the buses and it is suggested that participants bring something to eat along with money so they are able to buy hot lunch. Motor coaches are equiped with lavatories and we do not generally stop on the trips. Therefore you should also bring a snack for the bus ride.

It is suggested that skiers bring some dry clothes with them on the trips, such as an extra set of socks and gloves as well as boots other than ski boots. The motor coaches have space under the buses which is not heated. Skis' and poles must be stored there. However, it is a good idea to keep ski boots on the bus in order to keep them warm.

While we enforce no strict age or skill requirements for the trip, the department suggests that children under the age of 9 who are not regular skiers do not attend. It is a long day, and the chaperones do not have the time to help large numbers of children with their equipment.

Also, the average age is about 13 or 14, and children under the age of 9 may feel out of place. If your child is under the age of 9 and you wish to send him or her, consult with the director of recreation before registering.

A parental information and consent form must be completed and signed by parents or guardians at the recreation office. However, tentative registration will be accepted by phone.

Registration times will be from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday or by special time arrangement.

Holiday auction in Norwell Nov. 19

A holiday auction featuring an array of goods and services donated by South Shore merchants and residents will be held Saturday, Nov. 19, at 6:30 p.m. at the Cushing Center (formerly the Town Hall) in Norwell Center.

The preview time will be just prior to the auction, with cash bar and light buffet followed by coffee and dessert. Participants will be fortunate to have Hanover auctioneer Joan Caddigan wielding the gavel once again this year.

The exceptional list of articles to be auctioned includes tickets for sporting and cultural events, town and country vacation accommodations, fishing and sailing cruises, framed original art work, and much more. Proceeds from the auction will benefit the Montessori Community School located at 136 Cornet Stetson Road (Route 123) in Scituate. Sponsored by the Parent Advisory Board, the auction's goal is to raise money for an ambitious expansion program.

Some of the most attractive items in the auction are Celtics tickets, Red Sox tickets, Boston Symphony Orchestra tickets, and four hours of limousine service in a 30-foot limousine. Among the outstanding vacation options are a one-week hotel stay at Disney World, one week at a summer home on Cape Cod, one week at a New Hampshire log cabin, a 4-night hotel stay in St. Thomas, a weekend at a Maine ski condo, a weekend at the Guest Quarters Suite (Boston), and a night at the Boston Harbor Hotel.

Sports and recreation items donated include a one-week cruise off Cape Cod on a 35-foot sailboat, a day of fishing/cruising with lunch for four on a 33-foot Sport Fisherman, and tickets plus hotel accommodations for the Westchester Golf Classic.

For further information or advance tickets, please call the School at 545-5544. The Montessori Community School offers educational programs for children from pre-school through Grade 6.

The student body is composed of families from 13 South Shore towns, including Scituate, Norwell, Marshfield, Hingham, Hanover, Hull, Pembroke, Duxbury, Cohasset, Kingston, Weymouth, Brockton, and Quincy.

Hull firefighter talks with 4th graders

Recently Mr. Larry Adams, a Hull firefighter, came to our class to talk about safety.

Mr. Adams brought an ax, fire-fighting apparatus, brochures and surprised the class when an ambulance from Cohasset arrived. The children were delighted to actually walk through the ambulance and see the equipment. A class discussion followed and we were fascinated with Mr. Adams stories especially the Hingham Center Fire and the house that caught fire when a curling iron was left on.

School news

Early release day Nov. 17

Thursday, Nov. 17 will be an early release day in the Cohasett Public Schools.

There will be no afternoon kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule: Junior/Senior High School, noon; Deer Hill School, 12:40 p.m.; Joseph Osgood School, 12:50 p.m.

Lunch will be served in the elementary schools and the food service will be available at the Junior/Senior High School.

This early release day has been approved by the Cohasset School Committee to allow the staff at the elementary schools to participate in grade-level meetings and the staff at the junior/senior high school to participate in department meetings to review curriculum.

Good bye to Marilyn Pope

Last Thursday, Nov. 3 was definitely Marilyn Pope Day here in Cohasset.

Not only did the community grown-ups and children alike turn out in great numbers at Deer Hill School to wish her well, but there was also an official proclamation (hand delivered) from the state house, thanks to Senator William Golden and Representative Mary Jeanette Murray. It was a joyful occasion as everyone crowded 'round to chat and tell Marilyn how much they missed her; she acknowledged that she missed people here very much too, but that she also loved her new position as children's/young adult and reference librarian at the Middleboro Pubic Library too. . .lucky Middleboro.

Thanks to the PSO, especially Karen Devine and all the room mothers who responded to her calls with baked goodies and drinks. . .(they were delicious). Also to all the young people at Osgood, Deer Hill and the jr./sr. high school who signed the farewell/thank you scrolls for Mrs. Pope. Thanks also to Mrs. Atkinson at Osgood for the beautiful calligraphy on the scroll and Maura Young for her art work on the high school scroll.

Gifts were presented to Marilyn by Martha Equi for the PSO and by the staff at the three school libraries, along with the scrolls from the children and of course the offical proclamation.

Marilyn's work in the schools was truly unique — story telling, bringing classroom book deposits, and somehow knowing just the right book for a particular child. She knew the children and their interests, and seemingly, without effort, would bring the child and the perfect book together — pure magic. . .not unlike her story telling. And she's promised when she comes back to visit later this year she'll tell some of those wonderful tales, which are her trademark — I can hardly wait.

Thanks to all of you who made it such a memorable occasion for Marilyn.

Thanksgiving presentation

The 5th and 6th grade open space are now planning their 12th annual Thanksgiving presentation for the other students at Deer Hill School. The students in open space will be inviting their parents and grand parents to a Thanksgiving dinner in their classroom. It's on Nov. 22 at 10:45 .m. The students are starting research on the Thanksgiving project and soon will be decorating the class room for the presentation.

Council meeting date change

The first special education parents advisory council meeting has been rescheduled. It will now take palce Thursday, Nov. 17 at 7 p.m. in the Superintendent's office to discuss the development of our Annual special Education Program Plan.

All are welcome to attend.

Halloween celebrated

Monday, Oct. 31, the fourth third grade classes celebrated Halloween at the South Shore Natural Science Center. The children attended a lecture which was highlighted with a live Boa Constrictor named Leroy. During a woodland walk, the students saw various examples of plant life, such as lichen, moss and the endangered species, princess pine. The haunted house which was toured was populated with spiders, skulls and several stuffed animals, i.e., a chimpanzee. This great learning experience was culminated with a picnic lunch in the autumn sun.

Students visit Boston Whaler

The fourth grade class was treated to a presentation at the Boston Whaler in Norwell on October 25 and 28. The students attended a video presentation which included the history of the Boston Whaler, manufacturing process used at the Boston Whaler and scenes from "Spenser for Hire" that used the Boston Whaler as a location.

The presentation also included a talk on the types of jobs and skills that are needed by the boat company.

A discussion on boat safety was held and then the students were allowed to view and handle the boats manufactured in Norwell. The students were given fliers and a key ring from the boat company.

We would like to thank Mr. Foster, head of public relations, who arranged the program at the Boston Whaler and the delicious snack of cookies and milk.

TIC helped inform voters

The buzzword for the 1988 election has been "informed voters."

It's difficult enough for the average person to keep abreast of the multitude of information, issues, ballot questions and candidates in a national election, but when that is compounded by an inability to read the ballot, it becomes an almost insurmountable obstacle.

But for the 6,000 visually impaired listeners of the Talking Information Center (TIC), there was help.

During the past month, TIC's station manager Bob Daly has been presenting snippets of information detailing every ballot question and every candidate on each ballot throughout the state.

TIC is a radio reading service based in Marshfield with additional radio outlets in Boston, North Dartmouth, Worcester and Falmouth.

The service is also available on 75 cable television outlets throughout Massachusetts.

The center provides the reading of daily newspapers, best selling books, calendars of community events, supermarket and department store ads, current periodicals, senior citizen information and educational information.

The service is on the air 17 hours daily, seven days each week.

All of the reading is performed by volunteer readers under the direction of a small, professional staff.

For more information about receiving TIC's service, making a donation to the non-profit service or becoming a volunteer, call the Center at (617) 834-4400 or 1-800-992-9505.

League rules provide for an equal division of playing time, emphasizing the team concept of play and sportsmanship, rather than just winning. Team rosters, schedules and specific rules will be provided at the first game.

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept registrations for ski lessons on Monday, and Tuesday, Nov. 28 and 29, from 2:20 to 4:40 pm., both days, and Thursday, Dec. 1, from 6 to 7:30 pm. at the recreation office, 1st floor, Town Hall.

There are five 1 3/4 hour sessons. Parents must register children as a release form must be signed. Checks are to be made payable to: Town of Cohasset.

Lessons are scheduled to begin on Thursday, Jan. 5. The fee covers lessons and transportation to and from Blue Hills for the five weeks. Equipment rental is $11 per sesson, payable in full ($55) at the time of registration.

Classes are offered for all levels of instruction, however, participants must be seven years of age. Busses will leave from the town hall parking lot at about 3:15 and return at about 6:45 p.m. Parents who wish to go as volunteer chaperones may sign-up during registration.

SOCCER COACHES

Many thanks to the 1988 soccer coaches who gave freely of their time and expertice, affording 400 children the chance to play and learn the game. It would be impossible to conduct a program of this magnitude if it were not for the interest of parents.

Village fair preparations

Feasts for the eye and feasts for the palate will be featured at the 48th Village Fair. Tables laden with home-cooked delicacies, and racks with holiday specialties will be featured when the Fair opens at 10 a.m. Saturday, Dec. 3.

With only a short time left, workers are busy at home and in church buildings crafting and assembling the items for sale.

As usual, a focus for many holiday shoppers will be the racks of wreaths that a corps of workers have decorated in Wednesday mornings meetings at the home of Kathy Pratt on King Street. Merle Graham and Jean Manganaro, leaders of the wreath effort, welcome additional hands at any of these sessions.

Boutique preparation has expanded to the extent that responsibility for this major feature has been taken on by the Central Committee itself, directing and monitoring the work of many hands in homes and church buildings. All year long, Boutique workers have searched craft magazines and attended other fairs collecting ingenious ideas for novelties they will offer in Cohasset.

A number of committees are making their preparations for the attractions that will satisfy appetites on Fair Day. While a group headed by Debbie Anderson of the Second Congregational Church canvasses members of the five congregations for donations of baked goods, another group headed by Nancy and Wallace St. John of St. Stephen's Church is making contact with candy-makers for a supply of the sweets that often are quickly bought up in the early hours of the Fair.

Since the addition of the Panagia Greek Orthodox congregation to the sponsoring group of churches, Greek food has been one of the special attractions of the Fair. Jim Dedes heads the effort to bring a generous supply of these appealing confections and staples to the food table.

Long standing food features of the Fair will again be in familiar hands as Marilyn and Rod Hobson staff their productive popcorn machine and Ham Tewksbury presides over an offering of choice cheeses.

Catering to the appetites of young and old alike will be the popular Snack Bar, this year manned by a group headed by Peter Guild of the Congregational Church, offering hot dogs and soft drinks throughout the day. The vestry of the Congregational Church will again be the locus of the Chowder Bar which historically caters to a near standing-room-only clientele for an extended lunch period. Ralph and Susi Coley are the presiding chefs of this busy enterprise.

Senior Center news...

The Massachusetts Association of Council on Aging and Senior Center Directors held it's 1988 Annual Conference on Wednesday and Thursday, October 26 and 27 at the Royal Plaza Hotel, Marlborough. This year's conference there was: The COA challenge, changing needs future choices.

The conference addressed a variety of issues and concerns facing the future level services and programs for Council on Aging will need to provide within continuing growing older population here in Massachusetts. Some of the topics covered during the two day conference: Guardianship issues for older adults, Housing design for an aging population, Insurance, Shine, Medicare regulations, Consortium training, grant resources, the Private Sector. Also planned on Thursday, was a plenary legislative session with discussion on the Legislative process.

Presenters included: Franklin P. Ollivierre, Director of Region I administration on Aging, Paul J. Lanzikos, Secretary of Executive Office of Elder Affairs, Congressman, Joseph D. Early, 3rd Congressional District, Sen. John P. Houston, 1st Worcester and Middlesex District., Rep. Sherwood Guerney, 2nd Berkshire District, Williamstown.

This distinguished panel of legislators and policy makers addressed many legislative issues relative to aging and programs which will affect all of us in trying to continue and expand the board array of programs and services available now and what will be needed in the future for all elders in Massachusetts.

Thursday, Kathy Bryanton, Director, Cohasset Council of Aging, and Inez Hegerty, Amherst COA Board member, nominating committee chair, presented "Who would be a good board member: Council on Aging Board membership and recruitment." Ms. Sally Knox, Community Coordinator for Councils on Aging and Senior Centers, Executive Office Elder Affairs, Boston, acted as Moderator for the panel. The two hour workshop focused on who would be a good Council on Aging Board Member? Do Board members have responsibilities? How do you recruit new members? A Council is most effective when it draws upon the knowledge and experience of it's community, individual members, and then it is able to speak with one voice.

The conference is open to all interested persons. This year the conference represented 340 local COA's programs across the State. Over 200 people attended with 90 percent being Council on Aging Board Members, staff and volunteers. The conference organized by Bobbie Kaman, Exec. Director of M.C.O.A. organized the conference to enhance and expand ones knowledge of the concerns and opportunities that lie ahead in times when public monies are getting tighter and tighter. Expanded communication and increased work on the local level, remain the key to the development of innovative policies and programs in addressing the complex needs of our growing elderly population.

SERMONS ON STEWARDSHIP

The Rectory has begun a series of sermons on stewardship with words of thanksgiving and the quality of our lives. In each succeeding week there will be a sermon on the stewardship of our time, talents, and money. Helpful letters will be sent out as well as pledge cards to facilitate our giving. God is doing wonderful things in the church and the world to which we can be a part. On Sunday, November 20 the choir will sing a cantata in the place of a sermon. Our offerings for the new year will be gathered in on that day.

CHOIR TO SING CANTATA

The Last Sunday of the Church Year is Christ The King Sunday, a last chance to celebrate the Triumphant Saviour before we begin a new cycle with the season of Advent. Nov. 20, Christ the King Sunday, the choir will sing Cantata No. 79 "Gott, der Herr, ist Sonn und Schild" by J.S. Bach in place of the sermon. This Cantata was written for the Reformation Sunday and uses as a base for the text Psalm 84:10-12. Bach also incorporates the Chorale "Now Thank We all our God" both as the central chorale and as thematic material in the opening chorus. This Cantata is a joyous celebration of how God provides and protects those who love him.

NATIONAL DAY OF PRAYER

The Presiding Bishop of the Episcopal Church, The Most Rev. Edmond L. Browning, has asked us on Sunday, Nov. 13, to pray for those living with AIDS, and to pray for the whole Body of Christ, afflicted by this disease in its members.

He has said, "While AIDS continues to mock our late-twentieth-century view that humankind is in control of all which surrounds us, we Christians especially are called to proclaim and to live a renewed resurrection faith which declares that in the midst of death — young and painful death — we are in the very midst of life and joy."

WORKSHOP FOR THE LAITY

The Rev. Canon Bryan Green, priest, evangelist, and author, will hold a workshop for all lay members of the church on Saturday, Nov. 19 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at All Saints' Parish, 209 Ashmont Street. The cost is $5 with checks payable to: "All Saints' Rector's Fund." This fee includes lunch. Registrations should be sent to All Saints' in Boston, 02124.

Much can be said of Bryan Green. Perhaps Bishop Coleman McGehee of Michigan says it best. In 1952 his life was changed by the English Evangelist Bryan Green. "When I heard him speak, for the first time in my adult life, the meaning of the Christian faith really spoke to me. That's when I made a decision and committed myself to Jesus Christ. . .I had never thought of Jesus Christ as being divine. That was the thing that really struck me. Then I came to see that everything the man Jesus said and did in his lifetime were things I could understand God to be saying and doing."

VILLAGE FAIR NEWS: CORRECTION

The drop-off of items for the Bargain Bazzar at St. Anthony's Rectory has been postponed. I will let you know when a drop-off place has been established with the times available as soon as possible.

Only six more weeks till the Village Fair! We have been busy all Fall coordinating with St. Stephen's Church, who is hosting the fair this year. Most tables have been busily working all Fall to get ready. If you are able to donate items for the Children's Table, Secret Room, or Boutique Table, please let us know.

I am also chairing the Food Table this year. If you are interested in volunteering to work on this table, please let me know. I need volunteers to help call our congregation as well as workers during the fair. We need your support. Let us know what you will do! Debbie Anderson 383-6345, Linda Campbell 383-0021.

Missionary Priest to visit parish

Fr. Daniel Na, of the Orthodox Church in Korea will be visiting the parish of the Nativity-Assumption of the Virgin Mary 819 Jerusalem Road, November 14, for a presentation on the Orthodox Church in Korea and his own missionary efforts.

Working under the auspices of the Archdiocesan Mission Center of the Greek Orthodox Church in America, he is returning back to the Boston area for the first time after having completed his theological training from Hellenic College-Holy Cross Seminary in Brookline, Mass.

Fr. Na is married to Olympia, and they have two children Constantine and Antonios. This 1988 Mission Lecture tour is sponsored by the Archdiocese Board of Missions to increase knowledge about the various mission programs that the Church conducts as well as information on the Orthodox Church in Korea.

Orthodoxy was first introduced in Korea by Russian Orthodox missionaries in 1897. In 1903, the first church of St. Nicholas was erected in Seoul. By 1917 there were twelve parishes. After the Russian revolution much needed aid from Russia ceased, but the Church in Korea remained under its jurisdiction through 1949, with only the parish in Seoul still functioning.

From 1950 to 1954, the Church in Korea remained without a priest and seemed destined for extinction because of the unrest that prevailed at that time in the country. During the Korean War, soldiers from Greece and their Chaplain took an interest in the community and helped rebuild and revitalize the St. Nicholas Church in Seoul, which had been destroyed in the war. Assisting in this effort also were American and Ethiopian Orthodox servicemen.

In 1956, the Church in Korea came under the jurisdiction of the Ecumenical Patriarchate of Constantinople (Istanbul) and was assigned to the care of the Greek Orthodox Archdiocese of North and South America.

Today there are parishes in Seoul, Pusan and Inchon and several mission communities. Two of the present clergy, The Rev. Dr. Athanasios Yoo and Fr. Daniel Na received their theological training at the Holy Cross School of Theology. In 1982, the Church in Korea also established a Seminary to train clergy locally. The seminary is headed by Archimandrite Soterios Trambas, a missionary of the Ecumenical Patriarchate. Fr. Daniel is a member of the faculty, in addition to his parish duties in Inchon and the mission communities.

Fr. Na's presentation will begin at 8 p.m. at the parish house and all are cordially invited to attend.

Teens rise early to study religion

Here on the South Shore some twenty high school students rise about 5:30 a.m. to attend a religious study class that meets before school starts. These students are participating in a program designed for high school age boys and girls of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints who want to learn more about their religion.

This year locally Amy Arkell, Dan Arkell, Jon Garrison, Warren Lynch, all of Hingham; Todd Woodbury of Cohasset; Mitch Mangum of Norwell; Chris Colburn of Rockland; and Chris Cain of Weymouth are participating in the Church's world-wide program called Seminary.

It's on to semi-final soccer action for CHS

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

In high school soccer, the Cass family of Duxbury is well known on the South Shore. However, the name Reidy is fast becoming synonomous in Cohasset.

Twin brothers Jim and Joel led Cohasset (16-2-1) to a 2-0, first-round Division Three victory over Canton (8-5-4) in the EMASS South Sectionals November 2.

Goalkeeper Joel earned his ninth shutout of the season, although his day was a comparatively easy one. Brother Jim scored both Skippers' goals (his 24th and 25th).

"It seems like they have been around for a long time," Cohasset Coach Dan Magner said of the Reidys, "but they are only juniors.

"Joel had to make only one save of a shot on net, but he was active." Late in the game, Joel came out almost to the right corner to knock the ball off a Canton player's foot.

Magner, whose teams have won the South Shore League Small Schools Division the last four years, credited defense for Reidy's easy day in the goal.

'Jay Staunton did a great job defensively for us as did Jim Gallagher," Magner said. "I was reasonably pleased with our effort, although we were slow to get started. If we want to stay alive, we are going to have to put a whole game together."

The Skippers, who have lost in overtime in the state finals the last two years, saw an aggressive Canton squad carry the play for the first several minutes of each half.

Forward Jim Reidy had eight scoring chances in the first half, but he was either off target or saved by the Canton goalie.

With 9:59 left in the game, right winger Jason Cameron hustled down the sidelines to keep the ball inbounds and fed it in front from the right corner. Both Reidy and the Canton goalie went for it, but Reidy won the battle, crossing his right foot behind the left one and tipping the ball with the right heel. It was an amazing athletic move.

At 37:30, Reidy picked up a rebound of an indirect free kick from inside the penalty area and scored.

With the victory, Cohasset advanced to the quarter finals at Milliken Field November 4. From there, the Skippers made it two-for-two with a 2-1 decision over Nauset in Division Three South action.

Goals by Jim Reidy and Matt Beggan (his second for the season) paved the way for the Skippers.

"Nauset was a very well-skilled team," said Magner. "they passed the ball around well, but we hustled throughout the whole game and that was the difference."

The Skippers took a 1-0 lead, 27 minutes into the contest when Reidy beat the Nauset goalie to the ball to head in a long, bouncing pass from Beggan. It was his 26th goal of the season, extending the school's season-high total of 22 set by David Schultz (1985) and Todd Fitzpatrick (1987). In addition, Reidy collected his 53rd goal of his career. Beggan made it 2-0, converting a corner kick by Reidy (his 90th point of his career) at the 15-minute mark of the second half.

Cohasset goalie Joel Reidy (10 saves) kept Nauset (12-3-1) off the board until they scored on a 20-yard kick.

Senior captain Ned Chase was a key performer for Cohasset, playing both forward and halfback.

Cohasset will play at Sacred Heart (Kingston) this week in Div. 3 South semifinals action. The number-one seeded team (18-1) will try to derail the two-time defending state finalists.

Field Hockey

The Cohasset High School field hockey team ended the fall season on a disheartening note. But, according to head coach Claire Brady, it could have gone either way.

With 10 seconds left in the first overtime, West Bridgewater (13-2-2) scored the game-winner, pulling out a 4-3 decision over the visiting Skippers (7-9-1).

"The kids played really well. I am pleased with our success this season. We only had three returning players and we put it together somehow. There were good goals scored by both teams," said Brady.

Indeed there were.

Sophomore forward Barbara Lagrotteria put the Skippers on the scoreboard with her eighth goal of the season at the 12-minute mark. Senior Sara Bishop assisted on the play when she passed the ball from the corner of the net.

After West Bridgewater tied the game at one, Cohasset regained the lead towards the closing minutes of the half. Bishop was credited with the goal on a rebound in front of the net.

In the second half, WB tied it again, but Bishop's second goal of the contest from a Kim Dwyer pass gave Cohasset the lead, 3-2.

From there, WB connected on the equalizer with three minutes left in regulation.

Both teams had equal scoring opportunities at the end, but were turned away by the goaltenders.

The game-winning score came off a corner shot.

"West Bridgewater (the number-three seed in the tournament) is a good team. They have a lot of good goal scorers. We wanted to contain their frontline," added Brady, whose club captured the South Shore League Small Schools title with a sub-par 500 record (a first-place team automatically qualifies for the state tournament despite their record. This also applies to the second-place club which happened to be Hull).

Brady praised goalie Candi Jones, captain halfback Jackie Lydon and Missy Nothnagle (link) for their efforts throughout the game.

Football

Running back John Graham scored a pair of touchdowns, including an 85-yard, second-half kickoff as Abington soundly defeated Cohasset (1-7 overall, 1-5 SSL Small Schools), 36-20, last Saturday afternoon.

Host Abington (6-2, 4-2 league) gained 293 total yards. Junior quarterback Ed Reilly completed five of six passes for 65 yards and rushed for 89 yards on six carries. Reilly scored the Green Wave's first touchdown on a one-yard run in the first quarter.

After Kirk Sindberg's eight-yard TD run gave Abington a 29-0 lead, the Skippers scored three times in the fourth quarter. Senior running back Paul Froio (150 yards, 26 carries) scored twice and Curt Ludlow once.

"Our defensive (Eric Theriault, Matt Deveney, Mike Meers, Chris Froio and Sean McCarthy) did a formidable job," said CHS football coach Phil Pisano. "It was the best offensive display of football we've had in some time. Defensively, we gave too many big plays, especially on the outside. In the middle and in the secondary we showed improvement. We just got burned outside."

Cohasset will travel to Bourne (0-7) this weekend.

Prediction: Cohasset 22, Bourne 7.

The Skippers will finally snap their six-game losing streak.

Dwyer's plans to continue building

The new main office and central processing facility for Dwyer's Cleaning Spot meets local zoning requirements according to the building inspector, Robert Dwyer told the planning board Wednesday night, Nov. 2.

Dwyer said that Building Inspector Donald Robbins intended to send the board a letter expressing his opinions on the building under construction at 754 Chief Justice Cushing Highway.

However,Robbins is on vacation through Nov. 13, and the planning board has not received such a letter.

Robbins did instruct his staff to send Dwyer an application for the Zoning Board of Appeals to clarify the matter.

The building inspector had issued a cease and desist order Oct. 20 after visiting the building replacing the one destroyed in a $1 million fire Aug. 5.

"I recently visited the site of your reconstruction and I find there is now a problem. As I explained to you on the day of the fire, you do have the right to rebuild exactly what was in place," stated Robbins.

"Now I find that instead of a one and a half story building, we have a two and a half story building."

Robbins went on to explain that any extension or enlargement requires a special permit from the ZBA and any extension over 200 square feet requires a site plan review.

He instructed Dwyer to file with the ZBA and Planning Board within 10 days.

At the brief, informal planning board discussion, Dwyer said he did not feel the new building exceeds the footprint of the old building, and is only 18 inches higher.

He said that the square footage of 4,500 feet is the same as the old building.

To Board chairman Robert Sturdy the issue was not properly an item before the board.

"It's a legal question," said Sturdy, who referred Dwyer to the Zoning Board of Appeals.

Board member Al Moore, who arrived at the meeting after the brief exchange, complained that the discussion had been held earlier than scheduled.

"I would have liked to have talked to Mr. Dwyer," said Moore, who had asked Robbins to investigate after he saw the size of the building.

"I don't know why he is not required to file a site plan review."

Member John O'Toole explained, "He claims he's not expanding over 200 square feet.

"I take exception to increasing the cubic square footage of the building," said O'Toole.

"He's increasing the usable square footage."

Said Moore, "If we allow this to go unchallenged, we ought to throw the zoning right out the window.

"This is a travesty - it's not right at all."

Subdivision talk

Dr. Patrick Morrissey had an informal discussion with the Planning Building Wednesday night, Nov. 2, regarding subdivision of 10 of his 20 acres off Beach St.

Morrissey said he has arranged to acquire 60 feet of frontage on Beach St.

Though zoning would allow seven dwellings, Morrissey said he would like to construct four dwellings on an average of an acre and a half of land. Four acres would be open space.

"I'd like them (the dwelling units) to be individually designed," said Morrissey.

"Each one would be a distinct piece of property."

Member Dan Cotton said the board would want the utilities brought in underground.

Another member, Al Moore, said that the fire chief would want to have input on a turn-around area.

Morrissey said he would like to use a common leaching field.

Cancer Society hosts national smokeout

Anytime is a good time to quit smoking, but Nov. 17 will be the "right time" for millions of American smokers who join this year's Great American Smokeout.

That's the message offered by local American Cancer Society volunteers planning the twelfth annual smoke-out, the one day the nation's smokers are encouraged to set aside their tobacco for just 24 hours.

"We know that many smokers have a very difficult time trying to quit," said Les Cavicchi, President of Cranberry Unit of American Cancer Society. "We also know most smokers are aware of the harmful effects of smoking, so we don't dwell on that.

"The goal of the Great American Smokeout is to provide a supportive and positive atmosphere for smokers attempting to give up their cigarettes," Cavicchi said. "The American Cancer Society hopes at least one in five of the nation's 50 million smokers will make the attempt this year."

Last year, 19.6 million smokers participated in the smokeout by quitting or cutting down for the day, according to the Gallup survey.

"Smoking is definitely on the way out," Cavicchi said. "There are more restrictions on smoking in public, more state and fedral laws regulating smoking, more businesses adopting no-smoking or smoking control policies."

"We keep our efforts upbeat and light-hearted. This is not a campaign against smokers. It is a campaign against smoking."

This year members of the Cranberry Unit's public information committee will staff information booths at Jordan Hospital and Cordage Park in Plymouth. In addition, displays of stop smoking will be in local libraries in the 10 towns served by the Cranberry Unit.

"It's no accident that the smokeout falls so close to Thanksgiving," Cavicchi said. "The smokeout takes a light-hearted approach to the problem of smoking, but there is nothing light-hearted about the serious health consequences of tobacco use.

"Each year, 320,000 Americans die as a result of smoking-related illnesses." he explained. "This is a needless tragedy. If the Great American Smokeout can help to prevent some of those deaths by encouraging smokers to quit, then we will all have something to be truly thankful for."

The wedding that almost wasn't . . .

smoke," she recalled. "The first thing I thought was, thank God no one was home. The second thing I thought was, now what do we do?"

The fire not only destroyed a home, it nearly destroyed a wedding. Included among the ashes were Suzi's wedding dress, Bill's tuxedo, her mother's dress, their passports for a honeymoon abroad, travelers checks, and cameras to record their wedding the next day.

"It wasn't until later that Bill remembered that our rings were also in the house. He returned to the home later the next morning, and asked one of the firefighters to retrieve a bag in the kitchen. Within minutes, he came back out with a melted bag - but the rings were fine," Suzi stated.

Bill added his highest praise for the Cohasset Fire Department, saying they had a calming effect upon the harried members of the wedding party.

The front bedroom of the house was destroyed, along with all belongings stored in that room. But many clothes in the other rooms were only smoke damaged.

The next morning, the clothes were brought to a local laundromat and washed.

But as Suzi noted, when the management at Kimball's heard about their dilemma, they pitched in to help.

"They took all our laundry - including the clothes we would wear on our honeymoon, and dried it and folded it and packaged it for us. They were wonderful. The woman in charge of the arrangements for the wedding was great. We didn't have time to meet with her Saturday morning to make the seating arrangement - so she did it by herself," Suzi said.

Bob Catlin, an owner of the Lothrop Lane home, also pitched in to assist the family. At the fire scene, he called Kimball's and explained the disastrous situation to the management.

Somehow, they managed to find places for 15 people to stay at the motel - even though the place was booked.

The receptionist at Kimball's called bridal shops early Saturday morning and inquired about a wedding gown for Suzi. But a former college roommate donated her gown to Suzi - a dress that many wedding guests later commented appeared "to be made especially for me," she recalled.

Her sister's bridesmaid gown was smoke-damaged, so they took it the next day, along with some tuxedos, to Dwyer's Cleaning Spot. Ironically, Dwyer's headquarters on Rte. 3A had also been destroyed in a fire last August.

As Bill explained, he was telling their story to the clerk at the cleaners that Saturday morning - saying he needed some speedy service on the items. A man in line listened attentively to the outrageous story. "He said I was about his size and he had a tuxedo at home. He offered it to me right there," Bill said. But the tuxedo shop where Bill originally rented his suit offered another at no extra cost.

In addition, the staff at Dwyer's refused payment for any of the cleaning services.

Suzi travelled that afternoon to the Braintree mall with her mother, looking for a new dress for the mother of the bride and some shoes for her sister. When the clerk at one of the stores learned of their dilemma, she conferred with the manager who then offered Suzi her wedding dress.

"Everyone was just fantastic," she marveled.

"It was an incredible feeling to see so many people pulling together for us - people we didn't know," she noted. Suzi is from Virginia, and her husband of three weeks is from Foxboro. After careful consideration, they selected Kimball's as their reception location because of their love of the ocean. Also, Bill was once an avid skindiver in the Scituate area.

The wedding was held on schedule that evening. And during the reception, many people said they had just learned about their troubles. "We had our wedding at the United Methodist Church in Weymouth, and most people never realized the problems we had the night before. Everything went off without a hitch," she said.

Looking back on her wedding day, Suzi said she feels mixed emotions.

"It was the most memorable day of my life. I was happy that thankfully no one was hurt. And I was sad about the things we lost and trouble we had. But all in all, what is a wedding - I would much rather have lost our possessions than a member of the family."

Suzi and Bill remember with fondness the people of Cohasset. "It's an incredible town," she said. "Even though we had problems, we can think back about that time and remember all the wonderful people we met in Cohasset.

"And we also have a pretty good story to tell our grandchildren someday."

School land surplus . . .

By voting to declare the two parcels surplus, the school committee did not lend its support to either proposal. Now that the land is no longer under the school department's jurisdiction, town meeting must vote on the two proposals.

Supt. Hart noted that if either of the proposals fails at town meeting, that parcel reverts back to the control of the school department.

Housing Authority Consultant Bernard Stewart presented revised plans to the school department Monday night. Under the current proposal, the housing authority intends to use 8.72 acres of land for 12 units of affordable family housing, with the possibility of transferring a single-family home currently at the corner of Sohier street and Rte. 3A to the parcel.

After meeting with members of the school facilities committee last week, Stewart said the housing authority agreed to provide a one acre buffer along the northern border of the land. A 50-foot wide easement will be placed through the housing authority site for access to the school department property.

The 72 acres of land under the control of the school department borders Rte. 3A and the Deer Hill School to Pleasant Street and Smith Place. The housing authority parcel borders Rte. 3A and Evergreen Lane.

Because of the changes suggested by the school facilities committee, the housing authority altered its original request from 8.6 acres to 8.72 acres.

Architect Barbara Balboni from Blanchard Associates said the changes suggested by the facilities committee posed no problem for the housing committee. There is still room for six duplexes and possibly the single-family home, she told the school committee.

At a previous meeting with the school committee, Stewart explained that development of the land is one way the housing authority is attempting to fulfill the town's memorandum of agreement with the state Executive Office of Communities and Development.

He noted that as special town meeting approaches, public meetings on the proposal will be held to acquaint residents with the type of housing proposed for the site. All the units will contain three bedrooms, as required by the state for Chapt. 7C5 family housing.

Town officials agree: the harbor plan is bad

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Selectmen have sided with the Cohasset Harbor Committee in publicly denouncing plans by the owners of the Oaks estate to construct a private "marina."

In a recommendation made to selectmen this week, the harbor committee unanimously opposed the plan, saying it will "ruin the esthetics of the harbor".

Oaks Realty Trust, owners of the harborside property originally built for the late millionaress Jessie Cox, want to place 109 private boat slips around the property. In return for the new piers, the developers would give the town 48 additional boat slips within the harbor.

At a presentation made to the conservation commission two weeks ago, the owners revealed they would be willing to donate the 58-room mansion on the property in return for the commission's approval of the marina plan.

The harbor committee submitted a ten-point summary of their opposition to the marina plan. (See page 10).

"It is totally devoid of benefit to the town," Selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt said in reviewing the committee's recommendation. "They say the cost to the town will be substantial - that only Oaks Realty Trust stands to benefit."

John Pfaffmann, chairman of the harbor committee, said they had been studying the plan since last May.

Among the negative impacts of the plan, he stated, would be a cost increase to the harbor, health, fire, and police departments to monitor the effect of 109 more boats in the harbor. "They think they're being generous - that's peanuts with what this will cost the town," Pfaffmann said.

Peter Wood, a member of the harbor committee, said he felt strongly that the marina proposal would ruin the esthetics of the harbor. He also noted that the committee had worked on their report to selectmen for more than a month.

"They expected the town to swallow this hook, line and sinker," the committee chairman said, adding that selectmen should make their opinion known, particularly when the plan is submitted for review to the Army Corps of Engineers and the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering.

Selectmen voted unanimously to oppose the marina plans, as outlined in the recommendation (See page 4)

Although selectmen are dubious, new group to look at town use of estate

With the selectmen's blessing, a group of town officials will begin looking at ways the town can get control of some valuable harborside property.

The study group, headed by planning board chairman Robert Sturdy has obtained a $4,600 state grant. The money will enable officials to investigate ways in which the town can gain control of the former Cox estate, and how the town could use that property.

Although selectmen have their doubts about the project, they supported the state-financed study.

"'I don't think the town will ever own the Cox Estate," Selectman James Gallagher stated Monday night. He suggested that perhaps the money could be used to study open space in Cohasset, with an eye to future renovations to the town's athletic fields.

Sturdy objected, saying, "we don't own enough of the waterfront to stick in your eye. I think the town should take a look at this."

Currently, the Oaks mansion which was built for the late millionaress Jessie Cox, is owned by a group of developers known as Oaks Realty Trust. They bought the 58-room mansion and waterfront property from Yankee Oil Co., which put the property up for sale when the company was forced in bankruptcy.

Oaks Realty Trust has proposed a 109 private marina around the perimeter of the property, dredging a chunk of land where a garage and tennis courts are now located. In return, the owners have promised the town an extra 48 boat slips. And in an offer made public two weeks ago, an attorney representing the owners said they would be willing to donate the mansion and the uplands to the town, if the conservation commission approves the marina plans.

Last winter, Sturdy applied for a state conservation planning grant to study the option of town ownership of the property. The grant was awarded in April, but only preliminary meetings have been held by town officials. Sturdy asked selectmen for their approval so that an "unofficial" study group, comprised of members of various town boards and committee, could begin meeting on a regular basis.

"We want to study the feasibility of a town use of any sort for that property," he told selectmen. "It is an opportunity we have now because the property is between uses. This opportunity may

Wayne Robbins, owner of Robbins Garage on North Main Street, points to where the neon clock was once affixed to the front of the service station. (Jane Lane photo)

Garage owner mourns loss of a 'collectible' clock

To people travelling the roads of Cohasset, the clock was a landmark - a familiar feature like an orange roof or the golden arches.

The round neon clock on Wayne Robbins' North Main Street garage has never gained national notoriety. But to local travelers, it was as necessary as the blinking traffic lights at the nearby intersection.

And now, without a clue, the clock is gone.

"It's such a shame, it's sickening," said one man who repaired the clock this year. Bill Raymer knows the financial value of the 50 year-old artifact. But that's not important to him.

A local resident also feels the loss. "It's been a part of my life for a long time," according to Sally Ann Chatterton. The Red Gate Lane resident has lived in Cohasset for many years. When she was a teenager at Cohasset High School, the clock provided a timely reminder to her on the way home from dates.

"We'd go by the clock to check the time. If we were on time, we were fine. If we were late, forget about it!" she recalled. "It's something you always knew was there. I feel like part of my life is missing now."

But the neon clock will be missed most of all by its owner, Wayne Robbins.

"It's not so much the dollar value of the thing," he said this week. "It's the sentimental value."

With anger he added, "some blankety-blank stole the thing. They either got a ladder or they backed a van up to it, and they stole it."

The round clock, with the bans of pink, green and white neon, was affixed to the front peak of the white service station at the corner of North Main Street and Forest Avenue. It was there when Robbins purchased the garage in 1965 and has been attached to the wood frame for about 50 years, he estimated.

Robbins never even noticed the clock was missing until the morning after it was taken. An employee at the station pointed out the vacant spot to his boss, who figured it was stolen the night of October 22. He notified police immediately, but police have no clues as to its whereabouts.

In the meantime, Robbins is a man at a loss.

"I really like that clock," he said. "It was a neat

No regrets from Dukakis organizer

At such a young age, Jim French and his wife Donna have survived the ups and downs of politics.

French, 32, served as Deputy New England Director for the Dukakis/Bentsen ticket. Now that his team has gone down to defeat, French has resumed his position as director of personnel for the governor's office.

Donna, 31, who opted to stay at home with their four year-old son, Jim, campaigned for the Democratic presidential candidate in her spare time.

The entire family, who often campaigned together in neighboring states, is happy to be at home. But their comfort is tinged with a sadness that comes with the defeat of their close friend and political idol, Michael Dukakis.

"I was really devastated for a while there," Jim admitted. But like the governor, who is now in the midst of a budget battle at the state house, he learned to pick up the pieces and to quickly resume "life after the campaign."

The Frenches met while students at Northeastern University. Jim was a political science major, and Donna was attending the Forsythe School at the university.

They campaigned for the incumbent governor in 1978, after Jim met him briefly at a university function during Dukakis' first term. "I thought I'd work for Dukakis," Jim recalled. "He looked like a winner."

Again, Jim and Donna worked alongside (now state senator) Bill and Paula Golden in the Cohasset's week...

SEMASS accepted

The Cohasset Board of Health voted November 3 to accept a proposal from SEMASS to accept trash from Cohasset starting with the operation of the solid waste transfer station.

The decision to accept the proposal was based on reduced transportation costs as opposed to Orrington, Me., the relative ease of transport and the reduced cost based on a starting tipping fee of $44/ton, according to the board.

Meeting with the board of health at the time of the decision were the following dump area study committee members who unanimously recommended accepting the SEMASS proposal: Priscilla Tebbetts, Eleanor Smith, Arthur Pompeo, Jr. and Anson Whealler.

Stop sign okayed

Safety officer Clifton B. Jones agrees with selectmen's decision, and that of the Highway Supervisor, to errect a "stop ahead" sign above Lantern Lane.

He also said he concurs with installing a "stop" sign at the intersection of Pond and Spring St. with a white stop line across the road.

"This officer feels that this decision should be an effective solution to attempting to avoid further accidents on this area," said Jones.

Remove small boats

Cohasset's new harbor master Irving Gadow is requesting that small boats be removed from town floats.

Gadow said the town will start removing them for the winter beginning Nov. 22.

Cease order sticks

Cohasset building inspector Donald Robbins said Tuesday that he has not changed his mind regarding a cease and desist order he issued to Dwyer's Cleaning Spot Oct. 20, for its new building under construction.

"I have no problem with the footprint," explained Robbins.

"But I do have a problem with the building being 2 1/2 stories when it was 1 1/2 stories."

Dwyer's is being rebuilt at 754 Chief Justice Cushing Highway after an Aug. 5 fire which resulted in an estimated $1 million damage.

Owner Robert Dwyer indicated to the Planning Board Wednesday night, Nov. 2, that the new main office and central processing facility now met local zoning requirements according to the building inspector.

Dwyer said that Robbins intended to send the board a letter expressing his opinions on the building.

But Robbins, who recently returned from vacation, said that is not the case.

"He has to go to the Zoning Board of Appeals about expanding a non-conforming use," explained Robbins.

"And he also needs a site plan review from the Planning Board according to our zoning laws."

Dwyer told the Planning Board he did not feel the new building exceeds the footprint of the old building, and is only 18 inches higher.

He said the square footage of 4,500 is the same as the old building.

thing to have - a part of the community. Everyone knows that clock. It's a busy street and people just naturally look to it for the time.

"Any time it wasn't working, or if it was slow, customers would let me know," Robbins said.

Earlier this year, the battery-operated clock was fixed by former Scituate resident, Bill Raymer. The owner of Restoration Resources in Hanover, Raymer specializes in the service and sale of neon fixtures.

He said the once-familiar clocks, given to selected gas dealers, are now collector items. "Clock collectors don't want them," Raymer explained. "People who collect memorabilia, particularly neon pieces or gas station collectables, want these kinds of items."

The clocks, he said, can be worth anywhere between $200 and $800, depending on the condition. Robbins' clock, according to Raymer, was in good condition, despite a small BB-type bullet hole in the plastic face cover.

Raymer said the clock, which measures about 30-inches across, was probably built in the 1940's. But despite its age, the timepiece showed no signs of slowing down.

"It's really a shame," Raymer said. "These pieces are valuable because they have become such familiar parts of our lives. Most gas station owners who still have the clocks won't sell them even though they're worth a lot. They just want to keep them.

"I feel bad for Wayne," he continued. "He should be upset. It's literally a crime, but more than that, it's a shame that someone would take it."

Robbins shares that sentiment. But he's hoping that someone, somewhere, saw something that will lead to the return of the clock.

"I know people may like it if they're into the nostalgia thing," he said. "But I just want the clock back on my garage. It's something that was there when I bought the place - and I'd like it to stay there."

"I guess you'd have to say, I'm more hurt than mad," the station owner said.

"But I'm still really mad."

Anyone who has any idea where the neon clock may have been taken is encouraged to call the Cohasset Police Department or Wayne Robbins at 383-9646.

Special town meeting to include 13 articles

Selectmen have approved thirteen articles for the December 12 special town meeting, including two repeats from the April annual town meeting.

Among the articles which will re-appear on the warrant is a proposal by the planning to create a municipal housing authority.

The harbor committee has submitted an article to amend the zoning bylaw regarding the definition of private docks and a marina.

Members of the harbor committee attended Monday night's selectmen's meeting to discuss the proposal. Chairman John Pfaffmann emphasized that their interest in changing the bylaw and having it approved at the December town meeting was in no way a reaction to the proposed project at the Oaks.

The committee voted unanimously last week to oppose that plan proposed by the owners of the former Cox Estate.

"There is a misconception in the community that this (redefinition) is to stop the Cox Estate (development plan). That is in error. You are simply redefining the existing bylaw," Selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt noted.

"The harbor committee has been going through an extensive revision of the bylaws," chairman Pfaffmann stated. "This is not a sudden move to stop something that someone in town is trying to do."

The planning board has resubmitted an article which failed at the April town meeting, to create a municipal housing authority.

Planning board chairman Robert Sturdy explained that this locally-controlled agency would not be under the jurisdiction of the state, as is the current Cohasset Housing Authority. "Every action of the Cohasset Housing Authority is subject to review by the state," he noted. A local agency would be able to negotiate with developers to ensure that a certain number of housing units are sold below market rate, and that they are sold below rate in future years. It would also allow the town to work with developers to create affordable housing units which could be operated by the local agency.

Sturdy emphasized that a municipal housing agency would be free of the state regulations and state-financing that restrict the current authority.

If Cohasset approves the article, it would be the first community in Sturdy's recollection that has created such an agency.

There will be an article to approve the housing authority's proposal to construct 12 units of affordable family housing on former school-controlled land off Rte. 3A. The school department has agreed to release more than eight acres of land for this purpose. The housing authority plans to construct six, two-bedroom duplexes on land bordering Evergreen Lane and the area where the Super Stop and Shop is located.

Among the other articles is approval of the firefighters' contract which was ratified last week. Voters will also be asked to borrow an unspecified amount of money for the purchase of a new van for the senior center. Selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt said the local Rotary Club has indicated a willingness to help out in that effort.

Selectmen have sponsored an article that would ban all jet skiing in Big and Little Harbor.

Among the other articles selectmen have included in the special town meeting warrant are appropriations for cover material at the Cedar Street landfill, and an unspecified amount to construct the transfer station at the town landfill.

In other business Monday night, Housing Partnership member Chartis Langmaid informed selectmen about the pending review of the Crystal Woods development on the Cohasset-Scituate border.

Langmaid explained that the housing partnerships from both towns are reviewing the housing proposal. The next meeting between the town committees is scheduled for November 22. In the meantime, Langmaid asked selectmen to review the plans for the housing project, and to submit comments to the partnership committee.

According to the latest plans, the development, which is located near the Brewster Road, Old Pasture Road area, will include about 21 units of affordable housing from a total of 60. The water will be provided by the Cohasset Water Department, and the septic systems will be located in the Scituate portion of the property.

Thus far, Langmaid said the housing appears to be of a good quality. It is located in a residential area, and neighbors have not objected to the plan.

Objections to Oaks Estate plan

submitted by the harbor committee.

Their summary given to selectmen states that the marina proposal is too large for Cohasset Harbor and will decrease the value of surrounding properties because of increased traffic and harbor pollution. The traffic increase on both land and water will be too great, according to the harbor committee. The fishermen's lobster cars will have to be moved to accommodate the project, "and yet they are now in the best location to preserve their catch," the committee stated.

Although the project developers intend to move boats currently moored in the harbor, those boat owners do not want to move, according to the harbor committee. They "question what authority the Oaks Realty Trust has to make them move, so that a few people can make a huge profit," according to the committee.

The committee warned about an increase in safety hazards caused by 109 additional boats in the small harbor . "There is not enough room on the harbor for these boats to maneuver safely in and out of the slips," the committee stated in its summary.

The project will result in an increase in harbor pollution, and residents currently on the town's lengthy mooring waiting list will be bypassed by those people buying a boat slip at the new marina. "We think it is quite unfair that 109 boaters could be permitted to 'buy-in' to Cohasset Harbor without having to put their names on our waiting list like everyone else," the committee noted.

"They do think we're going to buy this hook, line and sinker," Selectman Rocco Laugelle said, adding, "and now they want to donate the home and property . . . "

Hearings to be held on cemetery plan

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

Plans for a 5,000 grave cemetery on 14 acres of school committee land won't really move ahead until the annual town meeting in 1989, but cemetery committee chairman Glenn Pratt said an overview of the proposal will be presented to town boards in the meantime.

"We are taking the proposal to the boards to see if they have input," said Pratt.

"We feel we want to have the boards hear our plans from us, and not through the grapevine," he said. Approvals will be sought later. "If they have any ideas, we want to know now."

The school committee voted in October to declare the 14 acres of land surplus so that the town could develop plans for the cemetery before space runs out in its other cemeteries.

The land is part of a 70-acre parcel which runs from the Osgood School to the Deerhill School bounded by Pleasant St. and Old Pasture Road, with frontage on Sohier St. and Route 3A.

If all approvals are received, it would be the spring of 1992 before the first burial would take place in the new cemetery, about when the town will run out of space.

"At the annual town meeting, we'll ask for approval of the transfer of land from the school committee to selectmen, and money for engineering plans.

"In April of 1990, we would present plans and specs at town meeting."

The site was selected after a two year search, according to Pratt. Eight town-owned sites were evaluated.

"We were looking for gentle slops, good drainage, easy access, and public roads," said Pratt.

"We wanted between 15-25 acres so the shortage could be dealt with now, and not looked at for another 100 years.

"The place we have selected lends itself to open space and gardens," he said.

According to Pratt, the closest grave would be 1,400 feet from the Deerhill School, and about 300 feet from the nearest residential neighbor.

"There is nearly a quarter mile of heavy forest between the land and the school," he said.

"Pleasant Lane would be the entrance. Secondary entrance would be Smith and Cushing in later plans and development.

"It won't be done all at once.

"We feel this is the best available site in town," said Pratt.

"If it's not approved, then we'll go back to the drawing board.

"I'm sure the abutters and neighbors will have the usual objections about traffic, noise and vandalism," he said.

"But I don't want anyone to think they'll have graves in their backyard."

Pratt said he first became involved with plans for a new town cemetery in 1977.

"Selectmen asked the planning board to do a study of the cemeteries, and I was chairman of the planning board," he said.

"In the 1977 report, we said that within seven to 10 years, the problem would be critical.

"Now it's seven to 10 years later."

Notice to subscribers

To avoid increasing our subscription rates, we are streamlining our billing system to convert all our subscribers to a common expiration date. With rising postal and production costs, we need to reduce our billing costs.

If the mailing label does not have a January 1 (1/1) expiration date, you will receive a bill to extend your subscription to that date. For example, if your expiration date is 6/89, you will receive a bill for six months which would give you a January 1, 1990 expiration date. (We will still have our 2 and 3 year rates for those of you who prefer to take advantage of the extra savings of longer renewals).

We regret any inconvenience this may cause you, but by reducing our costs, we can also reduce yours.

If you have any questions regarding this new system, please feel free to call the Circulation Department at 837-3500/1-800-874-6969.

New committee to study town ownership . . .

not come up in 50 years or more."

At preliminary meetings this summer, Sturdy said the study group discussed possible town-owned docks around the property. "We're not talking dockominiums for high-priced yachts," he explained in reference to the plans presented by Oaks Realty Trust. "We're talking about docks small enough for 22-foot sailboats and Boston Whalers - the kind that is predominate on our mooring waiting list."

He noted that the purchase price of the property may not be equal to its assessed value if the town proceeded under an eminent domain taking.

Since the grant has been made available, Sturdy has contacted members of many town boards, including recreation, harbor, conservation, and the advisory board. The recreation commission has expressed an interest in the property, he said, particularly the indoor swimming pool which could be used in addition to the town-owned outdoor pool.

Recreational use of the property may not bring in much revenue to the town, Sturdy predicted, as compared to a town-operated marina.

The greatest benefit of a small-scale, town-owned marina, he said, is the relief it would provide to the more than 100 boaters on the town's mooring waiting list.

"I don't know if we could ever afford such a venture," Selectman Rocco Laugelle said. "And in regard to those docks, I don't think I'll live long enough to see a return for our money."

Selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt said that they had no objection to the study group taking advantage of the state grant to study the feasibility of town ownership. Harbor committee member Peter Wood agreed, saying, "If the money is available, we should avail ourselves of it to see what the options are."

But both Wood and and harbor committee chairman John Pfaffmann wanted to know if selectmen supported their efforts, or if they felt "we wasting our time" with the state-financed study.

"We are on record of what should or should not happen with the property," Wood stated. "We can investigate other uses."

Pfaffmann added, "Are we wasting out time studying this? He pressed selectmen into answering whether they were opposed to looking at other options for the property.

"Well, I don't think the town of Cohasset could ever afford to maintain it," Laugelle answered. He added that as long as the study members are willing to take another look at the property, he would not be opposed.

Sturdy noted the developers have indicated to him that they "would love to swap the entire (Oaks) parcel for a developable town parcel. Although, I'm not sure they know what they want and what the town has."

☐ Joanne Young-Nawn and Linda Halloran recently returned from visiting Marie and Fran Johnston in their new home in Reston, Virginia. They went to see the sitting room Marie decorated for the Washington DC National Symphony Show House in Maryland. Marie, whose design shop is Johnston Interiors, formerly of Charles Street in Boston, upholstered the walls and draped the windows in a pale pink English print. Her treatment was featured in the Washington Post Washington Home section of the newspaper. The Johnstons beautiful new home is decorated with the English chintzes and painted furniture which are her trademark.

☐ The George H. Mealy Post is holding a Past Commanders roast beef dinner in appreciation of their service to the Post and to the American Legion. It will be held upstairs at the Post on the evening of Dec. 3, with cocktail hour beginning at 6:30 p.m. and dinner served at 8 p.m. See Moe Foley for more details.

☐ Last Saturday was an exciting one for the CHS Boys Soccer team, they won the Divisional Championship! That is a record, they have now won three divisionals, three years in a row! We hope that as they read this they are on their way to the State Finals; in any case, they have had another outstanding year and are to be commended.

☐ Graduates of Notre Dame Academy, Hingham, who played on the volleyball and basketball teams have been challenged to play against present students at the school. The games will be held on Saturday, Nov. 26, beginning at 11 a.m. "There is no admission charge and spectators are most welcome," said NDA Development Director Grace Regan who was a former basketball co-captain at the Academy. Light refreshments will be served between the games. For information contact Mrs. Regan or NDA Athletic Director Donna Brickley at 749-5930.

☐ Charles F. Kane of Cohasset recently graduated from the Metropolitan Police Academy. The ceremony marked the successful completion of 20 weeks of training at the Needham academy.

☐ More news on Notre Dame academy; alumnae, parents and friends of Notre Dame are invited to a holiday tea at the Guest Quarters Suite Hotel, Cambridge, on Thursday, Dec. 1, from 1:30 to 4 p.m. Refreshments will include traditional and special teas, scones and cakes said NDA Development Director Grace Regan who noted that the event is a part of the Academy's 135th anniversary celebration. "This event will be a wonderful way to begin the Christmas holiday season," she said. "We are grateful to our trustee Richard Kelleher, president of the Beacon Hotel corporation, for providing us with the location for this festive event." Admission is free, reservations must be made by Nov. 28 by calling Mrs. Regan at 749-5930.

☐ Vi Tuthill was spotted around town this weekend, and she sure is a spunky gal!! It didn't take her long to be up and out after her recent fall, we are happy to see you looking so well!!

☐ Deer Hill School was the place to be on Nov. 3, it was quite a party! The PSO, students and parents organized a farewell party for Marilyn Pope, who is now a children's/young adult and reference librarian at the Middleboro Public Library. All agreed that our loss is definitely Middleboro's gain, and the gifts and turnout showed Mrs. Pope just how much she will be missed. She did agree to return later this school year to tell some tales (That's her trademark), which gave something for the students to look forward to. She certainly will be missed, but everyone wished her well.

☐ As you are sorting through all of those winter coats and clothing, remember the Pine Street Inn. You can contribute much needed clothing for the homeless (shoes, boots, coats and anything woolen are especially wanted) at a collection center in Norwell. It is at the Brannigan Chiropractic Offices, 252 Main Street (Rte. 123) Norwell, or call 659-1518 for additional information. It sure is a good way to get into the holiday giving spirit, and a lot of people will be grateful!!

Science center marine program

If you do one special thing with your children this year, make it a trip to see Mr. and Mrs. Fish at the Norwell Junior High Auditorium, Tuesday night, Nov. 29, at 7 p.m.

Of all of the marine education programs in the United States, perhaps the most successful is the Mr. and Mrs. Fish Marine Education Program of Portland, Me.

"The Fish" are being sponsored by the South Shore Natural Science Center of Norwell. "We are delighted to be able to present this program," said Science Center Director Faith Burbank. "The presentation is a lot of fun, but the underlying message of ocean ecology and the dangers of dumping and pollution is very effective."

What makes the program so appealing is their ability to make the ocean come alive in a most humorous and entertaining fashion. Mr. and Mrs. Fish, alias Jeff Sandler and Deb Hall Sandler, costume themselves as a variety of ocean creatures and act out marine science concepts in a manner that has audiences laughing as they learn. As a fish, a crab or a lobster, "The Fish" show first-hand the effects of ocean dumping and pollution on our fragile marine environment.

Apparently, the Rockerfeller Foundation, the Atlantic Center for the Environment and the United Nations agree that their message is effective since they have all underwritten Mr. and Mrs. Fish programs worldwide in the last decade. The South Shore Natural Science Center's presentation of Mr. and Mrs. Fish will be funded in part by the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities.

"Denise Shaw of the Cole School P.T.O. in Norwell was already arranging a visit to the Cole School by this fine program when we called them," said Burbank. "Denise has been very helpful in working out a schedule that will allow children from schools all over the South Shore to enjoy the program Tuesday evening, Nov. 29, after Mr. and Mrs. Fish spend the day at the Cole School."

Jeff Sandler and Deb Hall Sandler have developed a unique approach to teaching that has earned them acclaim throughout the world. Presight and postsight testing has shown that students can triple their understanding of specific marine science concepts by participating in a Mr. and Mrs. Fish program. They have performed in such places as England, Scotland, Japan, Hawaii, Samoa, the Bahamas and Canada, as well as throughout the continental United States.

Jeff and Debs' specialty is elementary level audiences, and they spend most of their time in schools in New England performing. In addition to school programs, "The Fish" also perform at major aquariums and museums, such as the Monterey Bay Aquarium, Monterey, Calif.; New England Aquarium, Boston; Shedd Aquarium, Chicago; National Aquarium, Baltimore; the Smithsonian, Washington; and the Royal Museum of Scotland in Edinburgh.

Mr. and Mrs. Fish are television performers as well. The CBS affiliate in Portland, has shown three prime time "Fish" specials written by and starring Jeff and Deb. WBZ-TV's Evening Magazine in Boston has featured them, as have several national television programs.

Mr. and Mrs. Fish have won numerous awards for their work, including the prestigious Thomas Jefferson Award for outstanding public service to the environment and the James Centorino Award for excellence and leadership in marine education on the national and international levels. They have also been recipients of a Sea Grant from the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. Jeff has served as Past President of the National Marine Educators Association.

Tickets to the Norwell event are $3 and can be purchased at the South Shore Natural Science on Jacobs Lane, Norwell (turn left at the Jacobs Homestead off Rt. 123 approaching from Rt. 53). Tickets will be on sale through the elementary school PTOs in Norwell, and children will be bringing home information. If you have any questions, call Jean at the Science Center at 659-2559. Tickets will be available at the door for $4 if there are any left.

"When the Sandlers recently put this program on in Bangor, Maine, they decided there was no need to pre-sell tickets since it is not a heavily populated area, and they were performing in a large auditorium. Nine hundred people arrived for the show that night! So they suggested that we pre-sell the tickets to prevent that problem, especially since we have tried to keep the ticket price low so everyone can come enjoy it," finished Burbank.

Taxpayers' rights outlined

A new publication outlining taxpayers' rights is now available from the Internal Revenue Service. "Your Rights as a Taxpayer," Publication 1, provides a four-page overview of the rights and responsibilities of all taxpayers in dealing with the IRS.

It contains information on how to obtain assistance when preparing your return, how to reschedule an audit if needed and how to make an arrangement if you received a bill and cannot afford to make payment in full, as well as other valuable information.

The IRS plans to enclose Publication 1 in most first notices involving a tax examination or collection matter. Copies are available at IRS offices, or by calling the toll free number, 1-800-424-3676

It's been downhill

It was simply unbelievable, inconceivable. Our young, strong, courageous, confident, optimistic President John F. Kennedy had been gunned down. It simply could not be true. He couldn't die. The doctors would save him.

But it was true, that haunting day 25 years ago, when the whole population was stunned by the news from Dallas. The doctors couldn't save him. His head had been blown away. It was outrageous, unspeakable, blasphemous. It was too soon to mourn -- we were dazed, amazed, confused, crying, angry. Camelot was over; all hope was gone.

There would still be the ordeal of public ritual, the black horse with the stirrups up, the politicians, and little John-John Kennedy's farewell salute. There would be Lyndon Johnson, asking for our patience and understanding as he tried to bring the country out of its torpor. There would still be Jack Ruby and the New Orleans district attorney, the endless Warren Commission, and questions, questions, questions, still unanswered.

But on that afternoon, November 22, 1963. it seemed as if the world had ended.

Historical realists are wont to point out that Kennedy didn't win the election by very much, and didn't accomplish so very much in his 1000 days as president. Yes, he sent "military advisors" to Vietnam, the Bay of Pigs invasion was a fiasco, and Civil Rights was hardly a cause celebre among white middle-class America.

But the Kennedy presidency is not to be measured in legislation passed or foreign policy coups. It brought a state of mind, an attitude of hope and trust, a new confidence and pride, which none of the boring bunch who have occupied the White House since then has matched.

For Kennedy, patriotism was not a weapon, but an attitude. Humor was not snide or cutting, but self-deprecating. Hope and confidence went hand in hand, and America was the best, the brightest, the strongest, the ideal.

Jackie led tours of the White House, and wore pillbox hats. She was no Eleanor Roosevelt, but she was just what the country needed after the dowdy Eisenhower Fifties -- a First Lady in the truest sense.

And there were the children, playing in the Rose Garden, laughing and dashing into the Oval Office in mid-press conference. Their father didn't ask them foreign policy questions, as Carter would do, or use them as political ammunition. They were just kids, having fun.

There was a young family in the White House for the first time in this century, and there was joy and laughter. Kennedy-watching became an American pasttime. Comedians did impressions of the President on TV, not with derision, as they would do with Nixon, Ford, Carter and Reagan, but with gentle, honest humor. "First Family" record albums, making affectionate fun of the Kennedys, sold millions.

There was joy, there was confidence, there was a general sense of well-being and strength. But above all, there was humor.

John Kennedy, very simply, made it fun to be an American. Others have accomplished more, passed more legislation, made economic strides, and signed more treaties.

But it just hasn't been fun since 1963.

Objection to Oaks Estate plan

To the editor:

This written recommendation was made by the Cohasset Harbor Committee to the selectmen:

On Wednesday, Nov. 9, 1988, at 8 p.m., The Cohasset Harbor Committee held a special meeting to discuss the Oaks Realty Trust "Marina" Proposal and to make a specific recommendation to you with our reasons for it.

With all members of the Committee present except for the Cohasset Sailing Club representative, we voted unanimously to recommend AGAINST the Oaks Realty Trust "Marina" Proposal as we understand it as of that date. Our reasons for this recommendation are as follows:

1. THE PROJECT IS TOO LARGE with 109 boats up to 45 feet in length to be accommodated safely and economically in the Harbor and in the channel. It will decrease the value of surrounding properties through increased traffic, pollution in the Harbor and contribute to major esthetic and safety concerns for our harbor and its surroundings.

2. THE INCREASE IN TRAFFIC IS TOO LARGE, both by land and water and will increase to totally unsafe levels. This will place additional and costly burdens on the Harbor, Police and Fire Departments to increase staffing and patrols to try to maintain safety and law and order.

3. THE FISHERMEN'S LOBSTER CARS MUST BE MOVED to accommodate this project and yet they are now in the best location to preserve their catch. Why should our commercial fishing fleet suffer major economic losses so that a few people can make huge profits at our fisherman's expense?

4. 62 BOATS MUST BE MOVED to accommodate this project! Most of the boat owners we have talked with, both fisherman and pleasure boaters have told us they do not want their moorings moved to accommodate this project and question what authority the Oaks Realty Trust has to make them move, so that a few people can make a huge profit.

5. ESTHETICALLY, OUR HARBOR WILL BE RUINED, with the addition of 109 boats, most in the 38 to 45 foot length, acres of docks and ugly pilings to secure them year around. Add to this the certain additional pollution these boats will contribute, plus the further burdens on the Health Department in attempting to monitor and control the situation.

6. THE ADDED COSTS THE TOWN WILL HAVE TO PAY to monitor, patrol and maintain safety from fire, safety, security and pollution hazards. An increase in staffing for the Harbor, Police, Fire and Health Departments will be required to try to reduce all of these hazards.

7. A SERIOUS INCREASE IN SAFETY HAZARDS will be caused by 109 additional large boats operating in the harbor and the channel. The present channel and harbor can not accommodate this increase in traffic. There is not enough room in the harbor for these boats to maneuver safely in and out of the slips. The Harbor Department will have to increase staffing and equipment to be able to respond adequately to the added safety problems which, in our opinion, will certainly occur.

Letters

8. A SERIOUS INCREASE IN POLLUTION in the harbor will result from 109 additional large boats accidentally or otherwise discharging wastes from the engine exhausts, heads and holding tanks. Attempts to monitor and control these sources of added pollution will be very costly.

9. OVERLOADED FACILITIES such as the demand for fuel and boat repairs will result from the additional 109 boats. Emergency services, such as when a boat must be hauled quickly to avoid sinking are not available and no mention of any contingency planning for emergencies has been proposed by the owners of the Oaks property. The present fuel dock cannot, in our opinion, handle the increase in demand for fuel from such a large number of big boats.

10. BYPASSING OF OUR WAITING LIST by those "buying" a slip at the Oaks will result in considerable dissatisfaction and furor for those now on our waiting list for a location to put their boats in our harbor. We think it is quite unfair and unjust that 109 boaters could be permitted to "buy-in" to Cohasset Harbor without having to put their names on our waiting list like everyone else, if this project is allowed to proceed.

In summary, we believe that this proposal by the Oaks Realty Trust to build and operate a 109 slip marina in Cohasset Harbor is totally devoid of any benefit to the Townor its residents and, in fact, will end up costing the Town substantially, for the added burdens and expenses the project will impose. To us, it is obvious that only the Oaks Realty Trust stands to benefit and profit from the proposed project. Therefore, this Committee is totally opposed to this proposed project by the Oaks Realty Trust.

Sixth grade essays on importance of voting

Why you should vote

America is a great country because of all the rights that are given to its people. Yet one of the most important rights we have is that we can vote on who rules our country.

But every election year a very small percentage of our population goes to the polls. At the same time millions of people are wishing they could vote in their homelands. Still we abandon our right to vote. Voting gives us the privilege to help keep our country great.

Still we sit at home on election day and watch soap operas. And so I think you should be required to vote. But since that would be unconstitutional we can only remind people to vote.

Voting is a privilege envied in other countries. But in this country voting is a right. And so I'm urging you to vote. And remember, one vote can make a difference.

Josiah MacKenzie Slotnick

The importance of voting

Voting is important because if you can vote, you have the opportunity to vote for the candidate or issue of your choice and not let someone else make that choice for you. You can vote for lower taxes, better education, solutions to sewage and garbage disposal, inexpensive housing, more or less military spending, safer drinking water, etc. If you can vote, you can choose which issue you want your money spent on and which candidate is most responsible to spend it.

If you can't or won't vote you leave yourself open to situations that you may not want or may be harmful to you or your environment. You give up your right to say what you think about the issues.

Voting is one of the most important privileges we, as United States' citizens have. We are indirectly governing ourselves by casting our ballots and electing officials to represent us. We are deciding on the quality of life for ourselves and future generations when we make decisions for or against the issues submitted to us on the ballots.

Jessica Jenkins

Why it is important to vote

It is important to vote so you can help preserve the democratic system which is the right to have a choice of how people rule themselves. But if you don't vote and lots of other people don't then a small group of people who do vote can gain control of the election and you might lose your right.

In communist countries, people have the right to vote but there is only one candidate to vote for. So it is important to vote to ensure the democracy in your country.

Only a few countries are democratic. In many countries, dictatorship rules the countries and the people have no right to vote.

Every man's vote is important because each vote represents the will of a single person. The collective votes of all the people in the community add up to the will of all the people in a community. The more people who are in an election the more democratic the process is. So make sure you vote and make a difference.

Jonathan Hislop

Voting

If you're not interested enough in America to vote, then you shouldn't complain when things go wrong. America is a democracy. That means that the people have the right to choose their leaders and tell the government what to do.

In many countries, people like us are being starved or killed by bad dictators running their government. Those people don't have the right to vote and change their bad leaders for good ones. They often give up everything they have, and move to a new country like America, where they can be safe and have the right to vote and even be a government leader.

Many Americans still don't vote, they might think they're too busy or that it doesn't matter. They're wrong, their vote always matters. The fewer people that vote, the more one vote counts. Many elections have tied, won, or lost by one vote.

So this year be sure to vote. Your vote will make a difference!

Danny Silvia
Grade 6

Why you should vote

Our Constitution granted us the right to vote in the United States. At first only white men could vote. After the Civil War, black men were given the right to vote. In the early 1900's women were granted the right to vote. Now everyone who is a United States citizen and is over 18 can vote.

You should vote because every vote counts. Sometimes people lose an election by one vote. If you don't vote and the person you were sort of hoping was going to win loses, you might feel bad for a long time. The person who wins the election decides how America will be run for a long time. If one wrong decision is made, there could be a very big problem, even a nuclear war.

You should also vote because in some other countries people don't have the same rights we have. Like in China people don't get to vote at all. Also in some countries there is only one real candidate. You have no choice whatsoever in voting. George Bush is the candidate for the Republicans. He has been the Vice-President for 8 years. Michael Dukakis is the candidate for the Democrats. He has been Governor of Massachusetts for two terms. People should listen to the candidates and read about them before they make a final choice. Be sure to vote November 8.

David Nothnagle

Why every citizen should vote

On November 8, every American citizen over the age of eighteen in the United States will be able to cast a vote for either Bush or Dukakis. You should vote because every vote makes a difference. If you don't vote, the candidate you like the most might lose by one vote, the one you didn't make. We are very privileged to be able to vote in this country. Some other countries don't have the freedom to vote. If you don't vote, maybe soon they will take away our freedom to vote. If you don't vote and something goes wrong in your country, you have no reason to complain because you didn't vote.

When we vote we are choosing a person to lead our country and to make important decisions for our country. If you don't vote, maybe the person that won really wasn't the best president for our country, but won because you didn't vote.

Just please vote.

Marisa Gallant

Why it's important for citizens to vote

There are many good reasons why citizens of America should vote. There shouldn't be any excuses not to.

Instead of saying: "I don't want either candidate to be elected for president," you should say: "I'll pick the best of the worst." This would mean that you were a part of the election and you helped make it happen.

You could say: "I don't have the time to vote, I'm too busy," but America wants you to say: "I'll have to make the time." This time is for the future of the children. This time could make a difference.

Citizens of America are given the privilege to vote. It's part of your freedom. You can either make excuses, or plan the future for you or your children. It's important, you shouldn't forget to vote.

Katie Cibelli

Fifth grade essays

Why one vote can make a difference

One vote can make a difference because it can break a tie. It shows that you care about the election and who wins. If we did not have voting the government would make all the decisions and the people would not have a say in our country's laws or politicians. Voting is one of our most important decisions because it will say who will represent us in our town hall, our state house, and in the White House. It allows every person no matter how rich or poor to have a say in how our country is run. We use our one vote to help people that care how we feel about certain things like nuclear power and important things like that get elected. Voting is a very important decision on our country's leadership.

Can one vote make a difference?

When I woke up on a Friday morning, I looked at the clock. It was 7 o'clock. I went to the shower. Then I got dressed. I went downstairs, ate my cereal, packed my lunch. Then I just caught the bus. When I got to school my teacher announced a school election for a grade president and if you want to do an essay. On Monday they will pick the two best essays. Then have the fifth grade vote for their favorite one. Then whoever wrote that essay is president.

When I got home, I got right to work on the essay. I spent the whole night on it. At dinner I read it out loud to my family. They said it was terrific. (I agreed.) On Monday when I got to school our teacher collected the essays. I was so nervous. She said on Tuesday she would announce the two winners. I knew I'd be one of them. I was so excited that night I couldn't sleep.

I woke up and had a usual morning. When I got to school, the teachers got the entire fifth grade in the hall and announced the winners. I was one of them!! I was so excited. Then they handed out copies of both essays and said the ballot was due Wednesday afternoon. I looked at the fifth grade bulletin. It said Jane 30, Susy 29. I was so disappointed when I found a ballot on the floor for me, but it was not handed in.

My mom said, "One vote sure can make a difference, but what really counts is how hard you try." (I agreed.)

One vote can make a difference

Can one vote make a difference? Yes, it can, and here's a little story where one vote did.

It was a nice Saturday. A couple of friends and I were trading baseball cards. It was at that time when my eye caught the headlines of a newspaper, "Neighborhood Pond Closed!" After reading the article I figured out that it was the pond down at the end of the street. "Were our skating days over?"

After discussing the matter, my friends and I decided to go to our selectmen. We told them our story. Out of the five men, two voted to save the pond, however, the others did not. So we begged and begged, and finally one changed his mind. Boy, one vote really did make a difference!

John Whitehouse

Can a vote change things?

Can (and why) one vote (your vote) make a difference? The answer is yes. Your vote can make a difference, because, for example in the past there have been people running for president that have lost the election by one vote. That vote was your vote that you didn't do. The message is to get out and vote.

In 1960 John Kennedy won the presidential election by one-hundred and sixty thousand votes, which was less than one percent of the popular vote. Imagine if less than one percent of the population had voted differently at the polls that day. That's why one vote does make a difference.

On election day in 1988 every voter should make an effort to vote for the candidate of their choice. You can make difference!

Elizabeth Good

How Lucky We Are

I think we are very lucky to be able to vote. People in other countries cannot vote because of their colour or religion. South Africa is a country where many people cannot vote because of their colour.

I think it is only fair if you were born, work, or live in a country, that you have a say in who should rule.

In some communist countries, you cannot vote because there is only one Government, therefore you have no choice. In some Moslem countries, ladies cannot vote. In some other countries they have a Dictator who usually takes power by force. Once they have taken the country by force, they won't let anyone vote.

In some countries, Kings or Queens rule and they will not let anyone vote, for example Saudi Arabia. Not all countries ruled by Kings or Queens cannot vote, because in Great Britain you can.

Being Able to Vote

It's wonderful to be able to have the freedom to vote even though I can't because you have to be eighteen. Every year people go to the town hall and register to vote. In this country we vote because we want to have a great country so we pick who we think would do the best job for our country. I think everyone in the world should have the right to vote because if we can vote, the world would be a better place. I wish everyone could vote.

'Sugar Babies' a dramatic club success

By David Johnson
Mariner staff

The glamorous and naughty world of burlesque returned to the South Shore last weekend with a sensational production of "Sugar Babies" by the Cohasset Dramatic Club. In a departure from its usual serious plays, the club opened its 68th season with the show, a series of mildly dirty vingettes interspersed with song and dance routines from the early 1900's, when burlesque was the king of American theater.

"Sugar Babies" ran on Broadway a few years ago with Ann Miller and Mickey Rooney.

The drama club did an astoundingly good job, considering this is an amateur production.

As the leads, John Macero and Corinne Drake were excellent. Macero is a recent graduate of the Boston University theater school and his training shows. He is a talented actor and comedian.

Drake is not only a good actress but an excellent dancer as well. According to the program she also did some of the choreography. It was a pleasure to watch when either of them were on the stage. Together they made a great comic pair.

They were supported by a good cast of singers, dancers and beautiful girls from various South Shore towns.

Of the show itself, it is better not to get too specific because to tell one joke or sequence could ruin it. Suffice it to say that this is adult entertainment, leave your small children at home.

While some of the songs could have been louder (they were singing without microphones) the entire cast did a great job. There were no bad moments in "Sugar Babies."

Held at the former Greenhouse Restaurant in Cohasset, the seating was cabaret style, which means drinks were served. They could have used more room, but did well under the circumstances.

One minor problem is the lighting. Anyone seated to the right of the stage had the spotlight in his eyes several times during the show. Maybe they could move the character speaking from the side to the stage to avoid that irritation.

"Sugar Babies" is playing again Nov. 17 - 19 at 8 p.m. Call 749-4800 for tickets, which cost $8.

The Cohasset Dramatic Club also seeks members. Call 545-0942 or 545-6485 to join. Regular membership is $15 which entitles you to one admission to a major production.

Medway again dominated in physical game

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

You just knew the whole town of Medway was ready for this one.

For the third straight year, the Cohasset and Medway high school boys' soccer teams wrangled for the Division Three South Sectional final.

And for the third straight year (actually, it is four years in a row as Cohasset defeated Medway in the 1985 quarterfinal contest), Cohasset (18-2-1) prevailed, winning 2-1 at Oliver Ames High School last Friday with a more physical and air-oriented style than usual. Midfielder Dan Bliss scored the game-winner to advance the Skippers into the EMass final game against St. Mary's of Lynn (the Div. 3 North champion) this week. It is the rematch of last year's championship which Cohasset won in a squeaker.

"It is real exciting to win it (the Div. 3 South title) three straight years," said the elated Cohasset coach, Dan Magner. "It was a very physical game. I don't promote that, but I told the guys to expect a physical game and we geared more to it."

Medway (18-2) had allowed just two goals all season. After a 1-1 first half with each team playing wide-open, end-to-end soccer, the two schools approached the final 40 minutes with vigor.

The action turned more physical wth Cohasset picking up a pair of yellow cards (Matt Beggan and Ned Chase) and Medway one (Eric Truscott). The Skippers constant shooting on the Medway goalie softened the defense but could not produce any payoff until 74:03.

On an indirect kick, defender Jim Gallagher hit a 40-yard chip that Bliss put high to the left side with a header from in front for a 2-1 lead.

"By far, this is the biggest goal of my career," said the overwhelmed senior who notched his second goal of the year. "Nobody picked me up, so I just went up for the ball. This is extra special."

From there, the Skippers dropped Chase from his forward position to stopper to anchor the five-man defense, as they controlled the final minutes. Due to ineffective shooting from its forwards, Medway was not able to produce the scoring chances as Cohasset had done. The Skippers almost added an insurance goal with less than two minutes left in the game as Jim Reidy and Linc Marsac, who kicked the ball over the net with the Medway goalie out of position, applied the pressure.

The Mustangs did, however, have the chance to take the advantage nine minutes into the second half with a direct kick from four yards out.

Cohasset goalkeeping Joel Reidy (12 saves) quickly set up a goal-line wall. Medway's Chris Dwyer deflected the initial shot off Gallagher's legs, a rebound could not be put in while a third shot by Stuart McRury was stopped by Reidy. It was the most significant defensive play of the game as Medway was unable to make another quality march.

Cohasset opened the scoring nearly 16 minutes into the game when Reidy (his 28th) took a cross from Beggan and caught the goalie flat-footed with a header from 10 yards to the middle of the net.

"Their goalkeeper was very slow," noted Magner. "I knew we had to dump the ball in and make the goalie play it. On both goals he was on his line."

With less than five minutes to go in the first half, Medway got the equalizer when Truscott drilled a shot from four yards out from a crowd at the right post.

The tied game brought back many memories. Three years ago, the quarterfinal match between these teams went six overtimes. In 1986, penalty kicks decided the winner, while Cohasset managed a 2-0 victory last year.

"This game had a little of everything. The two towns are very similar. There wasn't going to be a blowout because these teams are evenly matched. Medway has an impressive record and they allowed only two goals all year. I am just glad we doubled that," said Magner.

"They thought we were weaker because we lost a lot of starters from last year. We wanted to prove something to them," said Jim Reidy. "The whole defense played great. It was a great game all around. We don't want it to end."

Due to a reporting error in last week's edition, it was stated that David Shultz shares the Cohasset record with Todd Fitzpatrick for most goals in a season (22). It should be David's older brother, Bobby (the class of 1986), instead.

FOOTBALL

Paul Froio rushed for 152 yard and two touchdowns on 18 carries, helping Cohasset snap a six-game losing streak with a non-league victory, 21-6, at Bourne High School last Saturday.

Froio scored on an eight-yard run in the first quarter, then scored his ninth touchdown of the season from 13 yards away later on in the third, staking Cohasset (2-7) to a 21-0 lead.

Curt Ludlow scored on a 21-yard run in the second period for the Skippers. Bourne (1-7) averted the shutout with a long scoring pass in the final stanza.

Cohasset will now prepare for the annual Thanksgiving contest against Hull next Thursday morning.

Fall tournament results

Thayer Academy senior Steve Maloney upset Bill Sprout of Hingham 7-5, 7-6 to win the Cohasset Tennis and Squash Club's second annual Fall tournament last Saturday at the Cedar Street Club.

Maloney, one of six champions crowned on Saturday, defeated former club champion Chip Rowley 3-6, 6-4, 6-2 in one semi-final. Sprout knocked off Terry Kahn of Cohasset 6-1, 6-1 in the other.

Claiming the men's doubles crown were Charles Peix of East Bridgewater and Peter Trafton of Quincy. Peix and Trafton, New England's fourth-ranked team in the 45-and-older division, beat Kahn and Rowley 6-2, 6-3 in the final. The champions topped Peter Bickford and Steve Weiner, both of Cohasset, by the identical score in the semis. In the other half of the draw, Kahn and Rowley upset singles champ Maloney and his father, Phil, 6-3, 6-7, 7-5.

The mixed doubles title went to Jim and Nancy Schmidt of Hingham, who beat Rob and Susan Spofford, 6-2, 3-6, 6-3. The Schmidts beat Barbara and Jim Moore, 6-2, 6-4 in one semifinal, while the Spoffords topped Sue and Jack Brister, 6-2, 6-0.

In the fourth division of play, Jim Moore won the men's B title, beating Rob Spofford 6-3, 6-3.

Concerns voiced in Old Colony public hearing

By Bill Bowers
Mariner staff

Over 100 residents appeared at the Scituate selectmen's meeting Tuesday to hear a presentation by MBTA Project Manager Stephen Polechronis, who proposed the construction of three separate parking areas in North Scituate Village to accommodate commuters using the Greenbush commuter rail line, which the MBTA wants to rebuild.

Polechronis said the South Shore is the only area in greater Boston that does not have commuter rail service.

"People on the South Shore have only one choice for getting into Boston, and that is to use the Southeast Expressway... Route 3 is now operating at twice the capacity it was designed for," said Polechronis, who pointed out that the expressway was designed to accommodate 75,000 vehicles per day, but now carries 150,000.

Because of advances in technology, the proposed commuter rail system would be much quieter and more efficient than the old Greenbush line, which was closed in 1959. The new locomotives that would be used on the line consume 30 percent less fuel than those of an earlier era, Polechronis explained.

In addition, the new system would be built with continuously welded rails and concrete railroad ties, which are much quieter than the jointed rails and creosote-soaked wooden ties of 30 years ago, he said.

The MBTA has shelved an earlier proposal to build a single parking area on the site of the Anderson Fuel Company, because many residents objected to the plan, Polechronis explained.

"We received a lot of feedback on the earlier proposal, and not a lot of it was positive... We want to get a sense of what the community feels about the project," Polechronis said.

According to the new proposal, a parking area for 110 cars would be built across the railroad right-of-way from Lincoln Park. A second parking area, with a capacity of 116 vehicles, would be constructed on the southerly side of Henry Turner Bailey Road where public tennis courts are now located, and a third, for 174 cars, would be placed on the southerly side of Country Way. The proposal would provide parking for a total of 400 vehicles.

Polechronis assured those assembled that the tennis courts would be rebuilt at a location of the town's choosing, at MBTA expense, should the proposal be approved. In addition, the new lots would provide parking on Saturdays for customers patronizing area merchants, he said.

Polechronis presented a slide show that included photographs of commuter rail lines and stations now in use on the North Shore and in the western suburbs.

"As you can see, the parking lots at the stations are well-lit and attractively landscaped, and they fit well into their neighborhoods," he said.

Bruce Wescott of Gannett Pasture Lane objected to the proposal for three separate parking lots.

"We'd be much better off consolidating these commuters into one parking area," he said.

Polechronis told Wescott that the MBTA has conducted several traffic studies in the North Scituate area, and determined that three parking areas would result in less disruption of the traffic flow than a single, larger lot.

Sherwood Burnett of Whortleberry Lane asked Polechronis if it is "cast in concrete" that the access road envisioned for one of the parking areas would intersect his street.

"None of this is cast in concrete. This proposal may well be modified as the project moves forward," Polechronis replied.

Hilda Baschini of Hollis Road objected to the rebuilding project itself, saying that her home is only 100 feet from the railroad right-of-way, and that the vibration caused by the trains in service 30 years ago had caused substantial damage to her home.

"I'm against it... I'll have no house left. Before, the trains going by cracked all my walls and ceilings. If it happens again, who's going to pay for that?" she wanted to know.

Polechronis reiterated his earlier assertion that technological improvements built into the newer train systems would substantially reduce noise and vibration.

"The new system is much smoother and quieter... I don't think you'll have any problem," he said.

Thomas Dahoney of Clapp Road, who owns commercial property in North Scituate, questioned whether parking for 400 cars would be enough to accommodate all those who are expected to use the commuter rail service. Dahoney said he fears that commuters will be tempted to park their cars in spaces now used by customers patronizing local businessmen.

"That's why we're going for such a substantial number of new parking spaces. We want to make sure the commuter rail station won't interfere with existing commercial uses of the area," Polechronis said, adding that he is certain parking regulations can be enforced to protect area merchants.

John Vogel of the Driftway questioned the need for such a large number of new parking spots, and said that he has delivered construction materials to the Needham commuter rail station, and noticed that the parking lot at that station is rarely filled to capacity.

Polechronis replied that this may have been true in the past, but that the town of Needham has recently asked the MBTA to expand the parking area at the station.

"I think that if you go there now, you'll find that lot is full by 7:15 in the morning... In the existing system, not a single station has too much parking. We're planning to accommodate the need we think will be out there," he said.

Jack Whittaker of Country Way, a member of the advisory committee, asked Polechronis if the town's MBTA assessment is likely to increase if the commuter rail project goes through.

Polechronis cited a 1983 state law which prohibits the MBTA from raising local mass-transit assessments for communities that agree to accept commuter rail lines.

"This law was passed in the wake of Proposition 2 1/2... Unless the law is changed, which I doubt, refurbishing the line would not have an effect [on Scituate's MBTA assessment]," Polechronis said.

Martha Lehane of Gannett Pasture Lane said she is concerned that the MBTA might use chemical defoliants to keep the railroad right-of-way clear of vegetation.

"There are many children, and many wells in the area... I don't want such chemicals used in my backyard," she said.

Polechronis replied that the state Office of Environmental Affairs prohibits use of such defoliants on railroad rights-of-way, and that the federal Environmental Protection Agency would certainly forbid such use in an area where wells are located.

Bill Hardin of Waite Street told Polechronis he doubts the federal Urban Mass Transit Administration would be willing to finance half the estimated $400 million cost of the commuter rail project, given the size of the federal budget deficit.

"I have a hard time believing the financing will go through," he said.

Polechronis disagreed, citing the fact that the state has already appropriated $195 million, which would pay for approximately half the total cost of the rebuilding.

"Because of the state's 50 percent commitment, and the fact that this is considered a rebuilding project, rather than a new system, I'm confident the funds will be there," said Polechronis.

Selectman Andrew Zilonis supported the proposal for three separate parking areas, and said he is in favor of rebuilding the Greenbush line. A referendum conducted a few years ago showed that 80 percent of Scituate voters support the restoration of commuter rail service, he said.

"This [parking] proposal is far better than the first one we've seen," said Zilonis.

Selectman Robert Thorndike agreed.

"I would like to see the commuter rail line brought back. We can all work together to see that it's done properly," he said.

Working for the Fair

Special attractions and activities for children will again be in the spotlight at Cohasset's Village Fair Saturday, Dec. 3, as five Cohasset churches combine their fund-raising efforts. The fair opens at 10 a.m.

While parents shop for gifts and goodies, children will find offerings in each of the church and public buildings around the Common, and on the Common itself.

St. Stephen's Church, the Unitarian Parish House and the Community Center will house three of the most popular features for children, while in the town Hall and Second Congregational Church there will also be attractions catering to both young and old.

Now established as a major, and perhaps unique, feature of the Village Fair is the "Secret Room," a gift shop reserved exclusively for young shoppers 12 and under. Once again it will be situated in St. Stephen's Church on the rock, with signs along Highland Avenue pointing

(See page 17)

Ruth Nedrow (l) and Marcia Silvia have been working on sheep forms for the Village Fair.

Madeline Olney displays the handmade horses which will be for sale at the Dec. 3 fair.

Christmas carolers will also be a featured item at the Village Fair. Carol Sandblom is one of the local creators of the Christmas ornaments.

Ginny Riley has spent many mornings at the wreath workshops — here she is busy fastening chestnuts to the ribbons that will decorate the wreaths.

Ellie Waal (l) and Heidi Paccetti work on pencil figures in time for the December 3 fair.

the way to the rear of the church.

Procedures and products in the Secret Room are carefully designed for children looking for appropriate and inexpensive gifts for parents, brothers and sisters, aunts and uncles. No parents are allowed in the room. Gift items are priced from 25 cents to $3 maximum. All items will be gift wrapped, ready for the tree or stocking. A corps of young people from youth groups in the participating churches will help the youngsters make their gift selections. Last year some 500 children patronized the Secret Room, depleting a stock of about 2,000 individual items, and June Simeone, who is repeating as Secret Room chair, expects to have as many articles and customers this year, asking only that youngsters bring plastic bags in which to carry away their purchases.

Vying with the Secret Room as a magnet for youngsters will be the special children's activities program to be offered in the Community Center from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. For an admission charge of $1, children will find an appealing array of activities including face-painting, cookie-decorating, necklace-stringing, mask-making, and other crafts projects. Here, too, will be a penny candy table. A group of teen-agers under the direction of committee Chair Elaine Smoot, will conduct and supervise the activities.

Perhaps the top attraction for the very young and their parents will be the traditional visit to the Fair by Santa Claus, who will arrive on a fire engine about 10:45, and take up residence in the Unitarian Parish House, where his sleigh will be temporarily parked amid a bower of greens. For many years Santa reigned outdoors on the Common, but when inclement weather last year forced him inside, the experience was so pleasant that Jean and Craig Muir who are hosting his appearance, decided to continue the practice.

Meanwhile on the Common outside, situated on the route of youngsters traveling from Secret Room to Community Center to Santa Claus, will be the popular Balloon Clown, courtesy of Henry Brennock, who will be inflating and selling his colorful wares to the delight of young and old.

Another favorite of children with chance-taking tastes will be the Grabs feature arranged by a group headed by Claudia Story. Here the youngsters may invest their funds in the hope of drawing a really exciting prize from the box.

The Bargain Bazaar in the Unitarian Parish House will also attract its share of young people looking for "great buys" among the mounds of used sports items, bric-a-brac, tools and appliances that will fill Trueblood Hall.

The second annual Oxfam America Hunger Banquet will take place November 17 from 11 a.m. to 12 noon in the high school cafeteria.

The purpose of the Hunger Banquet is to teach students about the issues and problems that lead to chronic hunger in the world today.

An oxymoron, the Hunger Banquet, dramatically illustrates to students the breadth of world hunger: 55 percent of the students are served only rice for lunch, 30 percent are served rice with sauce, while 15 percent eat a sumptuous Thanksgiving meal (served to them at a candlelit table!).

The focus of this year's program is summed up by the motto "Think Globally - Act Locally."

Proposal to reduce selectmen 'is no vendetta'

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

Robert Davenport of Sohier Street recently submitted a petition to reduce the board of selectmen from five to three members because that number would be more efficient and cheaper.

"I don't feel the large number accomplishes anything except to make it more cumbersome," said Davenport.

But Richard Barrows, a Cohasset police sergeant who worked to increase the number of members from three to five in 1982, disagrees.

"I think it has worked better with five," said Barrows. "There is a lot more input."

According to Davenport's article, the board of selectmen would consist of four members beginning with the annual town election in April, 1990, and ending with the annual town election in April, 1991.

Thereafter the board would consist of three members.

"I never liked it going to five, though I did vote for it," said Davenport, who explained that he was convinced at the last minute.

"I decided to present a petition within a year after it went to five members."

Davenport said he doesn't feel that a five member board of selectmen is right.

"They say they have more people to spread around, to go to other meetings. But only one or two go to other meetings."

An unsuccessful candidate for selectman two years ago, Davenport said his article is not a vendetta.

"This is no vendetta," he said.

"That's why it will be at the annual town meeting. It won't affect anyone until 1990.

"Some people wanted it for the special town meeting, but I didn't want it rushed."

Davenport said he feels there is support for the change from people he has listened to over the years, and some in government, such as former executive secretary Don Andrew.

"I talked to him after he left," said Davenport, "and he felt that the smaller board would be much smoother and easier to work with."

Andrew left last summer to become city auditor of Everett.

Davenport said he doesn't plan to campaign for the change.

"I'm putting it out there," he said.

"If the people don't want it, they don't want it.

"It's no vendetta. I just think it is better for the town.

"If you don't have the choice, you don't have the opportunity."

Born and brought up in Cohasset, Davenport considers himself a "townie" and makes his presence known by attending many meetings.

"I just like to know what's going on in the town that I live in," he said.

Barrows said he wouldn't want to go to a three member board of selectmen unless there was also a town manager who would do all the hiring and firing.

"It would take it out of the hands of selectmen," said Barrows, who estimated that some 160 appointments are made each year.

"I don't favor a town manager," he said. "But I would sooner have that if they go back to three members."

Barrows said he might submit an article for town manager if the town goes for a three member board, and withdraw it if the board is not reduced.

"I'm the chairman of the recreation commission and there are seven members and it has worked pretty well," he said.

"You get a lot more input, and there are people from different walks of life.

"The town had been with three selectmen for many years, and there were a lot of so-called political appointments.

"Five members is somewhat better."

"They (selectmen) have a lot more power since the police and fire chief were taken out of civil service and are appointed."

According to Barrows, who has been on the Cohasset Police Department for going on 39 years, the board of selectmen was increased from three to five members in 1982 by a 21 vote margin, 217-196.

"The committee worked on it for about a year," said Barrows. "It was a close vote."

A later vote that same year to rescind the action was defeated 333-172, he said.

"I'll certainly speak in opposition at town meeting," he said. "I might seek signatures."

"I lived with three members on the board for many years," he said. "I saw what happened.

"It has worked pretty well with five. Three make a decision in a quorum.

"I don't think five is cumbersome. It lets them work it fair and square. The more the merrier.

"The meetings are longer, but there is more input."

He added that the school committee and planning board have five members.

Another resident who originally proposed to increase the board members, Tanna Kasperowicz, said she thought it was a shame that selectmen accepted the petition on their own with no petition involved.

"I just think it is unwise to see the interest of one person prevail," said Kasperowicz.

"It would be a different situation if someone submitted an article with the 10 required signatures. That substantiates the petition."

She also said she didn't understand why Davenport had submitted the article.

"We're talking about getting rid of two experienced selectmen," she said.

"I don't see why Bob is doing this and why less selectmen would make the town operate more smoothly."

Minot's Light watch room now sits atop land

By David Wadsworth
Special to the Mariner

The Cohasset shoreline at historic Government Island in recent weeks has been the site of an unusual, and historically important, reconstruction project. Near the small park honoring the mid-19th century construction of Minot's Ledge Lighthouse the Cohasset Historical Commission, using blocks of granite recently removed from the lighthouse itself, has reconstructed the massive Watch Room of the lighthouse tower.

A major renovation of the historic ocean lighthouse, the first in its 128 years of service, last year saw the removal of its topmost stone section, the 42 granite blocks of the Watch Room. A century and a quarter of Atlantic ocean storms which often send waves crashing over the light's 114' pinnacle had caused deep fractures and breaks in the solid granite near the top of the tower, necessitating replacement of the section just below Minot's famous lantern. The old blocks of the Watch Room were brought ashore to serve as patterns for replacements, nearly identical and cut from closely matching granite, which now form the top of the offshore lighthouse. When brought ashore by helicopter the old blocks were lowered to the ground just a few yards away from the site where they had been carefully cut to fit the top of the lighthouse during its construction in the years 1857-60. Also brought ashore at the same time last year was the massive "rotating mechanism" or lanternstand of iron which once rested inside Minot's Watch Room and, in earlier years, rotated the light's powerful beacon.

The giant lanternstand, dating from days when lighthouse beacons were fueled by oil, long ago was retired from service but remained at the light until its surrounding enclosure, the Watch Room, was disassembled. Today, unlike the previous century, Minot's beam is powered by solar energy collected and stored in modern batteries.

The antique rotating mechanism, itself standing more than 9 feet in height, and the 42 granite blocks of the original Watch Room, together weighing nearly 110,000 pounds, were not to be used again in the 1980's renovation of Minot's, and were to be made available for display by interested historical organizations. The Cohasset Historical Commission and the Historical Society worked together to ensure that these historically important parts of the original lighthouse remained in the town where the structure itself first was cut and assembled, and where much of Minot's subsequent history occurred. At the request of both of Cohasset's historical organizations, the granite blocks and iron lanternstand were kept in the town until firm plans for their use could be made.

During the winter of 1987, following a specific proposal for reconstruction of the entire Watch Room at Government Island and for placing of the old lanterstand within the Watch Room as it had originally stood, the U.S. Coast Guard Shore Maintenance Detachment, New York, assigned the granite blocks and the rotating mechanism to Cohasset. The original proposal was submitted by the town's Historical Commission, and received the backing of Cohasset Selectmen. The site chosen for the reconstruction was to be atop a foundation of concrete and granite, built by the U.S. Lighthouse Service for its stonecutters when Minot's was first assembled. At one time, a small building rested atop the foundation which now serves as base for the reconstructed Watch Room. Individually the large blocks of Quincy granite forming the Watch Room weigh in at 1,500 to nearly 4,000 pounds apiece. There are four courses, or layers, of stone, forming the walls of a circular room 11' 1" in diameter. Outer diameter of the stone circle, at the base, is 14' 1". The Watch Room stands some 7 1/2' high. Near the top, the uppermost course of stone forms a "parapet" or overhanging circular walkway. It was this upon which rested the frame and thick glass windows of the Lantern House. This fall, with funding generously supplied by the South Shore Playhouse Associates of Cohasset, the Historical Commission began its reassembly of the historic Minot's Light Watch Room.

All four courses of the granite blocks now have been fitted together, in the original sequence as they were at the lighthouse. Working with care, a crew headed by Harold Litchfield, Anthony Sestito and Peter Laugelle have reconstructed the Watch Room in its original form. Within the unique structure now rests the old "rotating mechanism", itself reassembled, in the same position as it held when at the light. Where possible the broken chips of granite, saved when the blocks were brought ashore, have been replaced and cemented to adjacent granite. Some chips are missing, and the crew has applied cement to fill gaps.

The work of reassembling the historic Watch Room of Minot's now is virtually complete; and with its completion a structure of major historical importance has been preserved. Nearby at Government Island, one can see two large concrete and stone "templates" or temporary foundations upon which the blocks of Minot's Ledge Lighthouse first were assembled for testing before being taken to the offshore site of the light itself in the mid-1800's. Today those circles form the centerpiece of a park dedicated to the engineering feat accomplished by the constructing of the lighthouse in the years 1855-1860. Also nearby is the fog bell of Minot's Ledge Light.

At one time this same bell was attached to the side wall of the Watch Room, and the large bronze bolts which supported the bell can be seen on the wall of the reconstructed Watch Room, as they were originally. Some years ago the U.S. Coast Guard presented the bell to the town of Cohasset, at the request of local residents. Also nearby is a small brick building, a rare surviving example of a U.S. Lighthouse Service "oil storage building" which once held the fuel for Minot's great lantern.

A few yards away, on the hillside leading to the pinnacle of Beacon Rock, one of the original two duplex houses built by the Lighthouse Service for off-duty Lighthouse Keepers and their families can be seen. It was here that the families of such well-remembered Keepers of Minot's as Milton H. Reamy and Per S. Tornberg lived, and their children grew up to receive their education in Cohasset schools.

Storyteller comes to Deer Hill

October 25, in the Deer Hill school gym, Len Cabral came to share some stories with the students.

Mr. Cabral lives in Providence, Rhode Island. The Metco Program, the P.S.O., and the Arts Lottery raised the money to have him entertain the students.

After he was done with the Native American and African stories, he worked with the advanced band on a special project that band director, Miss Parker, organized. The band members gave ideas for playing musical accompaniments in different parts of the stories. When a story and the music are completed, it will be performed at the Holiday Concert in December.

Modeling trophy

Sarena Quemere, an 11-year-old 6th grader from Cohasset, was in a modeling competition on October 16. She takes classes at John Robert Powers School in Boston. Sarena started at age 10 and would like to be a professional. In the competition there were 426 contestants. The modeling teachers judged the girls on runway poise, make up, hair, and wardrobe.

Sarena took a second place in runway poise, and was the first place grand prize winner overall.

When asked about her modeling, Sarena said that in order to be a model you can't be afraid to perform in front of an audience. She finds it fun because you get to meet different people, go different places, and try on lots of clothes. In order to win, she said, you have to cooperate and work very hard.

Halloween happening

October 31, the Deer Hill School had a Halloween happening including a program by "Poets Alive." The poets from this group were Jim Nave and Mark March. They acted out a variety of poems such as "Jaberwocky," "Casey at the Bat," "Little Orphan Annie," and the "Walrus and the Carpenter."

The poets, who have been doing this for five years, have been interested in poetry since childhood.

At the conclusion of the poetry program, all the students paraded around the school in their Halloween costumes and were given candy by the P.S.O.

Language seminar

Saturday, Nov. 5, Mrs. Free and Mrs. Moody of the Joseph Osgood School staff, attended a day-long conference concerning the "Whole Language" philosophy. The conference was held in Lynnfield by the "Whole Language Teachers Association" of which Mrs. Free and Mrs. Moody are members. They came away from the conference enthusiastic and excited. From the many displays, lectures and professional books purchased, they hope to add to the excitement of our emergent readers and writers.

Eye-opening visit

Mrs. Marie Price's morning and afternoon kindergarten classes had a wonderful visit with Taylor Strecker's dad. Dr. Richard Strecker is an ophthamologist. Dr. Strecker brought some hands-on materials with him and explained about the eye using a large take-apart model. The children could see and touch the lens, the iris, the pupil and the retina. One child found out the little tree in the eye was actually the blood vessels. The children were interested in why, when and how Dr. Strecker became an eye surgeon.

The class is making life-size body tracings and adding their brain, skull, ribs, lungs, heart, stomach, arteries and veins. The children compared their fist sizes to see who would have the largest and smallest heart.

We are looking forward to more moms and dads coming to visit and teach us about our anatomy.

The value of living here

The value of living in a country where you can vote is that you have the freedom to pick the person in office you want. You don't have the government or army bossing or telling you what to do. Sometimes in other countries, people get killed or risk their lives to vote. In America, you just have to be eighteen, and to register.

And just think, people have this kind of privilege and say it's too hard to vote, or that they're too busy and don't have enough time.

That's what I think is the value of living in a country where you can vote.

Ely Kahn
Grade 4
Mrs. MacDonald's class
Deer Hill School

The Meaning of Having the Right to Vote

I think the right to vote means that we can have a say in mostly everything the congress goes for and doesn't. It means that most people are happy and don't have to bully their way into being a leader because they don't like what one person does. It means that each person who votes has some part in deciding how the government is run.

We gain a lot because of this right. We gain a sense of being involved and having responsibility because of our vote. We gain the chance to elect the person we want to be head of our country.

If we didn't have this right to vote we would lose many things. We would not be able to change laws we did not like. We might not have privacy when we want it. I think we would lose all our freedom, also. I'm glad we're able to vote because if we didn't, not everyone would be happy and the United States wouldn't be a free and happy land to live in.

Robert G. Appleyard

A funeral service was conducted Nov. 14 at McNamara Funeral Home, 1 Summer St., for Robert G. Appleyard, 65, of Cohasset, who died Nov. 10 at his home after a long illness.

A private burial was held at the Belleview Cemetery, Lawrence.

Mr. Appleyard was a retired surveyor for the New Haven Railroad.

Born in Lawrence, he moved to Cohasset 37 years ago.

He was a graduate of Hillsboro (N.H.) High School and the University of New Hampshire.

Mr. Appleyard was an avid collector of, and an authority on, antique firearms. He wrote many articles for the National Rifle Association. Mr. Appleyard was a member of the Cohasset and Methuen gun clubs.

He is survived by his brother E. Albert Appleyard of Farley, Vt.

The Rev. Clifford Cutler conducted the funeral service.

Eastern Edison wins innovation award

Eastern Edison Co. won a state energy award for energy innovation as part of a program jointly sponsored by the Massachusetts Executive Office of Energy Resources and the U.S. Department of Energy.

State Energy Secretary Sharon Pollard made the presentation in the Joint Utility Monitoring Project (JUMP) at the state's annual "Energy Week" reception.

Pollard noted that JUMP was the first such monitoring program in the electric utility industry, nationwide, involving independent companies.

Join a SSNSC staff naturalist for a morning of old-time toymaking on Saturday, Nov. 19, 10 a.m. to noon. Kids of long ago didn't have Child World and Toys R Us — they and their parents made their toys. Learn about the early settlers' lives and how to use hand tools similar to theirs by making your own wooden toys. We'll build Jacob's ladders and, if time permits, buzz saws just like colonial children did 200 years ago. For ages 7 and up. Prepaid registration is required. Members/$7; Non-members/$10. Please call 659-2559 for more information.

A political couple relives last campaign . . .

Dukakis' come-back bid in 1982. From there, Jim was assigned to the governor's transition team, and was later appointed at the age of 26 to the position of director of personnel.

Jim tried to recall exactly what attracted him to the Massachusetts Democrat. "The first time I met him, I was impressed. I liked his style of government - he was fiscally responsible, but socially he was a liberal. To me, that's important. I admired him as a regular person - he took the T and he liked to be part of the crowd."

In the 1982 campiagn, Donna and Jim worked in his campaign for 18 months. It was an opportunity for Jim to get acquainted with the governor on a more personal level. When Jim later became part of his administration, he would look at the young, tall blond and repeatedly inquire, "how old are you?"

Donna admitted that during the 1978 campaign, Jim was more actively involved. "But I soon realized during (former governor) King's administration, how good Dukakis really was. I realized how ineffective state government could be under Governor King, and how effective it was under Governor Dukakis."

After his victory in 1982, Jim, on loan from the Bank of Boston, assisted the administration with its selectmen of cabinet members, staff and commissioners. Jim eventually resigned his bank position and was appointed to his present job at the state house.

"I guess I've been lucky - to be at the right place at the right time," he laughed. His wife insists it has little to do with luck. As deputy director of personnel, Jim oversees 200 senior government appointees and 5,000 members of state boards and commissions.

Jim was tapped in September, 1984 to be the Director of the Division of Registration, the state agency that regulates all occupational licensing in the Commonwealth. "It was a big challenge, and a lot of fun," to implement reforms into that department which would result in $15 to $20 million in annual revenues to the state.

When the governor announced his intention to run for the presidency in March, 1987, Jim and Donna decided it was not the best time to get intimately involved in a national campaign. They had a small child at home and they desired a life closer to home.

Weekends and vacations were spent on the campaign trail, traveling to neighboring states to work for their favorite candidate. The baby always travelled with them, along with other family members, including Jim's mother.

"We were on Fifth Avenue in New York one weekend handing out leaflets. Jim (their son) loved every minute of it. He's a very social kid and he loves being with people," his proud father noted.

During this time, as the primary elections were approaching, Jim asked the governor back at the state house about his campaign. "We always talked about the campaign. And honestly, he was quite humbled by it all," Jim remembered. "At this point, he was pretty much assured the nomination, and he was quite moved by it all. He was confident that he'd be a good president, but he never forgot where he came from. That was humbling to him in lots of ways."

Donna and Jim French

Soon, Jim was asked and accepted an invitation to join the campaign as Deputy Director of the New England states - a responsibility he shared with Patricia Eltman. He worked 15 hour days, often seven days a week.

"I literally didn't see Jim," his wife gently complained.

Now, sitting back in his Doane Street home a week after the governor's loss in the general election, Jim has had time to let the wounds heal, and to reflect on what went wrong.

"The campaign went to sleep right after the Democratic convention. There was a strategy to win the nomination, but what happened right after that - we were not as prepared to handle August and to sprint to that finish line," he answered.

"This was a crucial point. The American people had a favorable opinion of Dukakis to that point, but they didn't really know him. They got to define him through the misconceptions, distortions and lies spread by Bush. We let Bush define him in a distorted way and that was a major flaw."

The presidential campaign inexperience of the Dukakis camp was forced to wage a dirty, tough fight against the more experienced and savvy Bush staff, he added. The governor, Jim stated, was initially opposed to waging a similar fight against his opponent. And thus, when the now infamous Willie Horton television ads were aired by the Bush campaign, the Democrats stood by and watched the wave of reaction roll against Dukakis.

"By not answering those distortions swiftly, we gave credence to the lies," Jim figured. "The governor thought the American people would be above that kind of campaign, but that naivete cost us the election."

Once the Democratic camp realized what it would take to avenge his reputation, Dukakis came out strong and initiated an offensive against his opponent. But as Jim noted, it was simply too late to gather enough momentum into November 8.

"If we had a week to ten days more, we would have won," he stated with confidence. Statistics gathered since the election indicate that Dukakis could have won with a shift of 1.1 million votes. They lost 126 electoral votes by less than four percent in key states.

It was not until the governor actually arrived to make his concession speech that his staff realized the campaign had ended in defeat.

"We were sad, but we had a lot of pride," Jim stated. "We were sad for him."

Donna added, "anyone who likes the governor is very loyal to him. He is such a good person, so this election really hurt. He is a very special part of a lot of people's lives."

Jim said he felt sorrow for the governor in this very public defeat. But during a private conversation late last week, the governor confided that his sorrow was for the 40 million people who voted for him. "He felt he let them down. That's what makes him unhappy," Jim noted.

But the governor has quickly jumped back into the fire, so to speak. "He's back at the office at 8 a.m. every day. He's fired up about the budget problems, and is very confident that this will be taken care of very soon," his personnel director said. "Our deficit, after all, is nothing compared to the $90 billion federal deficit facing George Bush.

The governor is back at the job he loves. He's walking outside without the secret service men, and he recently went food shopping at the Stop and Shop - just like in the old days. He's very happy to be home with his family and friends," according to Jim.

As the governor attempts to resolve the state's fiscal crisis, his personnel director carries a lot of memories and a lot of pride about the candidate.

"He's innovative and he cares about people. He'll take care of our fiscal problems - no doubt about that. What we have to worry about is the national economy. When this country is placed into another recession, Bush will be blamed.

"Then finally, Bush will have to take responsibility for something," Jim noted. "That will be the record he'll have to run on in another four years."

Officials support plan for housing the retarded

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The housing authority decided last week to amend the town's proposal for the Curtis Estate property to include housing for the mentally retarded.

Housing authority member Fred Koed suggested the amendment, saying that housing for the retarded most closely resembles the intent of the will of the late George E. Curtis, owner of the 53-acre estate on Jerusalem Road.

The fight over control of the Curtis Estate is in the Plymouth County Probate Court where a second hearing has been scheduled for December 15. At that time, Asst. Attorney General Gwen O'Sullivan is expected to make a recommendation whether the trustees should be allowed to break the terms of the will and sell the property, or whether the town should be given control of the land and four buildings.

When Curtis died nearly 50 years ago, he left a will stating that the property should be used to house infirmed women. The trustees of the estate have never used the property for that purpose. At a court hearing last Sepetmber, trustee James DeGiacomo said there was not enough money left by Curtis to provide such a facility. Since that time, the assets of the estate have grown to $2

Bus cuts could come next year

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The school committee this week denied a request for better school bus service in one neighborhood, and warned that things could get worse.

School committee chairman Diana Kornet said that among the budget-saving options the committee will review for next year is a "depot" style bus arrangement, where students within a mile radius are transported to and from school from one location.

Parents from Riverview Drive asked the school committee this week to consider allowing the school bus to travel into that cul de sac in order to provide a safer pick-up and drop-off for their children who attend Osgood School. Currently, the bus picks up the ten students at the corner of Riverview Drive and Beechwood Street.

The committee denied the request, saying it would set a precedent for many other parents who would like increased bus service, particularly along busy streets.

Harbormaster has worked the sea for 30 years

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

Cohasset's new harbormaster Irvin Gadow started his position Nov. 1, but he's really been doing the job for 30 years.

"The job is similar to what I was doing in the Coast Guard," said Gadow, 48, a resident of Plymouth who retired Sept. 30 after a 30-year career with the Coast Guard.

"I was operations officer out of Boston. We controlled all the stations up and down the coast, the 95-foot patrol boat Gloucester, and the 133-foot buoy tender.

"I oversaw all of that."

A farm boy from Maryland, Gadow joined the Coast Guard at the age of 17.

"The time went by fast," he said. "It seems like yesterday."

"I had never heard of the Coast Guard," said Gadow who had intended to join the Navy.

"The Navy recruiter had met his quota, so he sent me to the Coast Guard recruiter."

After working long hours on the farm, boot camp seemed like a vacation, according to Gadow.

"The first four years were the hardest for me," he said.

"I had to get used to being around water, and to learn a completely different trade and terminology."

After his four year enlistment was up, his wife, Janet, whose father had been in the Coast Guard, encouraged him to reenlist.

"I decided to make it a career," said Gadow, who rose through the ranks from seaman recruit to chief warrant officer.

Over the years, Gadow served in Spain as well as in Wisconsin and New Jersey.

"I was stationed here on the Coast Guard Cutter Sherman in the mid-70s," said Gadow.

"My wife is from Virginia and she liked it here.

"Then we were transferred to New Jersey where I was commissioned a chief warrant officer in 1980.

"We were sent back to New England and Boston, and have been here ever since."

Gadow was commander of the Point Allerton Station in Hull for three years before he was sent to Boston for four years.

"I loved being able to get to different parts of the country, and meet different people," he said.

"My wife was involved in the Coast Guard Auxiliary."

The Gadows have a son, Kevin, 22.

Gadow was involved in the Cuban boat lift about 10 years ago on the Coast Guard Cutter Alert.

"We were sent to Key West off Cuba," he said.

"We picked up all the people coming out of Cuba and brought them to Key West.

A day in the life of local lobsterman

By Bill Bowers
Mariner staff

The early-morning chill still holds sway over the sea as Cohasset lobsterman Tommy Lagrotteria eases his 35-foot boat Dorothy Ruth up to the first red, yellow and orange buoy and hooks it with a long-handled gaff. Minot's Light looms in the near distance.

"It's usually cold when you get started this time of year, but it'll warm up later," he says reassuringly.

He grabs the buoy rope, passes it over the block and tackle and winds a loop around the pulley on the hydraulic winch. The winch groans with the strain of hauling up the heavy trawl, which has more than a dozen lobster pots attached at intervals between two buoys.

The first dripping pot breaks the surface. Lagrotteria, known to friends as the Bionic Fisherman, hoists it onto the rail beside the helm station and opens the lid. The interior is alive with flapping lobsters.

Most are "shorts," smaller than the legal minimum 3 and 7/32 inches, as measured from the eye socket to the rear edge of the carapace. Lagrotteria measures those that are close with a small brass gauge.

One appears to be just large enough, but he returns it to the sea anyway.

"I catch enough lobsters anyhow, so I don't have to nickel-and-dime them," he explains.

Tommy Lagrotteria (Kym Marcella photo)

Cohasset's week...

Housing authority report

The Cohasset Housing Authority reports on the following housing programs presently being undertaken:

Chapter #705 — family housing: The Authority has hired a site consultant and is preparing to acquire a site for six duplexes for the purpose of affordable family housing. Additionally, there is interest in moving a single family home onto the site for this purpose.

Special Needs — #689-SN-MR: The authority is in the midst of negotiations to purchase a site on Elm Street for the purpose of housing eight mentally retarded clients. They have been pursuing this goal since July 1986.

The Curtis Estate: The plan for the Curtis Estate would be to rehabilitate the mansion for a shelter and to develop duplexes on site for family affordable housing. The Authority feels this plan is in accord with the intent of Mr. George Curtis's will. This plan would depend on funds being made available through the state Office of Communities & Development.

Modernization Program: The Authority continues renovations on the elderly complex and are completing PHASE II. PHASE III will begin in 1989.

There are housing grants being issued through the Mass. Housing Partnership and these grants are available through the participation of the Board of Selectmen.

Matthews commended

The Board of Assessors has written to selectmen praising Town Accountant Mary Matthews for her "dedication, hard work and invaluable assistance in helping our board to do its job."

"Her preparation and execution of the backup documents submitted to the Department of Revenue along with our Recap Sheet brought forth the quickest response ever from the DOR in enabling us to set the tax rate for 1989," said Thomas Duggan in the letter.

"Because of her accuracy and total completion of the necessary documents, our tax rate was approved within 48 hours without a question raised; a feat never accomplished before.

"Her cooperation to our staff daily, must also be applauded and we are extremely appreciative of her helpfulness," said Duggan.

"Given the facts that Mary assumed her position mid-year, it was our first ever override year, new regulations were placed on her by the DOR, our executive secretary resigned and the interruption move of officers into our new building, what she accomplished was outstanding.

"The Board of Assessors also commend you for bringing to our town staff such a valuable asset as Ms. Mary Matthews."

Notice to the Taxpayers

The first-half fiscal 1989 tax bills are due and payable no later than 4:30 p.m. Monday, Nov. 28, 1988 at the Office of the Collector of Taxes, 41 Highland Avenue, second floor in the town hall new addition.

For any payments received after Nov. 28, interest will be computed at 14 percent from October 28. Any property owner who has not received a tax bill should contact the Collector's Office at the town hall, 383-0611.

The Treasurer-Collector's Office will be closed to the public Wednesday, Nov. 30. This time will be used by the staff to process and enter the tax payments in the computer. More than 50 percent of the payments come into the office during the last week of collection. By closing, office personnel will be able to update the computer files in a more timely manner.

Sewer commission concerns

The sewer commission is concerned about safety, files, and telephone service when it moves its offices from the Bates Building to the proposed office on the second floor of the old section of Town Hall.

The room has also been allocated as the Conservation Commission office.

In a Nov. 9 letter to selectmen, chairman Charles DeSantis said that the room is very small and will have to accomodate three desks, typing table, map files, six-foot plan table, bookcase, five chairs, nine, four-drawer file cabinets.

"The commissioners are concerned for safety in such confined quarters regarding the floor length windows, which open out far above the ground," said DeSantis.

"The commissioners request wooden or metal strips be placed across the set of three windows, lest anyone leaning back in a chair facing the door or anyone making a mis-step fall out on the ground, far below, to prevent the possibility of a tragic accident.

DeSantis also requests that the sewer commission be allowed to have several empty used file cabinets in the basement of the new wing.

In addition, DeSantis said the commissioners need call forwarding between their office and the waste water treatment plant.

Historical society officers

At its recent annual meeting, the Cohasset Historical Society elected Officers and Directors for the year 1989.

President is Charles G. Fink; First Vice President is John H. Mullett; Second Vice President is Noel A. Ripley; Treasurer will be Robert B. James; with Gordon E. Flint Assistant Treasurer, and David H. Wadsworth, Secretary.

Elected to the Society's Board of Directors were: Mrs. Warren Pratt, Mrs. Donald Steele, and Hubert P. Vanderlugt. The Board of Directors of the Society additionally includes; Mrs. Eleanor Bleakie, David Chittim, Drexel W. Gibson, Mrs. Betty Grassie, Osborne F. Ingram, Mrs. Jane McLean, J. Arnold Nickerson, Douglas Peck, Burtram J. Pratt, Raymond A. Remick, Mrs. Joyce Sturdy.

At the Historical Society's annual meeting a special program was presented by a visiting speaker from Plimouth Plantations, who role-played the interesting character of Goodman John Billington, Jr., one of the first settlers of the Plymouth Colony. Goodman Billington presented an unusual and informative view of life and times in New England's earliest years, in which his family played a unique role. Among those present to hear the speaker were descendants of several of the early settlers of Plymouth, including a descendant of the original John Billington. Nearly 100 persons attended the Historical Society's November Annual Meeting.

Zoning bylaw hearings

The planning board will hold a public hearing Wednesday, Nov. 30, at 8 p.m. at the Bates Building, 43 Elm St., on a proposed zoning bylaw change adding definitions of the words "private docks" and "marina."

The definitions would be: private docks, dockage of up to four boats intended for private use of the owner of the land on which they are constructed; marina, docks and/or mooring facilities for more than four boats; or act on anything relating thereto.

The board will also hold a public hearing at 7:30 p.m. to amend area regulations by adding a new paragraph to increased density — qualified housing.

Housing plan for mentally retarded million, but DeGiacomo testified in September that was still not enough to renovate the buildings.

The town has argued for almost two years that the property should not be sold to a private developer, but could be maintained by the town for a variety of uses.

The Curtis Estate Action Committee compiled a detail plan of how the property could be used. Among the uses proposed for the estate is a shelter for the homeless and for abused women, affordable housing units and housing for the handicapped.

After researching the issue, housing authority member Koed said he suggested the inclusion of eight units of housing for the retarded, "because I think it most closely resembles the intent of George Curtis' will.

"And, I think by including it in the town's proposal to the court, we will be strengthening our case."

One member of the housing authority disagrees.

Chairman John Muncey abstained from last week's vote, saying he did not agree with Koed's suggestion.

"We seem to be getting a lot of information about the Curtis Estate that is wrong or untrue," he said this week. "There's a lot of misinformation going on.

"I don't think we have to include eight units of housing for the retarded in this particular proposal. We are all set to break ground in the spring for eight units of housing for the retarded on the property next to the fire station.

"There are a lot of other housing needs in this town that we should be looking at," he added. "My feeling is that we should go on with other types of housing needs - not just look at what the Curtis Estate Action Committee needs."

Koed said his amendment was made "without going into personalities. It was strictly a suggestion made because I feel it would help the town's case in court. I didn't want any personalities to get in the way."

Part of the motion made by Koed also states that the housing authority will seek Chapter 689 state funds to finance the eight units for the retarded.

Koed asked that the housing authority notify its attorney, Charles Humphreys, of the change in the proposal, and that the amendments be forwarded to Asst. Attorney General O'Sullivan. In the meantime, the authority will apply to the Executive Office of Communities and Development for the Chapter 689 grant money.

"My idea," Koed explained, "is that in 50 years, the trust has done nothing for Curtis' will. I think this will give us a better chance of doing something along the lines of the will."

Despite his reservations about the amendment, chairman Muncey said the housing authority will notify the attorney general this week about the proposal change. "It was the vote of the housing authority, and it will be done," he stated.

Patrick Plante, whose wife, Maria, is vice chairman of the South Shore Association of Retarded Citizens and a member of the Curtis Estate Action Committee, attended the meeting last week. "It was a good thing Fred (Koed) did his homework and explained to the other members how important it is to abide by the intent of the will. We are under a deadline from the court."

Selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt also attended the meeting. He was there to discuss the housing authority's plan to construct 13 units of affordable family housing on land recently released by the school department.

At the conclusion of that portion of the meeting, Pratt asked the housing authority "if they had re-examined their position on the Curtis Estate," he recalled. It was then that Koed made his presentation to the housing authority.

"I believe this makes the Curtis Estate case much stronger — if the housing authority takes this stand," Pratt said. "Their feeling is, and I agree, that housing for the mentally retarded comes close to what Curtis stated in his will. If the town is indeed to have that property belong to the town, the housing authority is the entity we would look to to manage the property."

In regard to the court case, Pratt said the housing authority would be the only town agency recognized by the court in the current probate action.

"This vote by the housing authority convinces me and others that we're in better shape as far as that case is concerned," the selectman noted.

Cable show honored

"Cohasset Talks" is a finalist in the municipal issues - community volunteers category. The episode nominated was an interview Pierson had with lobsterman Herbert Jason, featuring five minutes of footage from his vessel Blue Heather.

The show's producer is Robert Belliveau and the director is Marek Laas.

The program began in 1987 with an interview with Cohasset Moderator William Weeks before a special town meeting in Cohasset.

Recently, a gentleman came into our shop and asked for twelve lords a-leaping, eleven ladies dancing, ten pipers piping, nine drummers drumming, eight maids a-milking, seven swans a-swimming, six geese a-laying, five golden rings, four calling birds, three French hens, two turtle doves, and a partridge in a pear tree. Clearly a tough customer.

We were fresh out of maids a-milking. So instead he selected twelve lavender frogs a-leaping, eleven vases flowering, ten goblets sparkling, nine fish platters swimming, eight grapevine angels twining, seven candles glowing, six kitten carvings, five napkin rings, four ringing bells, three French soaps, two perfume doves and a porcelain rabbit tureen.

Which we happily gift-wrapped and shipped.

New harbormaster makes his life by the sea

"A lot of the boats were overloaded, and the people had nothing more than the clothes on their back.

"We took them on board and to immigration."

While he was stationed on the Sherman, he was involved with the rescue of the crew of the Argo Merchant which broke in half off Nantucket in 1976.

"We had been on our way back to Boston," he said, "and were directed to get involved with the rescue."

The Coast Guard was a good life, according to Gadow.

"I would have stayed longer if I could," said Gadow, who explained that 30 years of service is the limit.

Gadow said he had decided to play his retirement by ear.

"I didn't think an opportunity like this would pop up," said Gadow, who saw the newspaper advertisement for Cohasset harbormaster.

"I thought I'd apply, and it just worked out.

"I had thought about going to college, and I may still do that when things settle down."

Gadow's first few days as harbormaster were memorable, though not in the way he expected.

While touring the facilities with Selectman James Gallagher, he learned that the work boat's engine was down for repairs at Monahan Marine, and the Welcome to Cohasset sign that was moored at the entrance to the harbor was ashore at the harbor end of the channel.

In addition, the patrol boats controls were not working after being vandalized, and the harbormaster shack was vandalized by somebody who drove up against the door of the shack.

"It wasn't really what I expected," said Gadow good-naturedly.

"I didn't anticipate all the problems.

"But being in the Coast Guard, dealing with budget cuts, I'm kind of used to working without funds.

"I'm just geared to take it in stride."

So far, Gadow has been going through the records and trying to get the boats and equipment together.

He also intends to spruce up the harbormaster shack.

Gadow, whose assistant harbormaster is Cliff Dickson, is also in charge of assigning the coveted moorings in Cohasset Harbor.

He is mindful of the problems last June when 75 residents lost their moorings or their place on the waiting list for missing a deadline. Some are suing the town.

"I'll just go by the bylaws," said Gadow. "I hope it will go OK."

He has also been briefed on proposed plans for 109 boat slips around The Oaks, formerly the Cox Estate.

"Adding 109 more slips is just not going to leave any room for small pleasure boats or fishermen to negotiate around," said Gadow.

"It's just going to be too congested."

Cadow noted problems of fire hazard if one boat catches on fire and has to be towed away, and the prospect of 45-foot boats in the 100-foot channel.

"We're just about at the maximum now," he said. "It's realy going to be tough if the moorings are increased."

Gadow said he has received a warm welcome in Cohasset.

"Fishermen and other people have been stopping by," he said.

"The local people have been supportive, offering any assistance or help to get started.

"The fishermen have been great offering their assistance, too.

"I'm glad to be in Cohasset," he said. "I love it.

"It's just a quaint, little harbor, and the people are super friendly."

School transportation woes

Chairman Kornet warned that because of fiscal constraints, the bus service provided to the students now may be decreased next year. "We may be forced next year to cut back on our transportation and we may have to consider depot stops - one stop."

Rather than increasing transportation in the future, Kornet said the committee may have to consider "going in the opposite direction next year. We may even need parent volunteers at each of these depots because we can't afford crossing guards.

"The fact is, we can't justify door-to-door transportation. It's getting that bad, and it's going to be tighter next year."

Supt. Stephen Hart explained that other requests for closer bus stops have been made to his office. But requiring the buses to go into each side street would increase the travel time dramatically, and the school department would be obliged to provide the same "door-to-door" service for the entire community.

School committee member Christopher Ford said since the Riverview Drive parents made their request known, he has seen similar situations along Parker Avenue and Border Street and Elm Court and Elm Street where children must stand and wait for the bus on a busy street.

"But we are talking about cutting (next year's budget) dramatically," Ford said, explaining that children within a mile of the school could be required to walk.

"This disappoints me," Ronald Nicynski of 34 Riverview Drive replied. "I moved to Cohasset because of its school system. I thought in this community money would never be an issue."

He continued,"I don't think there'd be a lot of favoritism for depots. I think you should have another action plan. I'd hate to have one accident happen in order to prevent the problems we are talking about now."

School committee member Nancy Sandell suggested that all children within walking distance of school should do so. "I wish we didn't have the buses to rely on and they could walk to school."

Referring to the Riverview Drive dilemma, Sandell suggested the parents find some place about 20 feet from Beechwood Street where the kids are told to wait for the bus. The bus driver would then be required to wait for them to walk down to the bus.

"The fact is, we can't justify door-to-door transportation. It's getting that bad, and it's going to be tighter next year."

Diana Kornet, school committee chairman

The committee members said they could not support a change in bus routes for one street only. "There's going to be a second, third and fourth request," member Russ Reidy predicted.' "It's terrible to have to draw the line, but we have to do it somewhere.

"The procedure would lead to a Pandora's box. I think safety could be provided if the students moved back from the street."

Supt. Hart explained that in Cohasset, students are not provided the minimum amount of bus service. "We're trying to reach a reasonable level of service. There have been times when depots have been considered. I hope we can reconsider a level we are comfortable with - that tries to be responsible."

Several of the Riverview Drive residents suggested that instead of cutting back on service, the school committee could present an increased transportation budget at the annual town meeting.

"But if you look at additional teachers and lower class sizes or more transportation, we would rather that the classrooms be kept intact."

Transportation cuts could come next year

Sandell answered.

One solution may be to combine Osgood and Deer Hill students, making each route longer but providing more buses to service the town. On the other hand, Kornet said, some parents may complain about combining first graders with sixth graders, and about the increased time the students are onboard the bus.

Kornet explained that the school committee intends to present a budget to the town meeting that maintains the same level of service currently provided. Town meeting will also have the opportunity to vote on a "wish budget" proposed by the committee that could include items such as increased transportation.

The committee encouraged the Riverview Drive residents to contact other concerned residents about proposing increased transportation service.

"My instinct," Kornet stated, "is that we believe that when faced with severe (budget) cuts, maybe its better to have a little less p.e. (physical education) and more walking with parents volunteers (at the street crossings). But we will not know that until the end of the budget process."

The final solution offered to the parents was to designate a waiting spot on Riverview Drive for the students. "We understand your concern," Kornet said, "but we have a very tight budget. We may be short before the end of the year and we can't justify extending it (transportation)."

Officials support SEMASS contrac t

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

Selectmen voted unanimously Monday night, Nov. 21 to support the health board's decision to accept a proposal from SEMASS to accept trash from Cohasset for four years starting with the operation of the solid waste transfer station.

The decision to accept the proposal was based on reduced transportation costs as opposed to Orrington, Me.,the relative ease of transport and the reduced cost based on a starting tipping fee of $44/ton, according to the health board.

Selectmen also voted to award the bid for the transfer station to Sciaba Bros. of Readville for $472,200.

Health board chairman Sharon Becker said the transfer station could be finished next June.

Health board member Michael Sullivan cited the reduced transportation costs and the board's interest in establishing a relationship with SEMASS.

"It made sense to go to SEMASS now," said Sullivan.

The town had already planned to go to SEMASS in 1991 when it goes into its Phase II operation.

"What are the chances that they will take us in permanently when Phase II opens?" asked selectman chairman Burt Pratt.

"We should know by the end of the month," said Sullivan.

"The site is already permitted," he said. "Odds are they will get permitted (for Phase II).

"If not, we have four years to get an alternative site."

Sullivan said with the planned disruption of traffic through Boston with the depression of the Southern Artery, transportation problems will be taken care of with the SEMASS proposal.

"I think it makes sense to go to SEMASS," he said.

"It doesn't make sense to go to Maine," agreed Becker.

Officials support SEMASS contract. . .

The town had been close to signing an agreement to have its trash transported to Penobscot, Maine, beginning next spring because there was thought to be no room at SEMASS until 1991.

But then SEMASS had a new proposal.

The dump area study committee had also unanimously recommended accepting the SEMASS proposal.

Sullivan said that Sciaba Bros. was the low bidder to construct the transfer station, and has experience in that kind of work.

Other costs involved would be for engineering, clerk of the works and a compaction crane, said Sullivan.

But Sullivan said the town may not need to buy a compaction crane if a used backhoe could be purchased for that purpose.

"Who ever said you could use a backhoe for compaction?" asked Laugelle.

"SEA Consultants," answered Becker.

"It's done in a number of transfer stations, and it works well," she said.

Landfill supervisor Joseph Laugelle suggested adding a blade to the town's tractor and using that for compaction.

In a related matter, the board voted to support warrant article 12 which would transfer from available funds or borrow $21,899 for payment under the lease/purchase contract with Southworth Machinery for the rubber tire front end loader used at the Cedar St. Solid Waste Facility.

It also voted to support Article 14 to permit the $80,000 appropriated for tipping fees, transportation costs and transfer station operation costs in connection with the disposal and delivery of the town's solid waste to landfill sites other than the municipal landfill on Cedar St., for the acquisition of capital equipment to be used at the Cedar St. Solid Waste Disposal Facility and for operating costs in connection with the Cedar St. Solid Waste Disposal Facility.

In other action, selectmen voted:

• Instructed executive secretary Greg Doyon to contact developer Ross Rosano to ask him when he will pave the section of North Main St. which was dug up in connection with his Rocky Lane development.

• Voted to investigate having a gunnite wall of less than six inches installed at the common pond.

Pratt said that only two inches might be necessary at a reduced cost.

"Two inches will peel off," said Rocco Laugelle. "It's too thin."

He later abstained from the vote.

Pratt also said that all of the debris in the pond including reinforcing rods should be cleared before it is filled with water to make ice for skaters.

Some $38,900 is available for the work on the pond which should take about two weeks when the board decides on the right course of action.

• Agreed to accept in principal trying to combine certain purchases such as the telephone service, copy paper and postage meter.

• Agreed to send representatives to a meeting Tuesday evening, Nov. 29, on the Curtis Estate.

"They want to make an application for a consultant," explained Pratt.

• Agreed to send a letter to the new owner of Central Market, 60 Main St., asking when the store will open.

A license transfer was approved by the board Oct. 31 from James Finucane to J. Kevin McManus of Scituate.

• Noted that candidates are welcome to apply for the Cohasset Housing Partnership Committee.

around town

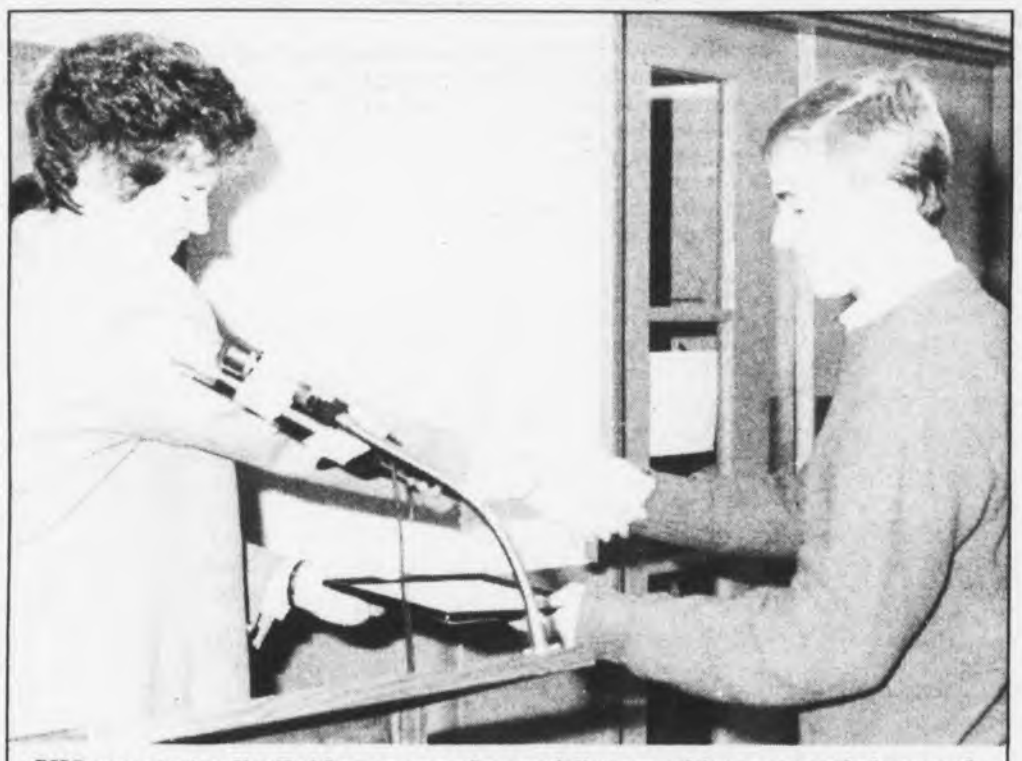
□ Tom Wigmore turned twenty-five recently, and there was a huge party for him to celebrate! Polly Litchfield did it again, organizing the gala, which was held at the George H. Meley Post. All of Tom's friends and relatives were there, and dancing up a storm (Chris Laugelle was the "disc jockey;" he did a super job). One of the highlights of the evening was a proclamation from Governor Dukakis, which Tom will certainly treasure! Happy birthday, Tom.

□ Dick Straley wanted us all to be aware of the following: in case you haven't noticed, there are new signs in the Village. No Parking 2 to 6 a.m., and one hour parking 6 a.m. to 2 a.m. has been established by the Board of Selectmen through the joint cooperation of Safety Officer Cliff Jones, Highway Superintendent Harold Litchfield and the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce. Also, be sure to take note of the "No U Turns" sign.

□ Elizabeth Bristolis is in the hospital in Florida, and we'll bet she would love to hear from you (she sent a note recently, saying how wonderful it was to hear from a lot of her Cohasset friends). She is in Clearwater Community Hospital, Clearwater, Florida, 34616.

□ Connie Burke is recovering from surgery performed last week, and everyone certainly is rooting for her!

□ The 1988 Cohasset Gridiron Club book is out, and it is a dandy one this year! As you know, the purpose of the Club is to promote, stimulate and advance interest in football at Cohasset High School, and this book is a big part of that goal. This year it is dedicated to Ken Ekberg, who worked in the Gridiron Club for eight years. Congratulations Ken! By the way, they will be on sale at the game on Thanskgiving, be sure you get one to support this loyal club.



CHS soccer star Jim Reidy was one of many fall team athletes recently honored by the Boosters Club. CHS Principal Mary Ellen Gallagher makes the presentation.

(J. Paul MacDonald photo)

□ Congratulations to Bob Goyette, who has been named Assistant Vice-president/ Commercial Lending at Abington Savings Bank. Bob was with Shawmut Bank before this, and he was named to the President's Club in 1987 while there. He is also a member of the United Way and Junior Achievement. He is the son of Bob and Doris Goyette, and a CHS graduate.

□ Candice Buckley is one proud speller! A few weeks ago there was a spelling bee for the sixth grade, and she won! Her word was "corroded". Jessica Jenkins was the runner up for the event. You two are great!

□ Here's to the new Mr. and Mrs. Ed Kassis, may they have a long and happy life together. Janet and Ed were married in a beautiful candlelight ceremony last week, which is just the beginning of a spectacular life, we are sure. Congratulations.

□ The Village Fair Committee is one busy crew right now, and they are on their countdown. The fair is December 3, and it's an event that the whole town looks forward to. They are still looking for articles for the Bargain Bazaar. If you have a donation, bring them to the Parish House at 23 North Main Street on Tuesday (11/29), Wednesday (11/30), Thursday, (12/1) or Friday, (12/2). They would like everything saleable that you have, excluding clothing.

□ Dudley Bryant, Chip Wier, Matt Silvia, Jack Beddows, John Coon, Steve Migliaccio, Cecilia Candia, Mike Equi, Jake Powell, Dana DeVos, J. Gaston and Felicia Bartow are all participating in an Art Contest sponsored by the Wang Center for Performing Arts. They are part of a group that will be from all throughout New England. The theme is space travel and the future, and we are rooting for you all.

□ If you have an extra guest over the holidays, and no extra bed, don't forget Saltmarsh Farms. It is Cohasset's own B&B, it's lovely, and it's so wonderfully New England. There are two rooms available. Call Tina at 383-6205 for more details.

□ We hope that Helen Jason is feeling lots better as she reads this!

□ All of those who attended the Gridiron Dinner-dance had a super time. The food at Hugo's was wonderful, the dancing could have lasted forever, and the people were great.

□ Finally, this Thanksgiving should be a super one, especially at our house! Twenty-five years ago on Thanksgiving Clark and I were married, so it will be a real celebration for us!! Thanks for twenty-five wonderful years, Clark, and here's to the next twenty-five!!!

□ Hope that all of you have a wonderful holiday, full of good food and lots of love.

A day in the life of a local lobsterman

Lagrotteria drops the keepers into a wooden box behind the helm station. His friend Laura Anderson of Reading, who usually accompanies him on weekends, picks them up one at a time and snaps rubber bands over their claws with a special tool resembling a pair of pliers.

"They're vicious fighters, and if you didn't band them, they'd tear each other apart in no time," she says.

Anderson puts the banded lobsters into a waist-high blue plastic drum. Inside is a white hose about 3 inches in diameter, which provides a constant supply of seawater to keep the lobsters alive.

When the pot is cleaned out, Lagrotteria removes the mesh bag containing the malodorous remains of the bait and empties it over the side. He scoops three fresh—well, relatively fresh—pogies, bait-fish about 9 inches long, into the bag, hangs it on a nail inside the pot, and fastens the lid shut.

"Pogies make the best lobster bait, because they have a nice, oily smell to them," Lagrotteria says, explaining that the plastic tubs of bait, each 24 inches by 18 inches and a foot deep, cost him $12 apiece.

He hefts the newly-baited pot and places it on the deck beside the blue drum. The next few pots yield nothing but shorts and a few crabs. These he tosses overboard before re-baiting the pots and arranging them neatly on the deck near the first one.

A few more keepers find their way into the blue drum before Lagrotteria finishes tending the first trawl. Now it's time to re-set the pots.

"Keep your feet out of the coils of line when they're going overboard," he warns, dropping one of the buoys over the side.

He guns the 250-horsepower Cummins diesel and the boat surges ahead. The stern of the boat is open, and as the buoy line tightens the rearmost pot slides off the deck into the wake and sinks slowly in a froth of bubbles.

The buoy line uncoils and snakes off the stern, moving ever faster as more pots go overboard, one by one. The line tightens on the last pot and yanks it violently across the black deck mats and into the water with a loud splash.

"This is the most efficient way to set pots," Lagrotteria says as he swings the Maine-built boat around and peers ahead, looking for his next buoy. "Some guys don't have the open stern, so they line up the pots along the rails. But if you do that, it's easy to get the gear tangled up," he adds.

Lagrotteria is of medium height and muscular, with close-cropped dark hair, piercing brown eyes and an easy grin. His face sports a dark tan acquired by lobstering seven days a week when the weather is warm.

Even under the best of conditions, lobstering is hard, physical work. Today Lagrotteria will haul and re-bait about half of his 600 pots.

"Today, it's easy," he says, referring to the calm seas and mild early-autumn temperatures. "Beautiful day to be on the water.

"I go out every day now. You can't do that in the winter, you have to pick and choose your days. I don't go if there's a storm, or if it's colder than about 15 degrees. The diesel engine doesn't like to run in the cold," he says, explaining that the lobsters move out into deeper water as the temperature drops, obliging him to travel 15 to 20 miles offshore before he can set gear.

Despite the obvious hardships wrought by frigid weather, winter lobstering offers some unexpected rewards, according to Laura Anderson.

"We've been out on the sea a few times when it was snowing. With the silence, and the falling snow, and the unusual light you see over the water, it was just incredibly beautiful. I can't even describe it," she says.

Before he acquired his first lobster boat 10 years ago, Lagrotteria worked on commercial longline boats, fishing for swordfish and tuna in the North Atlantic and the Gulf of Mexico. Sometimes the boat was at sea for as long as a month, he says.

"I really enjoy running my own boat, instead of working for somebody else," he explains.

Lagrotteria is obviously proud of the Dorothy Ruth, which he named after his mother and has owned for about a year.

"I used to have an older, wooden boat, but I wasn't sure she was all that safe. Having a new boat is great. Don't you think it's nice of the bank to let me go lobstering in her?" he says with a grin.

Indeed, running a lobstering operation is an expensive proposition, and Lagrotteria will have to catch a lot of crustaceans to pay for his boat and gear. Lobster pots sell for about $35 each. He also owns many thousands of feet of hemp rope, which must be replaced periodically, like the buoys, which cost about $3 apiece. Every year he wears out two sets of oilskins and three pairs of rubber boots. Lagrotteria also must spend about $100 per day for bait and fuel, and $1,000 per year for oak laths to repair damaged lobster pots.

"Oak is incredibly expensive, but it's the only wood that will stand up to the seawater. The worms and other sea creatures would eat up soft wood in no time. I repair my pots all winter, as needed," he says, explaining that some of his newer pots are made of wire mesh, which holds up better in the salt water.

Lagrotteria hoists a wire-mesh pot onto the rail and opens the lid. He takes out a struggling lobster. "Look, she's got eggs," he says.

Laura Anderson turns the female over to point out the clumps of tiny black eggs clustered along the underside of the tail. They bear a strong resemblance to good caviar.

"She's already dropped some of her eggs," Anderson says, explaining that keeping any egg-bearing lobster is strictly illegal. "Notice how she has a much broader tail than the males, to allow room for the eggs. She must have been carrying these for awhile, because she's already dropped a lot of them," she adds, handing the lobster to Lagrotteria, who returns her to the sea.

The blue drum is slowly filling with lobsters, but Lagrotteria hauls an entire trawl off Hull and gets only two keepers for his trouble.

"I might have to move these pots someplace else," he says with a frown.

"Lobstering's been okay this year," Lagrotteria says, but quickly adds that fishermen are a reticent crowd, seldom boasting of their success. "Fishermen have a lot of secrets. I know another lobsterman," Lagrotteria says, mentioning a name. "He's got a nice house that's paid for, his boat and his truck are paid for, but he'll never admit the fishing's any good. And I don't blame him," he adds with a grin.

After several hours of hauling and tending pots, Lagrotteria has the blue drum and two empty bait tubs nearly full of lobsters. When the last trawl has been set, he begins his scrupulous daily cleanup operation.

"He's a fanatic about keeping the boat clean," comments Laura Anderson, as Lagrotteria pulls the raw-water hose from the drum.

First he hoses down the entire boat, washing away the mud and bits of seaweed that have come in on the pots and lines. Next he splashes a dollop of biodegradable detergent into a plastic pail and fills it with seawater.

He dips a brush into the suds and scrubs the outer hull below the rail where the pots come up. All interior and exterior surfaces receive the same careful treatment.

"With even a slight breeze, little bits of old bait get stuck to the hull along here. If I didn't clean up every day, it would start to smell horrible. Some of the other lobstermen don't clean their boats as carefully as I do," Lagrotteria says, grinning broadly and holding his nose. "This way, it's a pleasure to come aboard in the morning," he adds.

Lobstering is Lagrotteria's living, but fishing is his passion. He always carries his casting rods aboard, and fishes for striped bass and bluefish almost every day during the warm months. Many of his lobstermen friends do the same.

"Even when I'm hauling pots, if I see a school of fish I drop everything and make a few casts," he says, as the Dorothy Ruth approaches one of the innumerable rocky ledges surrounding Minot's Light.

"The tide's in, so there should be some bass here," Lagrotteria says, positioning the boat so the wind and current will carry her past the target rock. He fires a blue swimming plug toward the rock and watches closely during the retrieve. The fourth cast attracts a follower, a striper which trails the lure almost to the boat without hitting.

Lagrotteria spots the silver flash as the bass veers away. "Damn," he breathes. "That was a nice fish. Would have gone 20 pounds anyway," he says.

Lagrotteria had a lucky day not long ago, taking an 11-pound lobster and a 38-pound striper. "Wish that happened more often," he says.

Deciding the stripers by the rock have probably been spooked by the commotion, he elects to move to another spot to give them time to calm down and resume feeding.

"Once they've been spooked, you could cast for an hour and get nothing," he says. We'll go away for awhile, and give them time to forget. Bass are finicky, but they aren't too bright." He laughs.

Forty minutes later, Lagrotteria returns to the rock. His fifth cast brings a strike, and he hauls back on the rod to get the fish's head turned toward the boat.

Commitment to honor

Perhaps with the upcoming Thanksgiving Day celebration, we are more aware of our blessings in this community.

We have experienced our share of losses, disagreements and hardships, but we remain a fortunate town. Our disappointments and defeats are not nearly as great as those suffered by other communities in this country and abroad.

We must realize that our bounty has been given to us to be shared. We cannot gloat in our glory and be unwilling to help those less fortunate. It is the sign of a great man or woman to be able to listen to the cries of others and to respond without hesitation.

We are in the position to take advantage of this situation. The town is attempting, through the county court system, to intervene in the attorney general's case regarding the disposition of the Curtis Estate. The trustees of that Jerusalem Road property would like to sell it to a private investor. They have found it impossible to oblige the terms of the late George E. Curtis' will to house infermed and deformed women in the four homes on the 53-acre property. They have petitioned the attorney general to break the terms of the will.

The town, on the other hand, would like to gain control of that property. Not for profit, but to supply housing to those who sorely lack it. The town proposes to turn the management of the property over to the housing authority. There would be units assigned for affordable housing, as a shelter for the homeless, for transient housing, and as a shelter for the abused.

Now, a member of the housing authority proposed that another segment be added to the town's proposal - housing for the retarded. Fred Koed suggested last week that eight units of housing for the retarded be included in the proposal which will be reviewed by the attorney general.

He strongly suggested that this type of housing more closely resembles the intent of George Curtis' will. The housing authority, and several town officials, including Selectman Burt Pratt, agreed. Inclusion of housing for the retarded, along with a state grant to accomplish that work, might be the portion of the plan that tips the attorney general's favor toward the town.

If the attorney general rules against the trustees' petition, the property will likely go to the town's housing authority, on the basis of the proposal the town has submitted to the court.

We feel the inclusion of housing for the retarded does indeed strengthen the town's case.

We hope the housing authority immediately initiates the application for state grant funding. The court has established a hearing date of December 15 - after that all arguments will have been completed and no new proposals will be allowed.

The town is under a strict deadline. It is up to the housing authority to amend that proposal, but to do it as expeditiously as possible. There is no time to hesitate - the town must make that commitment without delay.

Resident opposes petition approval

To the Editor:

I am concerned with the Board of Selectmen's apparent open-ended policy to accept citizen petitions, without signatures, for town meeting warrants.

My rationale for the Selectmen mandating that a signature policy be adhered to in the future is as follows:

When individuals run for elective office they must show support for their candidacy by collecting a required number of signatures. Without the signature requirement, the ballot could be filled with the names of numerous candidates for office who (1) have no support for their candidacy; (2) decided to run during a moment of madness; (3) are not serious candidates.

Regarding the recent article presented to selectmen by a sole petitioner, which asks TM to reduce the board of selectmen to three members:

1. There was no urgency for selectmen to accept this article. The petitioner had about 6 months to gather 10 signatures (the number of signatures required to place a petition on the annual town meeting warrant).

2. Other than the sole petitioner, there was no demonstrated support for this article.

3. The selectmen directed town counsel to work with the petitioner to legally word the article. I assume town counsel was paid for his research. Accordingly, this policy could become "costly" should numerous sole petitioners demand the same amenity.

4. While one person certainly does have the right to petition his government; one person, with a good issue, should have the puissance to campaign and collect signatures for his issue.

Letters

5. Without some demonstration of the electorate's support, our town meeting warrants could be filled with numerous and frivolous (but legal) requests for town meeting action.

For the above reasons, the selectmen might consider requiring that any and all forthcoming petition articles be accompanied by the appropriate signatures: 10 signatures for annual town meeting, 100 for a special. Most articles (if they are legal requests) can be amended on town meeting floor and be acted on, accordingly, at that same meeting.

In August 1982 one of the largest special town meetings ever assembled voted by approximately 21 votes, to increase the board of selectmen to five. Petitioners collected well over 200 signatures, campaigned at the dump, spoke before town boards and committees, and wrote many letters to the editor.

A month later a sole petitioner asked selectmen to put an article on the warrant to revoke the August vote. That individual had no signatures, and no demonstrated support. At the upcoming special town meeting the article to revoke lost 2 to 1.

Sincerely
Tanna Kasperowicz

Vo-tech academic budget to be beefed up

By Patricia Masterson
Mariner correspondent

Beefing up the academic program at the South Shore VoTech High School will be the top goal for the 1989-1990 regional school budget, Superintendent Clifford Easton reported to school committee members Wednesday night.

Easton presented initial budget ideas to the committee before they begin to sculpt the numbers plan Nov. 30.

He did not present figures to the committee but rather explained the direction he is heading in preparing the budget plan.

"We can't have a high-tech vocational school without a good academic base," said Easton, who told the committee that academics were strong at the school but needed to compare to local non-vocational high schools.

He anticipates increases in books and materials for the areas of social studies, english, reading and mathematics.

David Chittim, school committee member from Cohasset, agreed.

"We all have financial problems in our towns, but we are under an obligation to provide a good education for 501 students," he said.

"In addition to trade skills, we should also be teaching the students to be managers and entrepreneurs. This education is important to the local towns, because we are a resource," said Chittim.

Enrollment is creeping upwards in the regional school, particularly in the female and out-of-district populations. Seventy-one of 501 students are from outside of the eight-member school district. Twenty-four percent of the student population is female, while seven years ago, there were three female students.

Enrollment from Hanover, Abington, Hanson, Scituate and Whitman is decreasing, while Cohasset, Norwell and Rockland enrollment is stable.

The 1988-1989 budget is on target but unanticipated costs for septic system repairs, a 32-percent increase in Blue Cross/Blue Shield coverage and additional bus repairs are putting a strain on the budget, according to Robert Kelly, Secretary/Treasurer of the committee. Last year, increases occurred in the areas of equipment and operation.

In other money matters, the committee voted $7,000 for a Harris 3M copier from Spaulding Company, in Stoughton, for the graphics arts department.

Real estate property tax abatements available

The Cohasset Board of Assessors reminds residents that they may qualify for real estate tax exemptions, depending on age and other requirements. Among the exemptions available are the following:

A $500 exemption, or deduction, from the total amount of taxes owed the town, if the applicant is 70 years of age or over as of July 1 of the tax year, owns and occupies the property and otherwise qualifies.

Since Cohasset has adopted Clause 41B, the qualifications are as follows:

(1) The total gross receipts of the applicant if single must be less than $10,000 and if married, the combined gross receipts of husband and wife must be less than $13,000. the annual minimum social security deduction changes in each year. For Fiscal Year 1989 the social security deduction is

Worker	$2,199.10
Spouse	1,099.55

(2) The total worth of the applicant if single, minus the value of the domicile except for any portion which produces income, cannot exceed $20,000; or the combined total worth of the applicant if married cannot exceed $23,000.

A $175 exemption if the applicant is a veteran with a war service connected disability of 10% or more as certified by the Veterans Administration or the branch of the service from which he/she had been discharged and who owns and occupies the property as of July 1 of the tax year. Also eligible for exemption is the veteran with a Purple Heart, spouses and surviving spouses of veterans so long as they remain unmarried, parents of servicemen who lost their lives in battle and surviving spouses of World War I veterans. In order to be eligible for exemption a veteran must have been domiciled in Massachusetts for at least six months prior to enlisting or have resided in Massachusetts for five consecutive years prior to filing for exemption.

The exemptions to qualifying veterans range from $175 to $875 to total amounts depending upon the war service connected disability of the veteran. Your assessors can advise you in respect to the particular exemption to which you may be entitled.

A $437.50 exemption if the applicant is legally blind, owns and occupies the property as of July 1 of the tax year and provides a certificate in each year from the Division of the Blind.

Cohasset has adopted Clause 17C which provides a $175 exemption to a surviving spouse or a minor with parent deceased or to a person who is 70 years of age as of July 1 of the tax year and who has owned and occupied the property as a domicile for not less than ten years. The total estate, both real and personal, cannot exceed $40,000, exclusive of any mortgage interest in any real estate and exclusive of the first $60,000 of value in the domicile.

Applications for abatement because of age, infirmity and poverty must be filed timely in the same manner as all other exemptions; and the decision to grant the exemption rests solely with the assessors based on the criteria set forth in Clause 18 — age, infirmity and poverty.

Deferral of all or any part of taxes during the applicant's lifetime up to 50% of the applicant's interest in the fair cash value of the property, provided the applicant is 65 years of age or over as of July 1 of the tax year. The taxpayer enters into a tax deferral agreement with the assessors. If the taxpayer dies, the heirs shall have the lien released upon payment of the deferred taxes plus simple interest at eight percent per annum. If the property is sold during the applicant's lifetime, taxes and interest must be paid to the town. Applicants may defer in one year and not the next. The deferral or Clause 41A may be used in conjunction with any exemption.

Applications for exemption must be filed on or before December 15 of the year to which the tax relates. If the tax bill is sent after September 15, the taxpayer has three months from the date the bill is first mailed in which to file the application for exemption. The time limitations for filing applications for abatement or exemption cannot be waived by the assessors. If applications for exemption are not filed within the statutory period, the application must be denied.

If two or more persons who own the same property are entitled to different exemptions, each may apply and if each qualifies for different exemptions, each would be entitled to his or her exemption. However, the taxes cannot be reduced to less than 10% of the full and fair cash value of the property.

Applications for exemptions, deferrals and extensions are available at the assessor's office and can be mailed to residents at their request.

Historical society offers unique holiday gift ideas

The holiday season traditionally is a time for giving of gifts, and the Cohasset Historical Society is offering a number of gift items related to the town's unique history, suitable for the discerning gift-giver.

Appropriate for the season is the Society's new 1989 wall calendar "Scenes Of Old Cohasset." This calendar features a dozen large photographic scenes showing Cohasset as it was during the latter 19th and early 20th centuries. Most of the views are taken from the Society's archive collection of early photographs.

Pictured are such scenes as the Common ringed by stately elms in the early 1900's; Black Rock Beach and its nearby turn-of-the-century hotel known as the "Second House;" another presents the original Osgood School, the town's first central schoolhouse, in an unusual view. There are several views of early Cohasset Center, including one showing the town's Fire Companies demonstrating fire-fighting techniques of an earlier time at the corner of South Main and Brook Streets. The town's harbor and the old wooden bridge at the Gulf are pictured, as they appeared in days now past. Gracing the cover of "Scenes Of Old Cohasset" is the Historical Society's 1821 brick-ended Georgian headquarters, the Caleb Lothrop House, site of the Society's library and archives.

"Scenes Of Old Cohasset" is available through the Society or at several shops in the town.

Originally issued in 1898 by the First Committee On Town History and recently reprinted by the Historical Society, Rev. E. Victor Bigelow's monumental "The Narrative History Of The Town of Cohasset, Massachusetts" is the definitive history of the town from its beginning to the time of publication. Starting with prehistory, Rev. Bigelow describes the ancient geology of its granite ledges, its glacial topography, its fauna and flora, and its early Indian inhabitants. Then this finely-written narrative proceedes, chapter by chapter, through the early settlement and growth of the town; the division of the land among first settlers from Hingham; the building of highways; the development of early trades and industries; and of churches, schools, libraries, and the first railroad. Cohasset's long maritime history during the great "Age of Sail" is presented in chapter about shipbuilding, fishing and mercantile activities. Shipwrecks, volunteer lifesaving and the construction of Minot's Ledge Lighthouse at our shores are subjects for the author's attention. Rev. Bigelow finishes his record of this small coastal New England village by describing the Cohasset of his own time; when it was a summer colony for the wealthy of Boston who were attracted by the town's zestful summer breezes and verdant landscapes. "Narrative History Of The Town of Cohasset" is available from the Historical Society or at Fleming's in Cohasset Center.

Edmund Pomeroy Collier's biographical study titled "Cohasset's Deep Sea Captains" first appeared as a historical chapter added to the 1909 publication of the town's genealogies. The Historical Society has reprinted this unusual writing in the form of a paperback book. "Cohasset's Deep Sea Captains" presents biographical sketches of close to fifty of the town's 18th and 19th century Master Mariners who commanded large sailing vessels on voyages to all parts of the world. Written by the son of one of the most famous of Cohasset's Shipmasters, Capt. James Collier, this volume gives a first-hand look at an illustrious age now past. During the 19th century Cohasset ranked high among the small fishing and mercantile ports of Massachusetts, and Collier records the careers and adventures of its most eminent seafarers. The book is illustrated with numerous pictures of the men and the vessels they sailed.

Also available through the Historical Society are the Pairpoint Glass cup plates showing Minot's Ledge Lighthouse just off Cohasset's shores. Minot's Light cup plates are available in clear, green and cobalt blue colors.

The Cohasset Historical Society has a limited number of medium-sized tote bags. Provided for the Society by Goodwin Graphics of Cohasset, the sturdy canvas totes carry the seal of the Society.

Further information may be obtained by contacting the Society at 383-6930.

Workers prepare for the Village Fair

Workers for Cohasset's Village Fair will pause briefly for their traditional Thanksgiving festivities this week then resume preparations next week in anticipation of the 10 a.m. Village Fair opening Saturday, Dec. 3.

Beginning Monday morning at 9:30 in the Second Congregational Church and continuing each day until 3 p.m., the wreath committee will be carrying on their decoration project, attaching bows, cones and other bits of brightness to the 39 dozen evergreen wreaths they will offer for sale. Once again they are convassing businesses for advance quantity sales and will be open for advance individual sales on Wednesday and Thursday. Merle Graham and Jean Manganaro head up the wreath operation.

Throughout the week from 9 a.m. until 3, Walton Rodgers Hall of St. Stephen's Church will be open for the receipt of donated books, with Chairman Helen Hooper requesting more children's books this year.

Beginning Tuesday, Nov. 29, and continuing through the week, workers for the Bargain Bazaar will be in Trueblood Hall of the Unitarian Parish House from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. to receive and price the hundreds of attic and cellar treasures that will go on sale there Saturday. This year, Co-Chairs Linda Gardner and Gail Bell have asked donors to hold their donations until the final week as a system they believe will be more efficient and convenient for all.

Beginning Thursday, the transportation group under the leadership of Bill Bell will undertake the assembly and moving of the scores of tables that will be needed in the Town Hall and other locations for the big merchandising operation. The committees assigned to the Town Hall will then be able to set up their stations for Boutique, Children's Corner, Snack Bar, Plants, Grabs and other operations in the auditorium.

In the meantime, ticket sellers for some of the other popular Fair features have been moving throughout their congregation and the community making advance sales for the Village Fair Dinner, and the raffles.

The dinner which is the traditional wind-up of the Fair, will again be held this year in Walton Rodgers Hall of St. Stephen's Church, with hors d'oeuvres at 6:30 p.m. and dinner at 7. An entree of chicken coriander will be served by the Borrowed Butler, with hors d'oeuvres donated by Carmen of the Strawberry Parfait, and wine by Peter Logan of Cohasset Liquors. Tickets at $13 are being sold by Central Committee representatives in each of the five churches with a deadline of Nov. 26 and will not be available at the door. Sally Avery heads the dinner arrangements, which include the sale of centerpieces and carol singing to conclude the evening.

Chris Kierce, with assistance from past chairman Lou Simeone, heads the raffle efforts, which this year will add a special raffle of donated dolls dressed by volunteer couturiers. The major raffle will again offer many donated articles and services. Sale of raffle tickets will continue through the day of the fair until the drawings in the afternoon.

Holiday open house

The Nature Gift Shop at the South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell is holding its annual open house from Friday, Nov. 25 through Sunday Dec. 4.

"Holidays in the Woodlands," this year's theme, features an assortment of functional as well as unusual gift ideas for all on your holiday gift list.

"We have stocked the shop with an assortment of items in a variety of price ranges to appeal to just about everyone; so you can avoid the pressure-packed shopping mall," said Allesandra Smith, Nature Shop manager. "We invite all to come in and browse, have some refreshments, and relax a bit during this hectic holiday season."

Ideas for kids include woodland puppets, crystal stamps and scented stamp pads, dinosaur tracks, bug boxes, mechanical banks, archeology kits, weather sticks, two-way microscopes, storybook ornaments, and lots of little stocking stuffers.

For adults, there are baskets of every shape, Brazilian agate clocks and paperweights, many types of bird feeders, cosmic stargazers, berry and beeswax candles, popcorn-on-the-cob, handmade tree ornaments, moon-phase clocks, rock bookends, and reasonably priced hand-carved shore birds (under $30). As always, there are cards, gift wrap, and books for the whole family.

The Nature Gift Shop is open Monday through Saturday, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., and Sunday, 1 to 4 p.m. Although the holiday open house ends Dec. 4, the shop will be open through the holiday season and stocked with gift ideas.

Holiday decorations discussed

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will hold its annual Holiday Tea at Walton Rogers Hall, St. Stephen's Episcopal Church Tuesday, Nov. 29 at noon with the Senior Citizens as guests.

Tish Grinnell will present "Christmas is Coming to Our House." She will be demonstrating many beautiful ideas for making a festive holiday home.

Fuel assistance available

The Massachusetts Fuel Assistance Program is available to low-income and elderly people who meet the guidelines for eligibility.

"The benefit that you may receive through this program may not cover all your heating expenses for the winter, but it can help," said Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray.

"The program has undergone several important changes this year, most of which will mean that our low-income neighbors will have a more difficult time heating their homes for the duration of the winter. The most notable changes are: the Program opens later in the fall and closes earlier in the spring; and benefit levels will be 8 - 10 percent lower than in previous years," Rep. Murray continued.

"The libraries in my district Cohasset, Hingham and Hull have a supply of brochures titled, 'How to Stay Warm this Winter.' Inside this brochure, you will find more details on how the Fuel Assistance Program works," Rep. Murray concluded.

Meals on Wheels

Meals on Wheels volunteers from all over the South Shore will gather on Thanksgiving day to deliver turkey dinners to elderly and homebound residents who would otherwise be without a hot meal that day.

Meals will be delivered in 11 South Shore cities and towns served by South Shore Elder Services, including Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Holbrook, Hull, Milton, Norwell, Quincy, Randolph, Scituate, and Weymouth.

If you know an elderly or homebound person who would like a hot meal delivered on Thanksgiving day, or if you would like to volunteer to help deliver meals, call South Shore Elder Services at 848-3910.

Boy Scouts open house

The cubs of Pack 110, B.S.A., will hold an open house Wednesday, Nov. 30 from 6:30 to 8 p.m. in the cultural hall of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 379 Gardner St., South Hingham.

The New Friends' program

The New Friends' Program provides volunteers with an opportunity to visit individuals in their homes, to those who for physical reasons or by reason of age are unable to leave their homes.

By reaching out, this program helps to form bonds of friendship which are important to everyone involved.

The primary purpose is to offer friendship through regular one-on-one visits. Visiting time is an opportunity conversation-listening and sharing.

Sometimes New Friends offer assistance with shopping or errands, share a meal at a restaurant or take part in some other recreational activity — whatever feels mutually satisfying and appropriate to the visitor and the person being visited.

Volunteers meet once a month to exchange ideas and share the joy of new friendships.

If you would like to become a New Friend or would like to have a New Friend, please call the Social Service League at 383-0771 or 383-0821 (Monday through Friday 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.)

The Cohasset Recreation Department has cleared Elms Meadow of vegetation, preparing the meadow for flooding and lighted ice skating.

As with most of our projects, we must rely on volunteer services rather than budget monies, to accomplish our goals. Each year it is volunteer man power and equipment, from either the town or private contractors, who prepare the meadow for skating.

Before the season ends it is likely that the Cohasset Tree and Park Dept., Highway Dept., Water Dept., and Recreation Dept. as well as private resources will be involved working on the area.

This year special thanks should go to Paul Laugelle for cleaning the meadow, Christopher Swider and C.N. Wood Company for the use of their bulldozer.

As with many rural land areas, Elm Meadow is often used as a dumping ground.

All residents of the Town of Cohasset are indebted to Charles E. Butman Sr. who polices the area on a daily, voluntary basis.

On a daily basis, Butman picks up and removes any trash he may find in the vicinity. Should you be so unfortunate to have Butman see you dump trash, "policing" can take on a new meaning. It is an encounter one may not soon forget.

We all owe a vote of thanks to Charlie Butman for his time and efforts.

New theatre program

The Young People's Summer Theatre is seeking input from residents of Scituate and surrounding towns concerning a new program which YPST would like to initiate next summer.

Don Capen, Director, announced that the YPST staff would like to begin a program, similar to the existing program for 13-22 year old youths, but for ages 7 or 8 to 12 year olds. The program would be run during the day, probably in 2-3 hour slots.

Capen is seeking input to the following questions:

What time of day would be best for a program like this? 9 a.m. to noon; noon to 3 p.m.; 3 to 6 p.m.

What type of registration fee would parents be willing to pay for this type of program?

Are there any special types of topics or entertainment you'd particularly like to see this program present?

In addition, Capen is seeking people who would be willing to assist in producing the show, whether it be with fundraising, costumes, or any other aspects of the program.

Anyone interested in assisting, or parents interested in this type of program for their children and would like to provide input, should simply write an informal letter to YPST at P.O. Box 41, Scituate, by December 1. Response will have a great bearing on whether or not the program is initiated or not.

New center courses

The Cohasset Community Center's Ballroom Dancing classes are taught by Bill Bradford of the Bradford Ballroom Dance Center.

Two courses are offered on Monday night, beginning Jan. 16 for ten weeks. The Beginners class meets from 8:30 to 9:30 p.m., covering lessons in Fox Trot (slow dancing), Waltz, Cha Cha and Swing.

The Intermediate group meets from 7:15 to 9:15 p.m., introducing more advanced steps for the dances mentioned plus Tango and Rumba.

The cost is $73.50.

To register or for more information, call the Cohasset Community Center at 383-0088.

SILHOUETTE PORTRAIT DAY

The Cohasset Community Center will sponsor a Silhouette Portrait Day at the Center Saturday, Dec. 10 from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Joy Anne MacConnell has been cutting silhouettes for 26 years. She makes all her silhouettes free-hand and the likenesses are guaranteed.

An appointment requires only 10 minutes, which includes one portrait sitting plus selection of mats and frames (optional). Framing will be done on the premises. Cost is $18 for two silhouettes, a right and a left profile. Additional copies are $4 each.

To make an appointment or for more information, call the Cohasset Community Center at 383-9098, between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m. Monday through Friday.

HATHA YOGA

The Cohasset Community Center is offering an eight-week class in Hatha Yoga beginning Monday, Nov. 28 from 7:30 to 9 p.m.

Hatha Yoga is an ancient system of exercise performed slowly in coordination with deep, controlled breathing. The instruction offers the experience of each position rather than the perfection of it. Yoga integrates and balances all aspects of the human being: mind, body and soul; to bring about mental and physical well-being.

The course will include some of the basic yoga postures, stretching, breathing, relaxation and meditation techniques. The cost is $48.

To register or for more information, call the Cohasset Community Center at 383-0088.

PRE—SCHOOL MUSIC CLASSES

Kodaly Music classes at Cohasset Community Center provide very young children with musical experiences. The philosophy behind this method suggests that children are naturally musical from birth and that musical training should begin at around 9 months.

Classes will be offered on Tuesday mornings to children ages 12 months to four years. A $35 fee includes eight weeks of lessons which are scheduled as follows:

Age 12-18 months — 9 to 9:30 a.m.: includes nursery rhymes, songs and finger/toe games. Parent attends;

Age 18-24 months — 9:45 to 10:15 a.m. and 10:15 to 10:45 a.m.: includes nursery rhymes, songs, finger games, walking and circle games. Parent attends;

Age 2 — 10:45 to 11:15 a.m.: Includes folk songs, nursery rhymes and singing games. Parent attends first four weeks.

Age 3 & 4 — 11:15 to 11:45 a.m.: Includes folk songs, rhymes, singing games, movement activities, basic musical elements and dramatic play. Parent attends first class.

Classes begin Tuesday, Jan. 10. To register or for more information, call the Cohasset Community Center at 383-9098.

ZBA has until Dec. 26 to make decision

Developers of the proposed Deck Point project will know by Dec. 26 whether or not the zoning appeals board will grant them a permit for the town's first affordable housing complex on 16 acres off Route 3A.

"We will meet Dec. 1 and we may or may not act then," said ZBA chairman Myrna Putziger at the Nov. 16 meeting at Town Hall.

The ZBA closed the public hearing portion of their deliberations after a revised site plan was presented with more recreational areas and less steep roads. Members have 40 days to make a decision, bringing the time limit to Dec. 26.

Putziger explained that the developers had requested the board make a decision that night so that they could meet a Dec. 6 deadline for state grant applications.

"I haven't seen the revised site plan before this evening," she said.

"I would like to close the public hearing, but take this under advisement."

Other board members agreed.

Deck Point developers are requesting a comprehensive permit which would allow them to bypass some local zoning in exchange for providing affordable housing in the 128-unit residential condominium on sloping land at 81-119 King St.

The project would come under the Homeownership Opportunity Program and at least 25 percent of the units would be priced as "affordable," an average of $78,500.

Qualified homebuyers under HOP may put down-payments as low as five percent and borrow the balance at interest rates as low as five percent.

At the beginning of last week's hearing, the third on Deck Point, Putziger explained that developers had been requested to present a revised site plan.

Areas to be addressed included a safe pedestrian crosswalk on Route 3A, particularly for children; recreation areas, noise, sidewalks; and the opening leaching field.

Atty. Robert Devin, who represented Deck Point, said the developers couldn't provide a pedestrian crosswalk since the roadway is under the jurisdiction of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

He said the developers would be willing to contribute money toward that project, and suggested $25,000.

Devin also said that a report showed that noise from nearby Webb-Norfolk Conveyor would be at acceptable levels.

"Noise reduction can occur as a result of construction of buildings," Devin added.

Architect Vcevold Strekalovsky said that the revised site plan included regraded roadways which would not exceed a seven percent grade.

"The entrance on Route 3A will have a level section of four car lengths, said Strekalovsky.

"There should be no concern about sliding down the hill to Route 3A," he said.

In addition, a 20 by 50 ft. pool and two-level clubhouse, tennis and basketball area, three tot lots, two barbecue areas with cook-outs and picnic tables, and a gazebo have been added, he said.

The central recreation area was widened from 150 by 80 ft. to 200 by 160 ft., according to Stekalovsky.

The additional recreation areas were made by moving eight units from one side of the develompent to another and the rest of the units shifted slightly, he said.

Strekalovsky also said the lighted, pedestrian walkways would be at a five to seven percent grade.

In response to a question from a board member, Strekalovsky noted the deck on the clubhouse will face towards Route 3A.

Board member Terrence Farrell said the additional recreational areas enhance the project.

Engineer Steven D. Gioso said there were advantages to the open leaching field such as maintenance and easy access.

"You can see if it's clogging," said Gioso. "The problems become evident.

"You can catch them quickly and remedy them."

When the hearing was opened up for public comments, Pat Walsh said the area at the bottom of the development should be fenced to protect 2- and 3-year-old children.

"I'd hate to see any child pushed on the highway," she said.

Walsh also said she was concerned about density, and noted that Donald Staszko has worked actively for a light on Route 3A when the Super Stop & Shop was built on his property.

She added that another proposed project, Crystal Woods, would also offer affordable housing with three units per acre.

"This is not the only game in town," she said.

Putziger agreed that youngsters safely crossing Route 3A is a very serious issue.

"We will work with the town," said Devin. "But we can't write a blank check."

Member Mark DeGiacomo noted that the crosswalk would be necessary soley because the developer's clients would be at the site.

Farrell said he was concerned about children walking along Route 3A.

"There are no sidewalks on the south side," he said.

A traffic engineer for Deck Point, Dermot Kelly, said the state is planning improvements at King St.

He also said that he would recommend a painted crosswalk with two yellow signs.

"I wouldn't put a traffic signal there," said Kelly.

"Children wouldn't wait for the light to change, and there would be rear-end accidents."

"I agree with you that it's a difficult issue," said Farrell.

"I think you should talk to the DPW," he told the developer.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby, who was attending the hearing, said the state is doing an engineering study on the intersection of King St. and Route 3A.

Gjesteby also noted that Staszko was required by the Planning Board to arrange for the traffic light.

"What I'm hearing is how are they going to get the kids to other places in Cohasset," said Devin.

"In Hingham, someone drives them," he said.

"It's part of suburbia.

"We don't have public transportation . . . you have to get in the car.

"It's an accepted way of life."

Putziger said the children in the development would be old enough to have bicycles.

"The continuous grade would be a reason to leave the site," she said.

"It's going to be a skateboard heaven," said board member Barbara Power.

Sohier St. resident Robert Davenport said he was concerned about fire protection at the development and rain run-off from the property.

Engineering consultant Paul Doran said the site's drainage system could handle a 100-year storm.

Davenport also said the board should be careful in making a decision on the application.

"If you make it easy, a lot of other sites in Cohasset could go this way.

"You should take time to think this over very carefully."

Despite the best efforts of Jim Reidy and the CHS soccer team, the Skippers came up short in the Eastern division finals. (J. Paul MacDonald photo)

Cohasset lost in exhaustive effort

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

After an exhausting 116 minutes (80 minutes of regulation and six, six minute overtimes) of a 1-1 deadlock, the Cohasset High School boys' soccer team had to rely on penalty kicks to decide the Eastern Massachusetts championship.

As usual, the first round of penalty kicks produced no winner. Then it came down to the junior sweeper Brian Pompeo of Cohasset. Moments earlier, Brian LeJeune, the sixth St. Mary's player on the penalty line beat Cohasset junior goalkeeper Joel Reidy with a shot to the upper left-hand corner. The Skippers needed Pompeo's goal to send the contest into another round of penalty kicks. Being the sixth Skipper in line, Pompeo watched in anquish as his shot went off the right post enabling St. Mary's of Lynn to advance to the state finals with a 2-1 victory.

"It was a super, super exciting game," Cohasset coach Dan Magner said. "The game featured everything. It's very disappointing to lose on penalty kicks. It's tough to lose that way, and it's tough to win that way.

This was the second consecutive year the two teams had met in the semifinal round. Last year, Cohasset won a physical game, 4-3.

St. Mary's (20-1-1) took a 1-0 lead midway through the first half when forward Peter Angelli deked Cohasset defender Jim Gallagher and put a shot across the Skippers goal, just out of reach of the sprawling Reidy.

Although each team had five shots in the half, Cohasset was able to manufacture only one quality shot, when forward Ned Chase was stopped by Ryan Davis (14 saves).

The second half was dominated by the Skippers. At the 61.11 mark the perservance finally paid off. Senior forward Matt Beggan gathered a header from Chase and drilled a 35-yard shot that beat Davis on his left post. Beggan opened the half with a shot off the crossbar.

The constant pressure by the Skippers (18-3-1) in the second half, especially the play of midfielder Jason Cameron, Jay Staunton, Mike Suhrbier, Chase and Jim Reidy, disrupted St. Mary's strategy.

The overtime meanwhile, had its share of thrills. In fact, this was the first time in St. Mary's four-year soccer program that a game has gone into overtime.

Two minutes into the first six-minute extra period Reidy (10 stops) denied a St. Mary's penalty to keep Cohasset's bid alive. In the closing seconds of the third sudden death period, the Skippers took advantage of an indirect from 25 yards out to the left of Davis.

Chase pushed a slow roller to Staunton, who hit a high shot that carried into the left corner of St. Mary's net but was disallowed because time had expired (those last seconds are still haunting the Skippers). In the final six-minute sudden death period, Jimmy Reidy was robbed from five yards by Davis, who would later deny a penalty kick from the junior captain.

"It's the best high school game I've ever seen," added Magner, who must now prepare for the 1989 campaign.

It will be hard to repeat Cohasset's miraculous season.

Skippers set to square off against great rival

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

When it comes to the traditional Thanksgiving Day football contest, the schoolboy records become insignificant. What is significant, however, is the team's bragging rights for an entire year.

Cohasset and Hull will square off in the fifth annual classic (this longstanding rivalry stretches back to 1957, but it was discontinued during the 1970's and the early 1980's. The two crosstown schools resumed battle in 1984) at Milliken Field Nov. 24. Currently, Hull leads the series despite Cohasset winning the last four outings.

"It's a great rivalry," Cohasset Athletic Director Clark Chatterton said. "We look forward to playing this game every year."

Chatterton provided a brief history of Cohasset's previous Thanksgiving encounters.

"We faced Scituate in the 1940's. The, we hooked up with Holbrook in the 1950's. While I was in high school, we began to compete against Hull in 1957.

"When we didn't play Hull in the 1970's Duxbury became our opponent for the next decade. Hull played Holbrook during that time."

Cohasset (2-7 overall, and 1-5 in the South Shore League Small Schools Division) enters the showdown with a new, refined confidence. Last week, the Skippers ended their six-game losing streak with a 21-6 victory over non-league Bourne. In that game, tri-captain Paul Froio was a one-man wrecking crew with 152 yards rushing on 18 carries and two touchdowns (he has a team-high nine touchdowns on the year). Teammate Curt Ludlow added a 21-yard score.

As usual, Cohasset will try to utilize their balanced running attack against Hull Thursday morning.

Hull, meanwhile, epitomizes the typical rags to riches tale. It was in doubt whether the Pirates were going to assemble a football team at the beginning of the season. The voters in Hull had earlier rejected a Proposition 2 1/2 override which meant that the high school athletic programs would be eliminated. In order to save the program, the Hull Boosters' Club raised a considerable amount of money to fund the fall sports teams. The unyielding efford has rewarded the Pirates with a winning record to date (5-4, 3-2 in the SSL Small Schools; a two-game improvement from last year).

(J. Paul MacDonald photo)

Hull relies on quarterback Mike Angellis to direct their offense. When not throwing to split end Dan Kessinger, Angellis will hand the ball of to either Peter Casey or Bruno Barbuto. Defensively, Eric Begley and Andy Adair are the standouts back there. Unfortunately, the Pirates' defense allowed more than 200 yards on the ground in last week's defeat to Norwell, 20-8.

The festivities will begin at 10 a.m. behind Cohasset High School.

Prediction: Cohasset 14 Hull 13.

I expect this affair to be decided on the last play of the game. The 12-day layoff definitely helps Cohasset to heal their wounded bodies.

Vo-tech hockey team looking for more money

By Patricia Masterson
Mariner correspondent

The South Shore Regional High School hockey team, with a two-week countdown until the opening game, approached school committee members for help in funding their program.

The hockey team, which received $1,500 from the committee in July, needs $2,000 more from the budget to start the season.

Paul Blanchard, athletic director for 21 years told the committee at a Wednesday night meeting the hockey team recently lost their funding source.

The 35 student athletes had been financing the team through fund-raising projects, specifically setting up and breaking down a Sunday bingo game, which has since closed.

Committee members voted 4 to 2 to give the team $2,000 with the stipulation that they pay the money back when they find other sources of funding.

The team is a club sport that has used the school name and busses but not school funds in recent years. Hockey was cut when Proposition 2 1/2 was passed. At the time, the program exceeded $12,000, according to Bob Molla, chairman of the committee.

The regional school funds boys' basketball, baseball, soccer and cross country and girls' basketball and softball. The teams are funded at $850 each, in addition to coaches' salaries, which total $23,000. The hockey coach, Ed Bursaw, has not received a salary in his four years of coaching and heading up fund-raising efforts for the team. Blanchard said each coach should receive a stipend.

Lloyd Patriquin, a committee member from Whitman, and Molla were in disagreement with funding the program.

"I want to voice my objections," said Patriquin. "You asked us for funds recently, and you said you had the rest of the money to fund the team. In a very short span of time, you are now back for additional monies.

"We have a cash crunch and will be faced with a serious budget problem," he said. "We were led to believe by a spokesman of this organization that there would be no additional costs."

Molla agreed, citing that the cost of the hockey team will continue to esclate in time. He said he believes the hockey team will approach the committee for more money.

Student representative Crystal Fusco told the committee that hockey is very popular because the school does not have a football team. She said taking it away would "break students hearts."

David Chittim, a committee member from Cohasset, agreed.

"We're talking about 35 students, a substantial block," he said. "We don't have as many extracurricular programs as others schools. We should try to come as close as we can to offering these programs."

Selectmen won't 'foot' the bill

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

If you have become accustomed to using the front walkway to the new town hall addition, you can't get there from there anymore.

Selectmen agreed Monday night, Nov. 21, to block off the walkway and install a "Please use ramp, walkway closed" sign.

The action was in response to complaints by residents particularly women, who have caught the heels of their shoes in the spaces between the bricks and ruined their shoes.

Selectmen also noted that if someone tripped and injured themselves on the walkway, the town could be liable.

At their Oct. 17 meeting, the board had voted to have the walkway redone.

"The walkway is a bad job, and we shouldn't accept it," said Selectmen chairman Burt Pratt.

He explained that the theory was that the stonedust between the bricks would become like cement when it was wet, but that hasn't occurred.

However, the builder, A.P. Whitaker and Sons, Inc., of West Bridgewater, has said that they installed the walkway as directed by the architect, Donham-Sweeney.

"The town has stated that they will not pay for the work on the front walk as installed due to the large joints that exist and the possibility of someone tripping on same," stated Wayne Whitaker, treasurer, in a letter to Donham-Sweeney Nov. 10.

"We wish to make it very clear that this office in fact installed the walk in the pattern specified and we also used the material as per the direction from your office," he said.

". . .We feel we have installed the proper material in accordance with our contract and we do not feel we should be held responsible for any further action.

"We have submitted cost proposals to correct the walk as per your request and we will do so only upon a written change order."

Pratt said, "They can fight, but in the meantime we want a walkway."

"Wouldn't it be smarter to block off the walkway, than find out later we are liable (if someone injures themself)?" asked Sohier Street resident Robert Davenport.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson said that "If there is a serious risk, there is an obligation to place a warning or close it off.

"If you don't notify people of the danger, you are liable if they are hurt."

Henderson also said that until the town fixes the walkway itself and sues the architect or builder, it may never get done.

During the discussion, Pratt also said that the town is not satisfied with some other parts of the new addition project such as windows in the selectmen's office, parking lines on the hot top, and the paint job.

He said that a complete list will be submitted to the architect.

In the meantime, a payment of some $72,000 for part of the work was approved by the board.

Meeting tapes questioned

Selectman Martha Gjesteby this week questioned the audio taping of board meetings since notes are also taken.

"Why do we keep taping the meetings?" asked Gjesteby, who noted the board can sometimes be hurt by the tapes if an issue is taken to court.

"I've got nothing to hide," said selectman Rocco Laugelle.

The board's new executive secretary, Greg Doyon, said that the board is obliged to keep the tapes for six months.

"Maybe we should just keep the tapes until the minutes (of the meetings) are accepted," he suggested.

"I have no strong feeling one way or the other."

"You're saying this to save the almighty dollar," Laugelle told Gjesteby.

"The tapes have been used in the past," he said, "sometimes to our advantage, sometimes not."

"What's the reason to keep the tapes?" asked Gjesteby.

"What's the reason not to?" asked selectman chairman Burt Pratt.

"We don't keep a double record," answered Gjesteby.

"Sometimes the minutes and tape don't jive," said Laugelle.

"Any human being can make a mistake, but you can hear it on the tape."

Pratt said, "If there is a fine point that you can't pick out of the notes, you can listen to the tape.

"I'm not afraid of anything I say in these chambers."

HANDS ON OUTREACH FOR BETTER HOUSING

The Outreach Committee, with a focus on hunger and housing, has formed a group to rehabilitate a small two bedroom ranch in Randolph. Areas to be addressed are a leaky roof, a completely deteriorated exterior, and the front porch is in danger of collapse. The work is being done through Habitat for Humanity, a Christian housing ministry which uses volunteer labor and offers deserving families interest-free loans.

Supporting this work from St. Stephen's are Kitty Whitley, Roger Nast, Jean DuVoisin, Susan Dick, and Chris Abbruzzese. They will be working with a group from First Parish and others to put an addition on and to rehabilitate this house owned by a single mother and three children. The family also gets into the act donating their own labor. If you would like to be part of future housing work parties, contact Kitty Whitley at 383-6312.

Jim Solheim, the new editor of The Episcopal Times, would like comments and suggestions from members of your parish about content and format. Which articles do you read, which ones do you skip, and why? How might the paper better relate to parishes?

Please reply to Sue Mullett (383-6306), Editorial Board Member.

Cohasset worship . . .
St. Stephen's Church news

December 10, at 9:30 a.m. This too is an opportunity during a frenetic time of the year to step back and take time for quiet reflection to put in perspective our lives and the meaning of this season.

BOOKS AVAILABLE FOR JANUARY COURSE

Max Munro will teach a three-session course on the family beginning January 18. He is asking participants in the course to read selected chapters from the book, Bradshaw On: THE FAMILY. The book is available in the church library and Max has copies you may purchase for $10. Bradshaw is a counselor and theologian. The book is based on the PBS television series also entitled "Bradshaw On: The Family." For more information on a very interesting course and book, call Max Munro at 383-1152.

ORGANIZE THE BLOODMOBILE

There are a number of people who have volunteered to make phone calls in support of the bloodmobile. We are in need of someone to coordinate the calling and the callers. If you think you would like to help in this way, it is very important. The bloodmobile comes about four times a year and gives a vital service to those who are ill. It is truly the gift of life. If you would like to know more about how you may help, please call the Rector at the church office, 383-1083.

BLACK NATIVITY PRODUCTION DATES are Dec. 8-11 and 15-18. This is a very moving black interpretation of the birth of Christ, sponsored by the National Center of Afro-American Artists. Tickets are $12 each. If you would like some, please call the church office by Wednesday, Nov. 23.

FLU SHOTS Saturday, Dec. 10, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the town hall.

Is there any money for the Curtis plan?

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Town officials agree although matters are proceeding slowly, some progress has been made toward developing a plan of action for the Curtis Estate.

What concerns them now is the possiblity that no state money may be available to renovate the property.

Town officials, who have asked the probate court for control of the 53-acre estate, have until a December 14 court hearing to present a specific "developable" plan for the property.

'We're in better shape with the state authorities than we were before we started. In 90 days I think we've made great progress.'

Selectman
Burt Pratt

At a meeting between state and local housing officials Tuesday night, it was agreed the proposal will not likely be prepared by that date, but steps have been taken in that direction.

The meeting was called by Anna Perez of the Massachusetts Housing Partnership to discuss what progress has been made toward establishing a plan for town-use of the Curtis Estate.

The trustees of the property formerly owned by the late George E. Curtis have petitioned the probate court for permission to break the terms of Curtis' will. That will required the trustees to use the property to house infirmed women. The Residents oppose, committee supports project

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

The Crystal Woods housing project is receiving mixed reviews.

The Cohasset Housing Partnership gave its preliminary support to the proposed project at Monday night's selectman meeting.

"We support it as proposed," said Chartis Langmaid who presented a draft report to the board.

She said that a final report should be submitted by the partnership Friday.

But a petition in opposition signed by about 100 residents of the area where Crystal Woods is planned was also presented to the board.

"The undersigned residents of Brewster Road, Ledge Way, Wood Way and Ledgewood Drive are vehemently opposed to the proposal of Crystal Land Development Corporation," stated the petition.

"Therefore, we request that the Cohasset Housing Partnership, the Board of Selectmen and all governing town boards not act on the application. . .until certain questions and concerns are satisfactorily addressed by the respective boards."

Selectmen said they will wait until they receive a final report from the housing partnership before deciding whether to support the project.

The 60 unit project, proposed by Crystal Development Company of Quincy, on Route 3A, would have eight acres in Cohasset and the remaining 12 in Scituate.

Developer John Hurley said that a comprehensive permit would be sought from the Zoning Board of Appeals. That would allow the applicant to bypass local zoning in exchange for providing affordable housing.

The project would come under the Homeownership Opportunity Program and 18 of the units would be priced for moderate income home buyers.

Hurley said he intends to apply for state funding in the round which begins Dec. 6.

According to Langmaid, some of the development's units would be sold to the town's housing authority.

Sewage treatment has been adequately discussed, she said.

Fourteen articles for Dec. 5 meeting

Fourteen articles will be on the warrant for the special town meeting Monday, Dec. 5, at 7:30 p.m. at Cohasset High School's auditorium.

Among the article topics is the town's abandoning its use of 8.72 acres of land off Route 3A for school purposes, and transferring it to the Cohasset Housing Authority for 13 units of affordable housing.

The school committee voted Nov. 7 to release the land bordering Route 3A and Evergreen Lane.

School Supt. Stephen Hart said that release of the 8.72 acres, in addition to 14 acres for development of a cemetery, leaves the school committee with more than 50 acres of land under its jurisdiction.

That land, he said, would be more than sufficient for the school department if a new school building is necessary in the future, or if there is a need for a school athletic field there.

The housing authority intends to use the property for 12 units of affordable family housing, with the possibility of transferring a single family home currently at the corner of Sohier St. and Route 3A.

Selectmen voted 4 to 1 to support the proposal in Article 8. Member Martha Gjesteby was opposed.

"The land was bought for school purposes," said Gjesteby. "It's the only decent planning we've ever done, so that's why I can't support it."

The article was submitted at the request of the housing authority.

Selectmen voted against Article 4 which would create a municipal housing authority with five members. It was inserted at the request of the Planning Board.

The authority would have responsibility for such things as administering qualified housing units created by special permit granted by the planning board and promulgating regulations and executive orders for the use, occupancy, sale, rent, lease, joint ownership and other disposition of qualified housing under its authority.

Area artists join in unique exhibit

The two-story gallery within the South Shore Art Center will be transformed into a three-dimensional hall of color and shapes.

Throughout December, the Bancroft Invitational Gallery will be filled with works created by fibre artists - pieces of varying shapes, sizes, materials and fabrics.

But the common thread that binds these works together is the sense of texture and design. That was the link that "Contexture" curator Cliff Roberts was seeking when he invited 12 artists to join this special exhibit.

Roberts, the owner of Weave, Inc. on Chief Justice Cushing Highway, is an internationally-recognized fibre artist. A Cohasset resident, Roberts is an accomplished weaver and a furniture fabric designer. A member of the art center, he was asked to coordinate a show which would incorporate the growing community of fibre artists in the Boston area.

The result is a 40-piece exhibit and sale of artwork by 12 selected artists. The show will begin Sunday, Dec. 4 with an opening reception from 3 to 5 p.m. It will continue through December 23 at the center, 119 Ripley Road.

One of the more commanding works on exhibit are three handmade paper banners by Somerville artists Joann Winkler.

With some expert help from the Cohasset Fire Department, the 40-inch by 86-inch banners were suspended from the gallery's second-story ceiling

Cohasset's week...

Traffic problems

Kathryn V. Young, who lives next to town hall at 31 Highland Avenue, has written to selectmen about "major traffic difficulty" with the lines on the new parking lot.

Young said that the traffic difficulties affect both her family and visitors to town hall. Selectmen said Monday night they will work on the problem.

"It is virtually impossible to pull in or out of our driveway with the lines as they are," said Young.

"There is no room to maneuver or turn a car, even with the sawhorse blocking half of two spaces.

"I invite you to pull your car into my driveway and try the exercise yourself."

Young also talked about the lack of room to turn around near her home.

"Many visitors to the town hall tend to drive straight in to the entrance closest to our house, and find themselves trapped beside our driveway, with no room to turn around or no way to exit," she said.

"Backing out is a real safety hazard, yet the only alternative.

"The rear of my car has been hit once when someone tried to turn around in insufficient space."

Young said she hoped the issue would be addressed soon.

"I understand the zoning, handicapped and other considerations involved," she said, "but feel there must be a practical way for this to be solved.

"When the new plan is in place, please, let's be sure it is practical and workable before the lines are drawn. I do think this could have been avoided if the plan was examined closely before it was implemented.

Free flu shots Dec. 10

Residents of Cohasset who have not had their flu shot may come to the Cohasset Town Hall auditorium Saturday, Dec. 10, from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. during the free influenza clinic.

Health officials recommend that the following persons consider receiving the influenza vaccine: 1. adults with long term heart or lung problems; 2. adults who have had kidney problems, diabetes, anemia or asthma; 3. individuals with certain types of cancer or using any immunosupressive medicines, which lower the body's resistance to infections; 4. healthy individuals over the age of 65.

You are encouraged to consult with your doctor regarding the flu vaccine.

The influenza clinic is free to Cohasset residents, and is sponsored by the Social Service League and the Cohasset Board of Health.

Warrant support

Selectmen voted Monday night, Nov. 21 to support six warrant articles for the special town meeting Monday, Dec. 5, at 7:30 p.m. at Cohasset High School's auditorium.

The articles concern the banning of jet skis, using school committee land for affordable housing, adding definitions of private docks and marinas and adding five hours to the clerk of the water department position.

Also, transferring funds for the rubber tire front end loader at the Cedar St. Landfill and to permit an appropriation to be used for tipping fees, transportation costs and transfer operation costs.

In addition, the board voted not to support creation of a municipal housing authority.

No action was taken on other articles involving funds until the advisory committee makes a recommendation.

Members supported prohibiting the use of jet skis within the confines of Little Harbor or Cohasset Harbor for safety and noise reasons.

"They are dangerous," said selectman Cliff Mitman, "and they're noisy as heck."

"I'd be inclined to support this and make it town-wide," said selectman chairman Burt Pratt. Selectman Rocco Laugelle was opposed.

With regard to the school committee land for affordable housing, Pratt said, "This is a site in town which everybody wanted at one time or another."

"I'm concerned about the egress," said selectman Martha Gjesteby, who voted against the proposal.

"The land was bought for school purposes," she said.

"It's the only decent planning that we've ever done, so that's why I can't support it."

"The whole population is going to have to make a tremendous comeback before we need to do any more building," said Pratt.

The 8.72 acres would be used for housing for the mentally retarded, the aged, or citizens of low or moderate income.

There was little discussion on the other votes.

School board conference

Recently, school committee members and administrators of the Cohasset School System attended the 24th Annual Joint Conference of the Massachusetts Association of School Committees and the Massachusetts Association of School Superintendents.

Diana Kornet, school committee chairman, reported that the Nov. 2 to 5 conference in Hyannis drew over 1,000 school committee members, superintendents, and educators. Panels covered a wide range of topics which included: effective schools, smoke free schools, special education, and courts and schools.

Harold Hodgkinson, director of the Center for Demographic Policy at the Institute for Educational Leadership, discussed the changing demographics of Massachusetts and explained its effects on all aspects of society, including education.

This area conference gives an opportunity for both school committee members and school administrators to discuss educational issues and concerns with their colleagues from across the state.

Those attending from Cohasset were: Diana Kornet, Chairman; Barbara Bliss, Vice-chairman; Nancy Sandell, Secretary; Dr. Christopher Ford; and Stephen E. Hart, Superintendent of Schools.

More ambulance information

Selectmen agreed Monday night to ask the fire chief to supply more information and a recommendation on unpaid ambulance bills.

Selectmen had considered abating some of the bills, but chairman Burt Pratt said that town counsel recommended putting the bills in a collection agency.

"Town Counsel (Richard Henderson) said you can go back six years to collect bills," said Pratt.

"I'd rather try to get the money to be honest with you," said selectman James Gallagher.

Executive secretary Greg Doyon said a collection agency would take 40 percent of the bill payment as its fee.

Gallagher proposed abating the bills from 1980, 1981 and 1982, and turning the others over to a collection agency. He later withdrew the proposal.

Resident Ed Goff asked why residents should have to pay for the service.

"Most people have insurance (to cover the cost)," answered Pratt.

"If we didn't charge, we'd be in worse financial shape thanwe are in, and that's pretty bad."

"Years ago, it was a free service," said selectman Rocco Laugelle.

"I don't think we have enough information," said selectman Cliff Mitman.

"We should have the chief do an analysis of our rate compared to others.

"We also need to know what persons have passed away, or moved," added Laugelle.

Town meeting warrant . . .

The housing authority also voted against the proposal.

Chairman John Muncey called it duplication of effort.

Member Ralph Perroncello said, "It might cost the taxpayer more money to get this housing, and then the town would have to maintain it. With the Cohasset Housing Authority, the funds come from the state."

Article 7 would prohibit the use of jet skis within the confines of Little Harbor or Cohasset Harbor, and was also supported by selectmen.

"They are dangerous," said selectman Cliff Mitman. "And they are noisy as heck."

"I'd be inclined to support this, and make it townwide," said selectman chairman Burt Pratt.

Article 14, also supported by selectmen would permit $80,000 already appropriated to be used for tipping fees, transportation costs and transfer station operation costs in connection with the disposal and delivery of the town's solid waste.

It would also be used for the acquisition of capital equipment to be used at the Cedar St.facility and for operating costs.

The health board, which requested the article, recently decided to accept a proposal from SEMASS to accept trash from Cohasset for four years starting with the operation of the solid waste transfer station.

The decision, supported by selectmen, was based on reduced transportation costs as opposed to Orrington, Me., the relative ease of transport and the reduced cost based on a starting tipping fee of $44/ton.

Health board chairman Sharon Becker said the transfer station could be finished next June.

The town had already planned to go to SEMASS in 1991 when it goes into its Phase II operation.

Definitions of private docks and marina would be added to the zoning bylaws, according to Article 10, inserted at the request of the Cohasset Harbor Committee.

Private docks would be defined as dockage of up to four boats intended for private use of the owner of the land on which they are constructed.

Marinas would be docks and/or mooring facilities for more than four boats.

It was supported by selectmen.

Also on the warrant:

Article 1, would transfer from available funds $237.50 to pay an unpaid medical bill to MGH Professional Services Corp. incurred during fiscal 1985. (Inserted by selectmen)

Article 2, would transfer from available funds $40,794.18 for unpaid bills. (Inserted by selectmen)

Article 3, would see if the town will accept a collective bargaining agreement between the town and permanent firefighters, Local 2804. (Inserted by selectmen)

Article 5, would amend Section 5, Area Regulations, of the Zoning By-law, by adding a new paragraph on increased density — qualified housing. (Inserted by Planning Board)

Article 6, would transfer from available funds or borrow a sum of money to purchase a van for the Council on Aging. (Inserted at request of Council on Aging)

The previous van was destroyed by fire last summer.

Article 9, would transfer from available funds or borrow a sum of money for the acquisition and/or construction of a shower and lavatory facility for the Wastewater Treatment Plant.

Article 11, would add five hours to the position of the clerk of the water department. (Inserted at the request of the Board of Water Commissioners)

Article 12, would transfer from available funds or borrow $21,899 for payment under the lease/purchase contract with Southworth Machinery, Inc., for the rubber tire front end loader used at the Cedar Street Solid Waste Facility. (Inserted at request of Board of Health)

Authority plans to apply for more funds

By Jane Lane

A suggestion was made to amend a vote taken last week by the Cohasset Housing Authority to include eight units of housing for the severely mentally retarded at the George Curtis Estate.

That proposal was later discarded when it was learned that a similar plan is still being considered for land on Lambert's Lane.

The housing authority voted last week to include eight units of housing for the retarded in the town's proposal for the use of the 53-acre Jerusalem Road Curtis Estate property. But Chairman John Muncey suggested at a meeting Monday night to also include eight units of ICFMR housing - an Intermediate Care Facility for the Mentally Retarded.

The town is awaiting a December 14 probate court hearing in which the fate of the abandoned Curtis Estate will be determined. The trustees of the property want to break the terms of the Curtis will and sell the land and four buildings to a private developer. Town officials and members of the Curtis Estate Action Committee, have petitioned for local ownership of the property.

Although a vote was delayed until after the authority members met with local and state officials Tuesday night, Muncey suggested the amendment, saying, "These people have waited for ten years. They've had a hard time finding a location for this."

In 1978, Judge Truro ruled the state must find appropriate shelters within communities for the severely mentally retarded. Until that time, these facilities had been located within state-operated hospitals. The state-supervised shelters are designed for severely mentally and physically handicapped residents. There are two supervisors around-the-clock for every one resident.

There have been several unsuccessful attempts to locate a ICFMR in Cohasset. Currently, there is a plan to construct eight units on the Lambert"s Lane property owned by George and Charles Wills.

Although Muncey thought the state had rejected that plan, Maria Plante, vice president of the South Shore Association for the Retarded, said no determination has been made.

The Wills are offering land to the state for $40,000 on which to construct the ICFMR. Engineers sent by the state to the site have had differing opinions, Plante said, but the plans have not been rejected.

"We"re hopeful the state can make an agreement for that land," she added.

Muncey explained that the housing authority would have no control over the ICFMR shelter, as it would over the other eight units of housing for the retarded. "This would take in the mentally handicapped who are also physically handicapped," he stated, adding that the eight units would be in addition to the eight units the authority voted to include in the proposal last week.

The chairman noted that no site has been selected on the estate for the ICFMR, and said there can be no exact locations until the septic system site has been determined.

"This will be in addition to the Chapter 689 housing," he explained Monday night. "If the town came up with control of the Curtis Estate, we could cut up a piece of land for them - ten years is a long time to wait."

The authority plans to ask the state for money to construct the housing for the retarded. That money is allocated under Chapter 689. The separate ICFMR shelter would be constructed, operated and maintained under the total jurisdiction of the state.

When asked if the state would agree to concentrate the two facilities on one piece of property, Plante answered, "I don't think the state wants to saturate on one land. Usually they like to put ICFMR's with other congregate housing - such as elderly housing."

Joseph McElroy, a co-chairman of the Curtis Estate Action Committee warned the housing authority that by proposing these two shelters for the retarded on the Curtis land, "you may be counting out potential other uses, such as single-parent housing."

The town's plan for the Curtis Estate which will be submitted to the state attorney general and the probate court include housing for the retarded, low income, the homeless and abused women.

When Muncey said he doubted there would be available funding for these other uses, Dorothy Newell of the Hingham Interfaith Shelter produced a list of current and potential financial sources for a homeless shelter.

Selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt suggested that the housing authority postpone a vote on the matter until after the Tuesday night meeting with state officials about the Curtis Estate plan. Muncey indicated he planned to attend that meeting.

After Tuesday night's meeting, Muncey said the ICFMR proposal for the Curtis Estate would be scrapped. "We won't be going forward with it," he said at the conclusion of the meeting. "The Lambert's Lane proposal is still viable."

Langmaid noted that under the town's bylaw, a buffer zone of 30 feet would be required.

"I see no indication that the developer wishes to build closer than 30 feet," she said.

Langmaid said one of the major concerns of residents is additional traffic if an inter-connection is made at Ledgewood Drive.

Langmaid said the partnership feels concerns have been satisfactorily addressed by the developer.

She noted the petition signed by the neighborhood residents.

They regard density, location of units with respect to property lines and existing homes, lack of adequate buffer zone or green belts, effect of additional traffic, drainage and sewage treatment.

"Our primary focus is whether it (the proposal) addresses the need of affordable housing in Cohaseet," she said.

"We feel Crystal Woods in a positive way addresses affordable housing in Cohasset."

She noted that Deck Point was not recommended as an appropriate affordable housing project, and the partnership did not support it.

The Deck Point project, also seeking a comprehensive permit from the Zoning Board of Appeals, would construct 128 units of condominium housing off Route 3A.

"That's totally different in the kind of neighborhood it is proposed for," she said.

"Crystal Woods would be in a neighborhood of residences where people care very much about their homes.

"This would be a tremendous boon. Deck Point (location) is not even zoned residential."

Selectman chairman Burt Pratt asked whether the town must accept one or more of the comprehensive permits and noted the possibility of affordable units on the Curtis estate.

Langmaid answered that developers can continue to submit permit applications until the town reaches 10 percent of affordable housing as required by the state.

"Ten percent will never be reached, nor will the state require it," said Pratt.

"Right now, that is the law," said Langmaid. "We have to acknowledge that it exists."

Developer John Hurley said that most of the concerns of the neighborhood group have been addressed.

"I think we've shown very good faith/working with the town boards and on concerns of the neighbors," said Hurley.

"It's a good project as far as size and density.

"We're here to look for support for our application."

Hurley said more of the concerns would be addressed as the process moves on.

Selectman James Gallagher said he was concerned about the issues raised by residents, and that once the developer receives a permit he won't continue to work with residents.

"If they want my support, they'll have to address the six issues from residents," he said.

Ernest Grassey, president of the neighborhood association, said he was afraid of the impact the development would have on the neighborhood regarding such things as traffic and drainage.

"It's a pandora's box for us," said Grassey.

"Those issues would be part of any development that particular site draws," answered Hurley. He added that drainage would be contained on the site.

Sohier St. resident Robert Davenport said, "From what I have seen, they (the developers) are trying to do a better job than the system allows."

"Most of the neighbor's concerns can be worked out," said Hurley.

"You should have input from the residents before you proceed," said Gallagher.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby said she attended a joint meeting on the project with Hingham and Scituate residents.

"The developer has been very open," she said.

"The process is a good process."

Gallagher said, "I think their property is going to be devalued if it's going to be built. I want to make sure every question is answered."

"I think you're right," said Pratt, "but that comes later down the line.

"I don't see how getting in the funding round will make much difference."

"We want to be heard," said resident Dick Stevens. "That's our right as citizens of Cohasset."

Stevens said the developer's rights were being put before that of the neighbors.

"There are some very serious concern," said Stevens. "All we're asking for is that we be heard."

"As the plan is on paper now, I certainly wouldn't vote for it," said Pratt.

He said the board will caucus briefly on the proposal prior to the special town meeting Monday.

Pratt said the developer does need the selectmen's permission to apply for state funding.

"But it would look better with our blessing,'" said selectman Rocco Laugelle.

New pamphlet tells taxpayers' rights, duties

A new publication outlining taxpayers' rights is now available from the Internal Revenue Service. "Your Rights as a Taxpayer," Publication 1, provides a four-page overview of the rights and responsibilities of all taxpayers in dealing with the IRS.

It contains information on how to obtain assistance when preparing your return, how to reschedule an audit if needed and how to make an arrangement if you received a bill and cannot afford to make payment in full, as well as other valuable information.

Publication 1 is one of several efforts by the IRS to improve the quality of service to taxpayers, according to IRS Commissioner Lawrence Gibbs.

More detailed brochures, such as Publication 5, "Appeals Rights and Preparation of Protests for Unagreed Cases;" Publication 556, "Examination of Returns, Appeal Rights and Claims for Refund;" and Publication 586A, "The Collection Process (Income Tax Accounts)" are also still available.

The IRS plans to enclose Publication 1 in most first notices involving a tax examination or collection matter. Copies are available at IRS offices, or by calling the toll free number, 1-800-424-3676

Officials attempt to form 'developable' plan

trustees have said they are unable to use the property for that purpose, and have asked the court for permission to sell the estate to a private developer.

Town officials, directed by the Curtis Estate Action Committee, have interceded in that court case, and have petitioned for town ownership of the land and the four structures. In a September court hearing, representatives of the town stated they would use the property to house the handicapped, the homeless, abused women, and low income residents.

Most recently, the housing authority, which would likely retain control of the property if the estate was transferred to the town, amended the proposal to include eight units of Chapter 689 housing for the mentally retarded.

Joseph McElroy, a co-chairman of the action committee, explained that Assistant Attorney General Gwen O'Sullivan requested the town file a more specific plan of action by the first of November. That plan would include the specific types of housing proposed for the site, in addition to the funding available to convert the existing structures for those specific uses.

"We have not fully complied with the attorney general's request for specific technical assessments - we are little bit behind schedule considering the next hearing is scheduled Dec. 15,"McElroy stated. (Perez later corrected that date, saying Atty. O'Sullivan had informed her the court hearing is scheduled Dec. 14.)

In the meantime, according to selectmen's executive secretary Greg Doyon, the Cohasset Housing Partnership is applying for membership in the Massachusetts Housing Partnership.

That membership will entitle Cohasset to also apply for a state grant to fund a feasibility study of the Curtis Estate plan, Perez explained. That feasibility study would be necessary for the town, she said, in order to present a "better case for the special needs housing - how that property will be developed and rehabilitated."

The state Executive Office of Communities and Development has the money to fund these feasibilities studies, Perez said, which could amount to $30,000 per study.

"Were the attorney general to see that we have an application into the state for the study, and the state is committed to fund it, it could buy us time, or the court could rule yes, that this is a good use for the site," Perez noted.

Although much work has been done by the action committee, a final proposal must be so specific that it could be the same document let out to bid to a developer, she explained. "The state would like to see something further along," Perez added.

The housing authority recently hired a consultant to work on a plan for affordable family housing. Perez told the town officials the same consultant could be hired for the Curtis Estate study, if the application for the study is approved by the state. If the cost of the study is over $5,000, the town would have to bid out the contract.

Perez noted that if the partnership application and feasibility study grant application are submitted by the town within the next week, they will be reviewed by Mass. Housing Partnership in time for the Dec. 14 court hearing.

Selectman Burt Pratt noted how Judge James Lawton was gracious to the town officials and residents at the September court hearing, and how he had encouraged them to speak about the town's proposal. "I feel if we get the application in before you, this will weigh in our favor," Pratt said.

"We're in conformity with Executive Order 215 now - we're in better shape with the state authorities than we were before we started. In 90 days I think we've made great progress," Pratt continued.

Other sites are proposed for affordable housing in Cohasset, including eight acres of former school-controlled land behind the Stop and Shop. Selectman Martha Gjesteby noted that the town-owned Bates Building will be vacated soon and will be available for conversion to affordable housing units.

Suzanne Barclay, regional manager of EOCD, explained that money for some types of state-funded housing, particularly special needs housing, is not available at this time because of state budget problems. "We still encourage applications," she said, noting that another bonding issue for special needs housing may be submitted to the legislature in January.

Housing authority chairman Muncey later noted that for several months he has been told there is no state money available for Chapter 689 special needs housing. That was the reason he was hesitant last week about applying for the funds, Muncey said.

"But if the judge awards the town the whole ball of wax - the property and the $2 million (in liquid assets), we do not need you," Selectman Pratt told Perez and Barclay.

The state officials agreed.

Maria Plante, a member of the action committee, explained that one unit at 15 Black Rock Road is currently being renovated under an agreement signed in September by the trustees and the town. There could be a homeless family living in the home by the Dec. 14 court date, Plante said. "This would show the trustees and court these houses are not as delapidated as they think."

Selectman Pratt disagreed, noting that Plante's plan may backfire. "It has given the trustees some ammunition. This may have prejudiced our case rather than helped," he said.

The meeting ended with Perez assuring town officials her cooperation in reviewing the application for membership in the state housing partnership and for state funding of a feasibility study. "We'll turn the application around in two weeks, and you think about who you will hire to do the study," she said. The town should attend the court hearing with that information in hand, she added.

Garden club holiday house tour

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will help make Christmas a little more beautiful with its "Holidays on the Common," a standard home flower show and mini house tour, Wednesday, Dec. 14, 1 to 4 p.m.

The event, for members and their guests only, will take place at three homes on Cohasset Common as well as the Cohasset Community Center.

Mary Larson is general chairman.

"People enjoy seeing homes decorated at Christmas," said Suzanne Moyer, publicity chairman for the event which is the major fundraiser for the year.

The garden club provides scholarships for Cohasset High School students, and maintains the grounds at such sites as the community center, Constitution Park and the Lothrop House. It has about 250 members.

For "Holidays on the Common", members will provide floral decorations at the three homes.

"People will design floral arrangements around themes at the houses," said Arlene Ferreira, finance chairman.

Examples of the themes are auld lang syne, holiday lights, and Christmas memories, according to Ferreira.

"All of the people with design entries will be judged," she said.

First, second, third and honorable mention will be awarded for each category at each house, she said.

The horticulture division will be held at the community center. Classes will be held in the morning.

Refreshments will be served, and there will be a holiday boutique with work by Jean Replogle, a bake sale and drawing for three or four items, according to the two women.

"All of the members are asked to bake for the tea table or the bake sale," added Moyer.

"We've never staged a flower show in homes before," said Ferreira.

She explained that the club holds a house tour every other year open to the public, but that the homes are generally decorated for the holidays.

"These are designed to be judged," she said, "and they are on special themes."

"There are no judging and no prizes in the other tour."

Last year's tour, which included six houses, attracted some 1200 people, according to Ferreira, who was general chairman.

"We had a big turnout," she said. "We raised a record amount, and we won a state award.

"Next year, the tour will be open to the public again."

Both women are excited about the Dec. 14 event.

"It's something a little different than we've ever done before," said Ferreira.

"Cohasset Common is the center of activity," said Moyer.

"It's lovely at Christmas time," added Ferreira.

About 28 people will decorate the three homes, and numerous others will participate at the community center, she said.

"Christmas seems a fun time to decorate," said Moyer.

"We're hoping for 350 people. We're hoping for a packed house."

Ferreira said that the club hopes to sell most of the tickets in advance. Any that are left will be sold at the door.

For more information on tickets, which are $5 each, call Ferreira, 383-9341 or Rita Strong, 383-0939.

□ Had a nice note from Bob Magner, telling about the contributions that Mahoney and Wright Agencies contributed to the United Way. The agencies raised more than $6,500 for the 1988 United Way Campaign in Massachusetts, according to Bob, who is manager of the company's Cohasset office.

On behalf of the 23 Mahoney & Wright offices across the state, Lee McNeilly, the firm's United Way chairperson, presented a check for $6,503 to the Mass Bay United Way at its October 31 luncheon at the Park Plaza Hotel in Boston.

Through the Mass Bay United Way, the funds raised by the Mahoney & Wright offices will be distributed to 10 separate United Ways and will benefit more than 300 human service agencies, McNeily said.

The 1988 contribution by Mahoney & Wright, he added, represents a 52 percent increase over last year's figure. All 23 Mahoney & Wright offices contributed to the campaign. The United Way organizations benefiting are: Cape Cod, North Central Massachusetts, Gardner, Merrimack Valley, Greater New Bedford, Greater Taunton, Northern Bristol County, Old Colony, Central North Shore, and the Mass Bay United Ways.

Editorial

One step at a time

Selectman Burt Pratt is right. The town has come a long way in 90 days.

We may have needed a good kick in the pants, but Cohasset should be proud that we've moved right along in our attempt to find some level of affordable housing within our community. The pace may be slow, but like Pratt said, it is forward movement.

And for any municipal government, progress, even at a snail's pace, is often times close to a miracle.

In 90 days, since town officials went to court to seek control of the Curtis estate, the town has signed an agreement with the state, saying we will do our best to accommodate all levels of income within our community.

Not only have we signed that agreement, which took a rare moment of harmony between town boards to achieve, we are also about to vote on our first bonafide piece of affordable housing land at Monday night's special town meeting.

The housing authority deserves a lot of credit for their persistence in pursuing this proposal. Many are quick to criticize (as we have been told on occasion), but the housing authority applied for the state money, hired a consultant who did a thorough job of finding the land and hiring engineers and architects, and the proposal is now before town meeting.

Now it's our turn to continue the progress we have made to fulfill our obligation - to house those in need. Or we can oppose the plan and place the town a few steps back from our march toward progress.

Throughout the public hearings in which the affordable family housing plan was reviewed, no one ever spoke out against it. There has been little controversy surrounding the proposal, perhaps because the consultant, Bernard Stewart, did a professional job and left no questions unanswered.

The floor of town meeting is not the place to begin asking the questions we may have postponed for the past several months. It is time to take a last look at the proposal and to cast our vote.

We hope Cohasset residents can see that town officials have made great progress in the past few months as they have attempted to find suitable housing for many facets of a diverse population. We hope everyone agrees that this progress is good for the town, that it is long overdue, and that it is only one step forward in a better future for our town.

After town meeting comes our next test at the Curtis Estate court hearing. We can only hope that town officials prevail once again, and that more neighbors will be welcomed into the community.

What's the problem?

To the editor:

On my way home from college last Wednesday, I drove through the center of town as I always do to see what has changed in downtown Cohasset. When I saw the common I was upset by the condition of the duckpond. Why was it drained and littered with discarded cans and garbage? Where were all the goldfish?

I read the article November 23 which said that an overrun in cost and an unforseen problem with the lining of the duckpond may delay the planned repairs until spring. This would be a disservice to the community which enjoys seeing a clean clear pond throughout the winter. What about all the children who enjoy skating on the frozen pond? Why with the $17,500 from the Warner Bros. gift appropriated to repairing the pond is the project being delayed? Hopefully, this project will be completed as quickly as possible so that we will all be able to enjoy the beauty of Cohasset Common this winter.

grids. In shades of blues and purples, "Celestial Suspension" is an eye-catching part of this fibre art show.

According to Winkler, Roberts walked into her Somerville studio and said he'd like her to create "something huge" for this show. "He described the space he'd have available," she said, "and said there would be plenty of room for something really large. I thought it sounded like fun - I've never done anything this scale before."

That was in early September, and the three pieces were finished in time for the December show. "It took me a solid month to complete it," she admitted.

Roberts, who has been busy this week greeting the artists and helping to hang their artwork, said this exhibit and sale is not a "crafts" show in the traditional sense. "We decided to go with fibre media, sort of the tradition of quilting but in a contemporary design."

As three Cohasset firefighters, Capt. Robert Silvia, Robert Protulis and Arthur Pompeo, carefully maneuvered a ladder into the art gallery and successfully hung the Winkler exhibit, center director Lanci Valentine explained how the department came to her rescue.

"Actually, it was when our kiln overheated recently and the fire department was called in," she stated. "They were great then, so it got me to thinking that they could help us out now. They were only too happy. It's nice that we have a museum-quality fire department in this town."

Roberts, who moved to Cohasset more than a year ago, will have two pieces among the exhibit artwork. He has taken the grids of two chairs and wrapped them in an intricate system of woven fabric strips, much like mummification process, he explained.

There will be colorful diametrically-designed quilts sewn by Dedham artist Judith Ann Larzelere.

"Not all the artists are from the South Shore," Roberts explained. "But they are from the New England area. I wanted to broaden the retrospect of the artists involved in this work. More than 100 invitations were sent to knitting clubs, fabric guilds and to artist associations."

Roberts described the artwork on exhibit as construction art - where the texture of the design is the most important feature. "It certainly is the type of exhibit where people will want to touch the work - not simply look at it," he added.

But that impulse will have to be abated, as many of the original works are delicate and could be damaged by too many affectionate patrons. "This is fine art, after all. It should not be overhandled," the curator cautioned.

Among the artists who have created pieces specifically for this show is Linda Franzel-Annett of Framingham. "Fabulous texture" is how Roberts described her three-dimension wall hangings.

The two diptych pieces combined to form "Leaf Dance" and "Smoke Tree Reflections". The six-by-three-feet piece is comprised of handmade paper formed into about 4,000 leaf-like sculptures in shades of browns and mauves. The leaves are linen and cotton which is stiched, dyed and stuffed.

(Photos by Buzz Wadsworth)

"It creates a kind of blooming effect," the artist said as she looked for the best space to hang the work. "Each piece I create is interesting, but together I feel they are even more interesting. I've worked in fibre for about 20 years - it's more functional than the previous art work I created."

Artist Sandy Weisman of Sherborn brought two pieces, "Jazz," and "Gray, Then Gray" to the December exhibit. They were created by plaiting, which is a flat braided technique of twisting and braiding pleated paper. It results in a fringed, windswept appearance on the three-dimensional wallhanging.

The artist said she envisioned a landscape with the horizon line when she created the works in watercolors of greys, purples, blacks and browns.

"There'll certainly be a lot of diversity among the artists and their works in this exhibit," the show's curator explained. "I think it will be a lot different than most of the previous shows at the art center. It will clearly demonstrate that fibre artists are indeed artists, not simply craftspeople."

November Mathematics League

The following seventh graders represented Cohasset for November: Christa Ansberg, Megan Bruns, Charles Endris, Christopher Goodman, Scott Theriault and Ann Senechal. Christa Ansberg was high scorer.

Eighth graders scoring five points on the first Continental Mathematics League Contests were Katie Brennock, Brian Buckley, Kate DeLima, Peter Fahey, and John Maynard. Congratulations to these students!!!

Betty Richardson, campaign director for Ox-Fam America, talked to students at Cohasset High during a recent 'feast' day they observed in recognition of hungry families throughout the world.

First graders make stone soup

As a special project for the Thanksgiving Holiday, Litzinger's first grade class combined forces and made a delicious pot of stone soup. The recipe was gleened from the book of the same name which Ms. Litzinger had read to the class the week before. The young chefs were delighted in the product of their efforts and devoured the soup with great relish. The chopping, stirring, and actual eating of the soup was all captured on camera and was the entertainment of the day for Wednesday when the children were able to see themselves on the VCR.

The following children participated in the soup-making: Emily Libby, Andrew Sorrentino, Adam Leahy, Darius Amiri, Alexis Mincolla, Naomi Ansberg, Liam O'Donnell, Carolyn Cameron, Ashley Koed, and Caitlin Stansell, all of whom brought the vegetables; milk was provided by Eileen Ridge and Peter Minnar; Joseph Carbone brought in the garlic; Kevin Devito brought in the spices and the soup bones were provided by Joseph Nicynski. All the children agreed that Kelsey Henderson's contribution of noodles did a lot for the soup, and Jennifer Meehan's soup pot and spring water was also invaluable. And to enjoy the soup Eric Hanian very wisely thought of bringing plastic bowls. It was a job well done for these budding culinary artists.

Discussion on drugs

The Continental Cable Co. is planning a special program to be aired live from the Cohasset High School auditorium Thursday evening, Dec. 8.

Wigmore Pierson, host of the weekly "Cohasset Talks" program is planning this special version, "Drugs, Alcohol - What's Happening to Our Kids?"

They have put together a panel which includes representatives from public education, law enforcement, drug-recovering students, support groups, prevention and rehabilitation centers.

Pierson plans a format where he will roam the audience and direct comments, questions and concerns to appropriate panel members.

Those wishing to participate in the audience are asked to be seated in the auditorium at 7:30 p.m. The program will be broadcast live from 8 to 10 p.m. over the local cable channel.

The Cohasset P.S.O. strongly urges the parents of all school aged children to attend this worthwhile program. Students in the Junior/Senior High School are also encouraged to attend with their parents.

School news

Thanks Mr. Deakin

Special appreciation goes to Mr. Deakin of Grade 5 as the coordinator for the committee which organized the Election Day rally, held on the Common on November 7.

Mr. Deakin provided the impetus for this program. Much of his personal time was devoted to the preparation of this event and its success can certainly be attributed to his effort.

Vo-tech contract advice

Regional school committee members will contact the Massachusetts School Committee Association for advice on medical benefits under the teachers' union contract. Under original negotiations for Chapter 32B, South Shore Vocational Technical High School teachers are awarded 50 percent of their Blue Cross/Blue Shield (BC/BS) benefits through the regional budget.

The question raised by teachers concerns coverage by a health maintenance organization (HMO).

BC/BS payments increased by 32 percent this year, while HMOs decreased. Teachers receive 50 percent for HMO coverage even though the cost is 45 cents per deduction per month.

The teachers' union believes teachers should receive the same dollar amount, while the school committee believes they should receive the same percentage.

"During negotiations, the committee said if a teacher wanted to engage some other carrier, we would accept as long as it did not go over 50 percent, said Lloyd Patriquin, a committee member from Whitman. "We accepted the language that we would consider 50 percent."

The change to HMOs does not cost the school committee more money, but the teachers realize the savings rather than the school budget.

Superintendent Clifford Easton told the committee that he believes that as a result of the agreement on the percentage payment in the contract, it means the school committee accepts Chapter 32B.

"It seems to me that the dollar amount might favor one group one year and another group the next," said David Chittim, a committee member from Cohasset. "It seems that in fairness, it is better to accept the law."

Two members of the committee were absent from the meeting, and the committee chose to hold on voting until the December meeting. Easton said that they were not familiar with the law at the time of the negotiations but inevitably, the committee will have to pay 50 percent of BC/BS or HMO benefits packages. The payment would be retroactive.

Turkey day game snaps Cohasset win streak

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

According to Hull Coach Charlie Richardson, his team was not expected to win more than two games all season.

Behind a sturdy defense, the running of Bruno Barbuto and the air attack of quarterback Mike Angellis, the Hull Pirates shut down host Cohasset Skippers, 12-0, November 24. The victory snapped Cohasset's four-game consecutive winning streak on Thanksgiving Day. The young rivalry now stands at a 4-1 Cohasset edge (the series goes back to 1957, but was discontinued in the mid 1970s, resumed again in 1984).

Hull (6-4 overall, 3-3 in the South Shore Small Schools Division) rolled up nearly 300 yards of total offense, highlighted by a 73-yard, first-quarter touchdown spurt by Barbuto.

The Pirates came back in the third period as Angellis hit P.J. Bussey for a 28-yard touchdown strike. Bussey caught four passes for 100 yards on the day.

"I was very pleased with the performance," said Richardson. "We've played on emotion all year long. Every game was a Super Bowl for us. It's just a fitting end to a storybook season. We came out higher than people expected. I just hope that people in town will get the message that football is here for everyone."

Defensively, Hull allowed only 160 yards, much of it gained by Skipper back Paul Froio. Defensive ends Peter Casey and Eric Begley, each had a pair of sacks while defensive backs Dan Kessinger and Andy Adair allowed only two receptions in the secondary.

"We were victimized by the big plays — the long run in the first quarter and the picture-perfect pass in the third. Overall, I thought our defense played great," said Cohasset coach Phil Pisano.

"Our record (2-8, 1-5 league) does not indicate how we have played. This team never quit, always playing hard. They played with a lot of courage. Close relationships were developed on this team. They epitomized what a team is all about. Our three captains (Paul and Chris Froio and Mike Meers) were true leaders on and off the field," added Pisano. "I will miss the seniors."

Despite being contained by the emotional Pirates' defense, running backs P. Froio and Matt Buckley closed out a stellar campaign. Froio finished the year with 1,150 yards rushing, becoming fourth consecutive Cohasset runner to gain over 1,000 yards (Peter Sandblom, Bob Durkin and Floyd Hardwick, respectively) in a season. Buckley, meanwhile, accumulated over 700 yards on the ground.

"Buck did a tremendous job for us all year.

"This being his first varsity season, he should be proud of himself," said Pisano.

Scoring Summary

Coalition costs to be doubled

By Tom Fabian
Mariner staff

Area towns will be asked to double their financial commitment to the South Shore Coalition, coalition representatives said last week.

The representatives of the coalition towns voted to ask their local boards of selectmen to increase the annual contribution to the regional planning group from $1,000 to $2,000.

The coalition of Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell, Rockland, Scituate and Weymouth is a subregion of the Metropolitan Area Planning Council (MAPC).

The coalition has received the $1,000 contribution in the past two of its three years of existence. Towns did not pay a contribution in the coalition's first year.

After conferring with the local boards, coalition representatives will vote on the increase at their next meeting in mid-December.

"We're all beginning to put out our local budgets. It's time we begin to think about increasing our contributions to the South Shore Coalition," coalition vice-chairman Brian MacDonald of Weymouth said.

Hanover representative Janet O'Brien said that while most towns, under tight financial constraints, might look hard on a 100 percent increase in anything, the contribution to the coalition had brought back exponential returns.

"For an investment of $1,000 per community, we've attracted more than $350,000 in state grants," O'Brien. "I think if we are going to continue on a regional level, we need to show support financially."

Representative Connie Hughes of Norwell said the coalition provides the kind of regional organization that is not available at the more widespread county level.

A request for a proposal on the latest and largest grant - $175,000 for the development of a regional solid waste disposal plan - recently was completed, according to coalition manager Jean Christensen.

Christensen added that the coalition will be receiving more of the funding than anticipated from the grant.

Sen. William Golden, D-Weymouth, convinced the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering only to retain $25,000 of the grant for its use, instead of the $50,000 slated for the department, according to Christensen.

The coalition has also recently received grants for a regional septage management program and its "Reduce, Replace, Recycle" campaign.

Christensen added that more work is being done

CHRISTMAS CONCERT TICKETS — are now on sale at the church office at $5 for our annual benefit Christmas concert to be held in the Meeting House Sunday, Dec. 11 at 4 p.m. We look forward to another superb concert featuring the Unicorn Singers under the direction of Margo Euler. They will perform Paulus' So Hallow'd Is the Time, accompanied by a choir of handbells, as well as carols for all to sing. This year we have designated the UUSC's Jamaican Hurricane Relief Project as the beneficiary of the funds raised by our concert. In September, Hurricane Gilbert removed 4 of every 5 roofs on the island of Jamaica, left nearly a fifth of Jamaica homeless, decimated crops and damaged factories so that many Jamaicans are without income. The UUSC has been active in Jamaica since 1962, through training programs for social workers and support of a Skills Training Center on the island, and is therefore in excellent position to provide effective emergency relief.

If you wish, you may become a patron of the concert by making a contribution of $35. Patrons receive two complimentary tickets. Don't miss out on this opportunity to benefit a good cause and to enjoy some beautiful Christmas music.

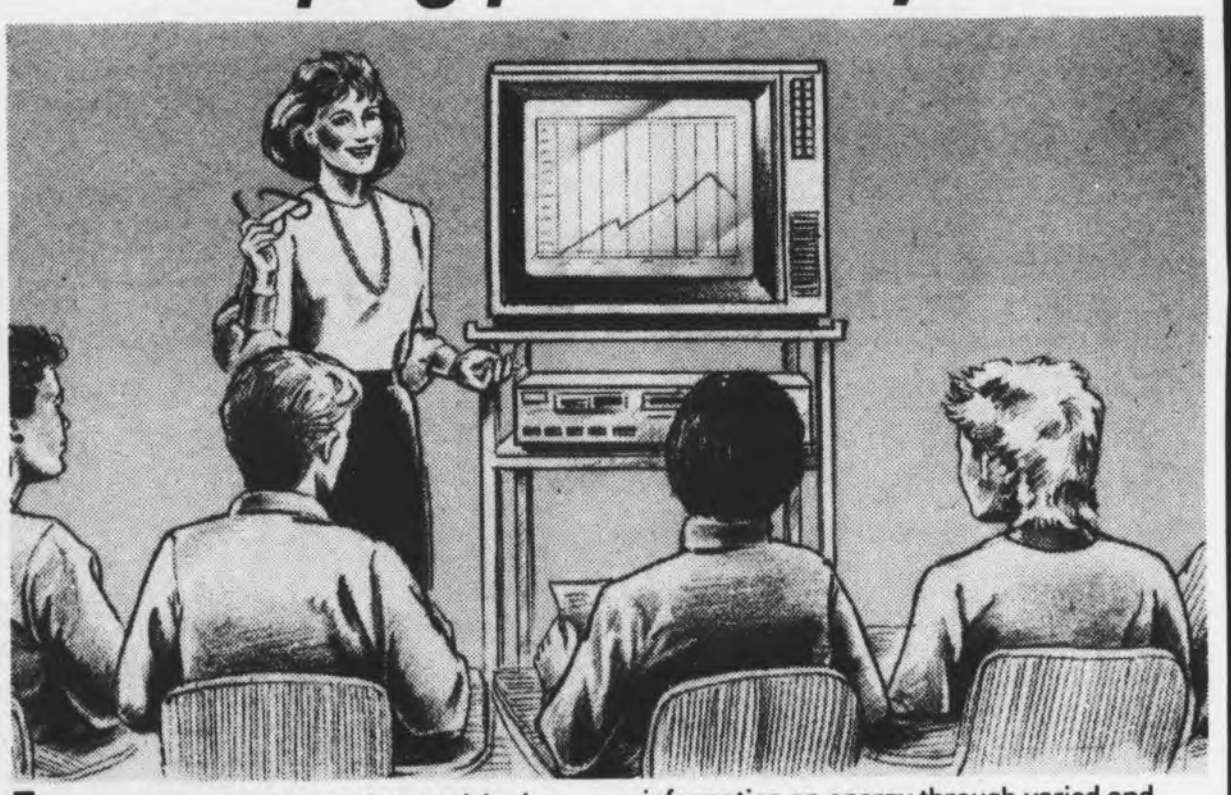
Keeping pace with education.
Keeping pace with you.



The one-room school house has vanished.

Tiny, solar-powered calculators have replaced fingers as a way of adding up numbers.

Computers are in the classroom.

We're in a new educational age — but the amazing thing is there will always be another new age. Years from now, people will look back at today's classroom and wonder how we could have been so quaint.

And that's why Eastern Edison Company offers a variety of free interactive, computer-learning programs on energy to students from kindergarten through grade 12.

We want to help the students in the areas we serve keep pace with the ever-changing world of technology and energy.

And it's working. Every day increasing numbers of students are learning about energy through interactive computer programs.

Students are learning by pushing buttons and watching lights flash. They're becoming personally involved in obtaining vital information on energy through varied and sophisticated technologies.

They're learning about electricity and magnetism, about home energy savings, about supplying electricity — about the many ways electricity shapes their lives, including the very computers they're working on!

Offering computer software to schools is just one of the many free educational services programs Eastern Edison provides. We're in the schools in a wide variety of ways — teaching electric safety, discussing Thomas Edison and his ideas, conducting energy contests and workshops, and providing films, videos and printed materials to teachers.

We're working with teachers to help students.

Senior center news . . .

When it's Thanksgiving: the kitchen's full of the nicest sounds: of pans, and ladels stirring, of bubbly pots, and kettles on, and spoons and beaters whirring. The kitchen's full of the finest smells: of dinner in the making, of turkey on, can cranberries, and pumpkin pies a-baking. The kitchen gives it all away as sure as you are living —you never have to look at all to know when it's Thanksgiving. The Cohasset Council on Aging wishes to all Cohasset seniors a very happy Thanksgiving: Rev. John J. Keohane, Gerard Keating, Dot Bjorkgren, Margaret Casey, Helen Barbary, Mary Donovan, Tony Finegan, Lillian Lincoln, Ed Mulvey, and Jane Hamilton, Assoc. Member.

Fuel Assistance Program

Many people have been asking for up-to-date information on the Fuel Assistance Program. Mr. Richard Hinkley, Ex. Director of S.S. Many people who received before will be able to apply via a mail-in application. Households whose only income is Social Security and/or S.S.I. and did not receive fuel assistance should contact S.S.C.A. in Plymouth, 508-746-6707. Eligibility is based on gross income and family size. Maximum allowable income guidelines based on gross annual income of all members of the family are: (1) — $10,098 (2) $13,528 (3) $14,535 (4) $17,475. For more information call us at 383-9112.

National Diabetes Month — November — Approximately 12 million Americans (one in 16) have diabetes. Of that number 5 million do not know they have diabetes. These are mainly people who developed diabetes as adults, and 80 percent of them are over-weight. The Greater Boston Diabetes Society has been educating the public for 31 years about the symptoms, risk factors, complications and management of diabetes. In conjunction with the National Diabetes Month, they are offering a new resource packet which includes information and pamphlets about diabetes and its management (diet, exercise, recipes, lists of resources for supplies, name of dieticians, addresses for diabetes newsletters, lists of helpful books, etc. The resource packet can be ordered from: Greater Boston Diabetes Society, 1330 Beacon St., Suite 345, Brookline, MA 02146. To order, send a check for $5 to cover postage and handling and include whether insulin is used or not. Call: 731-2972 for information.

SHINE — Health Benefits Information and Processing — We'd like to remind you that the Cohasset Council on Aging has great SHINE volunteers named Eleanor Smith and Tony Finegan. They are available on Wednesday mornings from 9:30 to 12 noon by appointment only. SHINE is an acronym for Serving Health Information Needs for Elders. The SHINE volunteers will be happy to assist you with Medicare and other health insurance claims or forms. They both will be able to offer information on health insurance, social security benefits, provide advocacy and assistance with any problems you may be having with health care systems.

If you have the need for this service, please call 383-9112 to make an appointment.

Special invite: to all senior citizens, the Cohasset Garden Club cordially invites you to attend "Holiday Tea" on Tuesday, November 29 at noon at Walton Rodger's Hall in St. Stephen's Church. The program of the day will be speaking on holiday decorating.

Thanksgiving Day dinner — From Lillian

For the third consecutive year, 60 Elm St. Tenants Association will be holding a Thanksgiving Day dinner for those residents who prefer to stay at home on the holiday. Please call Lillian or Shirley if you plan being there for Thanksgiving.

Weather cancellations — From the council

It is that time of year again when the weather sometimes plays tricks on us. Please keep in mind the COA Senior Center closing policy. If the Cohasset Schools are cancelled, the van will definitely not run that day and all activities will be cancelled. In the event of any early clearing, afternoon events at the center will be held. Unless the town hall is closed, the office at the center will remain open — we might open a little later than usual.

All announcements concerning weather schedules will be called into radio station (WJDA) 1300 AM on the dial.

Recreation programs . . .

The Cohasset Recreation Department has openings for the upcoming aerobics exercise classes new session for those that may be interested.

Classes meet on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings from 6:15 to 7:15, and on Tuesday and Thursday evenings from 5 to 6.

You may register for as many, or as few classes as you like. The base fee is $40 for 16 hours of class. That is, two classes per week for eight weeks is $40 for the session. However, the fee will be pro-rated based upon the number of classes you wish to take. You may register at class time with the instructors.

All classes are held in town hall auditorium, and are low-impact aerobics. You may join at any time and classes continue year round. Non-residents are accepted on a space-available basis.

There are a few openings left in the first scheduled ski trip of the year to Loon Mt. Sunday, Dec. 18. The cost is $36, which includes motor coach transportation, and all day lift ticket.

Special beginner package rates are also available for this trip for $40 and includes rental of equipment, ski lesson, beginner slopes all day lift ticket, as well as transportation. Call the Cohasset Recreation Department office immediately at 383-6791 to register.

The next scheduled ski trip will be on Martin Luther King Day, Monday, Jan. 16, 1989, to Ragged Mt.

Registration information will be forthcoming. There are five ski trips scheduled for the 1988-1989 season. While prices will vary, they always reflect exact costs, because the recreation deparment does not intend to operate this program for profit.

The following is a tentative schedule for the Cohasset Recreation Departments 1988-1989 day ski trips:

Sunday, Dec. 18, Loon Mt.; Monday, Jan. 16, Ragged Mt. (Martin Luther King Day); Sunday, Feb. 5, Mt. Sunapee; Thursday, Feb. 23, Gunstock (Feb. school vacation); Sunday, March 12, Loon Mt.

The exact cost of trips will vary, as each ski area has different lift ticket prices.

Again this year, Mr. and Mrs. Earle A. Bestick have volunteered to serve as chaperones for the ski trips, and the Blue Hill ski lessons. They are both experienced skiers and chaperones. The recreation department owes the Bestick's a vote of gratitude for their continued interest and efforts on behalf of our children.

Names will be taken for a waiting list for bridge classes which meet Monday's during the day. Should you be interested, please call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791.

Volleyball continues on Tuesday evenings at the Gates School in Scituate. There are two volleyball groups that meet each Tuesday evening, except during school vacations or no school days. Beginning at 7 p.m. is a coed volleyball group, and at 7:30 p.m., a women's only volleyball group.

For further information you may call either the Cohasset or Scituate Recreation office.

Youth Basketball is now underway and the first game is scheduled for Dec. 3. Each team coach will call, once the teams have been formed, to tell you which team you have been assigned to, and what time and gym you should report to Dec. 3.

About 265 children and youth in grades 2 through 9 have registered for this program which is co-sponsored by the Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club and Cohasset Recreation Department. Many thanks should go to George W. Ellinger who is again coordinating the program for all grades.

Registration notices for Dog Obedience Classes, scheduled to begin Wednesday, Jan. 11, will be announced shortly. Sessions are eight weeks long and meet one hour each week at the G.A.R. Hall in Scituate. Dogs must be a minimum of three months, and the fee is $25 per dog.

New program announcements will be made during December and January. Special Christmas school vacation programs will be held again this year. Information regarding those will be forthcoming.

There will be a furniture refinishing course during January taught by Kenneth Sargent. Registration and program details will be forthcoming.

The Cohasset Recreation Department is accepting applications for part-time employment for various children's programs. If you have prior experience working with children in group settings, or have special interest teaching skills, call the recreation office at 383-6791. Pay rates are commensurate with experience. Positions vary from two to six hours weekly, generally after school.

Coalition cost doubled . . .

to promote the recycling campaign among local chambers of commerce. She said that the Boston Whaler company reported that it is now saving more than $1,000 week because of changes in its waste generation.

Budget contributions also do not pay for office space, which is provided free by the town of Norwell, Christensen said.

Additionally, the bulk of the coalition's annual budget is paid by the MAPC, she added.

The MAPC paid $42,157 of the coalition 1988 budget of approximately $52,157, Christensen said.

More than $45,000 of that budget was for Christensen's salary and the salary of her secretary.

Other major costs included approximately $2,000 in telephone costs, $1,600 in outside printing, including the printing of a historical map of the South Shore, and $2,700 in miscellaneous expenses.

Christensen added that future grant application will include additional requests for funding to help pay for managing projects through the coalition.

The fiscal 1990 coalition budget is estimated at $53,000, with most items remaining almost level, according to Christensen's projections.

Coalition studies regional purchasing

Most South Shore towns have difficulty in coordinating their own purchasing, let alone coming together and buying products on a regional scale, according to a study commissioned by the South Shore Coalition.

"There are not a lot of people involved in purchasing. They're having enough trouble getting together with the office next door to buy pens, let alone doing something regionally," according to Ellie Seaton of the management consulting firm Bennett and Shaw.

The coalition of 10 area towns called for the study to find out if procuring items on a regional basis would be cheaper and more efficient.

"The South Shore Coalition probably doesn't want to take this on as another duty. That doesn't make sense," Seaton said.

She added, "We looked at sharing capital items, but the (departments of public works) said that wasn't feasible for legal reasons so we turned it to how communities could contract together.

"Probably the DPWs are managing these things pretty well on their own, so it doesn't make sense for them to do this," Seaton said.

She said that there are collectives for some capital products, such as the Plymouth County road salt collective, and that some school districts come together in purchasing arrangements.

She added that it was difficult gathering information for the study from the towns, especially the school departments. She said there was little cooperation in purchasing between the town and school sides of government.

Only one town, Marshfield, had a purchasing agent, and most towns had little centralization in purchasing, she said.

"In a lot of towns, when a department needs pens or paper, they just run to the corner office supplier," Seaton said.

She also said that it was difficult comparing purchased items from town to town because even similar products are bought in many different types and quantities.

"There is a huge variation communities pay for the same item, even when they buy it from the same vendor.

"That is useful information from that standpoint. The town can ask the vendor , 'How can so-and-so get that at such-and-such a price?'" she said.

However, Marshfield selectman Richard Levin questioned the usefulness of the entire study.

"Quite frankly, I didn't learn anything from it. It was quite elementary. The only way it would benefit is if we had a cost benefit analysis, 'is there an enough advantage to setting up an administration for this?'" Levin said.

"It warrants the whole issue of feasibility and how towns are able to pull (purchasing) together. On a policy level its a great idea. On an implementation level its a whole different profile," he said.

The coalition's executive committee said it would look at the study and determine what information it still needs.

Businesses line up against Rte. 3A housing

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The Chamber of Commerce board of directors are opposed to the proposed Deck Point housing plan for Rte. 3A, and recently appropriated money towards an appeal if the project is approved by the zoning board.

The zoning board of appeals is expected to issue a decision on the proposed 128-unit condominium project sometime this month. Following the last public hearing on the proposal Nov. 16, the board has until December 26 to make its decision.

Deck Point Inc. plans to construct 128 condos on 16 acres of land at 81-119 King Street. The owners have requested a comprehensive permit under the Homeownership Opportunity Program, which will allow them to bypass certain local zoning and health regulations. In exchange, the owners must set aside 25 percent of the units as affordable, selling them at an average cost of $78,500.

Under the HOP program, homeowners may qualify for a mortgage with a down payment of five percent, and may borrow the rest at interest rates as low as five percent.

At a meeting last week of the Chamber board of directors, it was unanimously voted that if the zoning board "votes a compliance permit, the Chamber will seek counsel for the reason of preparing an appeal of the permit . . . to put an immediate stop to the project."

Board of directors member Wayne Sawchuk said $300 has been set aside "for legal counsel to help with an appeal if the permit is granted."

Although the vote may be premature, he noted, the Chamber directors wanted to obtain a consensus about the project.

"We can't believe the zoning board would allow this project to go through, but we wanted to be prepared in that event," Sawchuk stated.

The reasons for their objections, he explained, is because the development would "force a major

Affordable housing

Voters OK plan for land transfer

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

The town took another step closer to providing 12 units of affordable housing when residents voted overwhelmingly to transfer land off Route 3A from the school committee to housing authority.

Some 243 residents voted at Monday night's town meeting to transfer the 8.72 acres to provide a site for housing for the mentally retarded, the aged, or citizens of low or moderate income.

Ten voted against the proposal.

The school committee had voted Nov. 7 to release the land bordering Route 3A and Evergreen Lane.

School Supt. Stephen Hart said that release of the 8.72 acres, in addition to 14 acres for development of a cemetery, leaves the school committee with more than 50 acres of land under its jurisdiction.

That land, he said, would be more than sufficient for the school department if a new school building is necessary in the future, or if there is a need for a school athletic field there.

The housing authority may also transfer to the site a single family home currently at the corner of Sohier St. and Route 3A.

"I am here to speak on behalf of a proposal that strikes at the very heart of what we as Americans stand for," said housing authority member Fred Koed during Monday night's meeting.

"This plan will fulfill our commitment to the state, signed by all members of the board of selectmen, the planning board and the housing authority in a memorandum of agreement to build affordable housing in Cohasset.

"Your vote tonight will enable the Town of Cohasset to remain eligible for state funded discretionary grants, the money Cohasset will need to help pay for future improvements to the water and sewer systems and the purchase of openspace, recreation and conservation land.

Curtis home renovated for a family

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Through the efforts of many people and several organizations, a shelter for one homeless family may be ready for occupancy.

A seven-room home located on the former George E. Curtis estate at 15 Black Rock Road has been renovated through donations of supplies, money and labor.

And it has all been made possible through at least a temporary settlement between adversaries - an agency hoping to join in a cooperative plan for future use of the property, and the trustees who now control the land.

The trustees of the former Curtis estate petitioned the attorney general more than a year ago for permission to break the terms of Curtis' will. They intend to sell the land to a private developer, after finding it impossible to abide by the terms of the will. The late George Curtis had stipulated that the four homes and 55 acres of land be used to house infirmed women.

The town, directed by members of the citizens' group, the Curtis Estate Action Committee, intervened in the trustees' legal petition, and have developed a plan for the town's future use of the Jerusalem Road property.

Among the community groups anxious to participate in the future plans for the Curtis Estate is the Hingham Interfaith Shelter.

It was during a September 15 hearing at Plymouth County Probate Court, that many people first heard about the shelter which provides temporary housing for needy South Shore

Cemetery abutters express concerns about proposal

Concerns about increased traffic and drainage problems were some of the issues raised Tuesday night by residents who abut a proposed cemetery off Pleasant Lane, Pleasant Street and Smith Place.

Twenty-five residents attended a meeting scheduled by the cemetery committee to voice their concerns about the project. Many residents complained that the proposed 5,000 plot cemetery will increase traffic on the residential streets, and that drainage problems on Smith Place will be exacerbated by the development.

Several residents requested that accesses other than the Pleasant Lane right of way be investigated. One suggestion was that an access could be developed off Sohier Street at the southerly end of the South Shore Music Circus parking lot.

Committee chairman Glenn Pratt said although the committee will "probably' stick with this proposal for the 1989 town meeting, the committee will review the possibility of a Sohier Street access. The committee hopes to have the cemetery developed and ready for use by 1992.

When asked if the present location is a 'fait accompli,' Pratt answered, "The committee hasn't talked about this since it was brought up at this meeting, but we will probably not go away from this parcel. We'll try to make this work before we seek alternative sites."

The school department voted last month to release 14 acres of school-controlled land to selectmen for the purpose of creating a cemetery. The land abuts the rear of the Deer Hill School, with access off Pleasant Lane.

Pratt said the cemetery committee, after reviewing eight sites throughout town, decided this would be the best place to establish a new town cemetery. The committee plans to present the proposal to the 1989 annual town meeting in order to obtain engineering funds.

Two abutters, Joseph Jerz of Pleasant Street and Ralph Kidder of Cushing Road, pressed Pratt for an answer as to whether the site selection

Presidential congratulation

Selectmen have received responses from The White House and Congress to their recent resolution on the ban of all commercials promoting any alcoholic beverage from both network and local television and radio.

Selectmen last month requested that the Massachusetts delegation take the lead in introducing legislation that would ban such commercials.

Copies of the resolution were also sent to the president, governor, and 350 cities and towns in Massachusetts.

"On behalf of the president, I would like to thank you for your recent correspondence regarding the banning of alcoholic beverage commercials on television and radio." wrote Cristena L. Bach, Special Assistant to the President for Intergovernmental Affairs.

"A copy of your letter has been forwarded to the appropriate officials at the Department of Health and Human Services for their benefit and consideration.

"I sincerely appreciate your sharing your views with the administration."

Cong. Chester G. Atkins commended selectmen for their "concern and foresight."

"I thought you might like to know about one of the provisions in the recently enacted Omnibus Drug Bill," added Atkins.

"The new law requires that each bottle of liquor contain a warning label concerning the hazards of alcohol consumption.

"The labels warn of health risks to pregnant women and of the risks of drinking and driving.

"I am in agreement with you that the government can play a role to ensure responsible alcohol consumption."

Court orders Dwyer's to stop work

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

The town was granted a preliminary injunction in superior court Dec. 2 prohibiting further construction on the second floor of Dwyer's Cleaning Spot. The company headquarters are being rebuilt on Route 3A after a fire destroyed the store last summer.

"They (Dwyer's) asked that they just be allowed to install a sprinkler system and insulation," said Town Counsel Richard Henderson, Monday, Dec. 5.

A trial may be as soon as Dec. 20 before Judge James Lynch in Dedham, according to Henderson.

He said that the legal action was taken at the direction of the planning board.

Building Inspector Donald Robbins issued a cease and desist order Oct. 20 after visiting the building which replaced the one destroyed in a $1 million fire Aug. 5. He had been asked to investigate by planning board member Al Moore.

"As I explained to you on the day of the fire, you do have the right to rebuild exactly what was in place," said Robbins in his letter to owner Robert Dwyer.

"Now I find that instead of a one and a-half story building, we have a two and a-half story building."

Robbins explained that any extension or enlargement requires a special permit from the ZBA and any extension over 200 square feet requires a site plan review.

At the Nov. 2 planning board hearing, Dwyer indicated during an informal hearing that the new main office and central processing facility now met local zoning requirements.

But Robbins later reiterated that Dwyer should seek a special permit from the ZBA and site plan review from the planning board.

Henderson said he filed for the injunction November 25.

When asked to site similar cases the town has pursued in the past, Henderson said several involved used car lots where preliminary injunctions were sought.

"The preliminary injunction became permanent," he said.

"Any case is only as good as the evidence and witnesses.

"I haven't really had a chance to talk with town officials.

"But the bylaw states that any alterations to a non-conforming use can only be done by special permit.

"I'm reasonably convinced that a special permit and site plan approval are applicable to this case.

"The building is going up differently than it was before."

Concerns raised about Crystal Woods plan

The planning board listened to the concerns of nearly 20 neighbors of the proposed Crystal Woods project Wednesday, Nov. 30, and added some of their own complaints.

But board members also told residents they may have little say in the permitting process.

"The planning board is less involved in the process than the fire chief," said board chairman Robert Sturdy.

Developers of Crystal Woods, a 60-unit condominium development planned for 20 acres off Route 3A, are seeking a comprehensive permit from the town's Zoning Board of Appeals.

The permit allows the applicant to bypass local zoning in exchange for providing affordable housing.

"The board of appeals does what the planning board normally does as far as considering such things as safety and traffic," explained Sturdy.

"We can submit our opinion as to whether or not it is desirable."

Neighbors siad they only recently learned of hte plans for the development on the Scituate-Cohasset line. Last week, they presented to selectmen a petition signed by 100 residents opposed to the project.

"This project came to the community's attention Nov. 16," said Joseph Barressi of Brewster Rd., who told of a meeting with the developer attended by Cohasset and Scituate residents at Pier 44.

Scituate has approved the plan.

"We really have not sat down and discussed this," said Barresi. "But we do have concerns as the site is layed out."

Chief among the concerns was the planned connection of the property with Ledgewood Drive, now a dead end. Cars would then travel down Brewster Rd. to reach Route 3A.

"That would join a 60-unit development with 55 single homes in the Brewster Rd. area," said Barresi, who was concerned about the increase in traffic.

"Scituate only approved the Scituate part of the development on the condition that a connection with Brewster Rd. and Ledgewood Drive be established," he said.

"The bottom of Brewster Rd. is 40 feet wide. There is a very narrow entrance to Brewster Rd.

"Right now, it's almost impossible for two cars to pass at the same time.

"The traffic would be unacceptable."

Sturdy said it would make more sense for the development to tie into Gannet Pasture Rd. since many of the residents would be commuting by way of North Scituate.

"Brewster Rd. doesn't lead anywhere but Route 3A," said Sturdy.

"It doesn't make sense to exacerbate the problems on Route 3A.

"Route 3A can't absorb a lot of little feeder roads from neighborhoods."

"I can see how Scituate approved this," said Ed Goff of Ledgewood Drive.

"It doesn't affect them.

"Scituate is taking care of Scituate.

"I just hope Cohasset can take care of Cohasset."

Barresi said that Brewster Rd. would have to be widened by 10 feet to accommodate the increased traffic.

"People would lose their lawns," he said.

Concerns about drainage were also voiced.

Goff said that when he recently installed a pool in his yard, his basement was flooded with four inches of water after the first storm.

"There are natural springs under my property," said Goff.

"I'm concerned that the development would cause more flooding."

"I see a lot of problems with this development,' said board member Al Moore.

"They're trying to squeeze too much into too little space.

"It may be good for affordable housing, but it's a lousy development.

"I see this development as a real nightmare for the town."

Board member John O'Toole agreed.

"I think this project is very poor. I would vote against it," he said.

"The opening should be on Gannett Pasture Rd., not Brewster Rd.," said O'Toole.

"I think it's really over built," he added.

"There is much too much density," said member Patrick Plante.

"I would like to vote against it."

Sturdy said that the sense of the board was clear.

"The whole concept is repugnant to the board," he said.

Sturdy said the board will convey it's "grave concerns" to the state and the ZBA.

"Too often there is a knee-jerk reaction to the prospect of affordable housing," said Barresi.

"I think the community feels better after talking with you."

Voters okay affordable housing plan

"The construction of this development, should you approve it tonight, will be funded with a $1.4 million grant from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

"Some Cohasset families who today cannot afford to own or rent their own homes will live in this development."

Koed said that tenant selection guidelines will aim to promote local preference and fairness and justice to all qualified applicants and families, including minorities.

"Some of us, maybe even most of us, came from another place — a place maybe not as affluent as Cohasset," said Koed.

"Other families may have been here for generations, but all of us have worked hard to get and stay where we are today, because we aspire to better things for ourselves and for our families.

"Most of us have been blessed with opportunities in life, others are not so fortunate.

"...Our town has no affordable housing, the type of housing that allows a young family to save toward the American dream of home ownership.

"We are asking for your permission to build one dozen rental units that represent less than one half of one percent of the housing stock of approximately 2,500 homes in Cohasset today."

Jeffrey Waal of Old Pasture Rd. noted that the school controlled land gets a lot of attention.

"If we keep up, we won't have anything to give away.

"It's ok to leave it green and undeveloped and to say no to the article."

School committee chairman Diana Kornet said the remaining land would be enough to encompass a single campus of 4,500 students.

"We would not be using this parcel which is close to Route 3A," she said.

Water Commissioners chairman Ron Goodwin said, "It's important to go ahead with this and provide affordable housing. We can apply for state grants.

"Affordable housing is good for the town all around."

The Rev. Cliff Cutler, chairman of the Fair Housing Committee, also spoke in favor.

"The community is enriched by diversity," he said.

Chartis Langmaid of the Cohasset Housing Partnership, said, "Affordable housing is not giving money to people who are poor.

"Affordable housing is needed for a lot of people who live here.

"I feel we have a moral commitment."

Osgood playground a town project

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

It's a community effort, designed to provide safe and constructive fun for all children.

The Osgood School playground project began in September when a parents' group suggested that a new plaground would be a welcomed addition to the aging edifice in the rear of the schoolyard. One parent, Ann Whiteley, volunteered to investigate such a project.

She returned three weeks later, armed with a seven-page report and a whole lot of ideas.

"What we want is a safe and imaginative play area. We want a balance between physical challenges and imaginative play," Whiteley explained this week. "Sometimes, children just need a quiet space to be alone and to take a breath."

Playground project co-coordinator Linda Keller agreed. After reviewing preliminary proposals by three playground contractors, the Osgood committee decided to go along with Tom Bowler and Tony Salerno of Custom Playground, Inc.

"We liked Tom's concept for the playground," Keller stated. "He provides the child with choices. For instance, on the platform, he will design three methods of getting down - one is easy, one is more challenging, and the third is very challenging. No one will be afraid to go onto this equipment and no one will be embarrassed.

"He builds a playground that builds self esteem," she added.

The playground project has taken on a logical progression, according to the coordinators. In October, the teachers and parents of the Osgood School signaled their enthusiastic support and offered their help in organizing the project.

"I could tell then I wasn't going to be alone," Whiteley recalled.

An afterschool parents' meeting produced a list of committees, including an important fundraising committee headed by parent Kevin Lewis.

An election to name the playground was initiated by the teachers, and on November 8, the project was officially entitled, "Osgood Playpark."

In the meantime, the coordinators toured other communities where major playground projects were recently completed, including Hingham, Marshfield and Pembroke. Judy Toomey of Hingham, who last year headed up the Plymouth River School playground effort in Hingham, has "helped tremendously," offering lists of schedules and necessary committees to her counterparts in Cohasset.

As it stands right now, the playground will be completed by the end of June, Whiteley said hopefully.

There will be a meeting Thursday, Dec. 8 at 7:30 p.m. at Osgood for all interested residents. The designer will be there to receive input and opinions about the playground from the community.

The next Saturday, Bowler will return to the school from 9 to 11 a.m. At that time he will present ideas and explain what concepts can be realistically incorporated into the playground design. By the end of January he will present a preliminary design of the playground, and after receiving more community input, the design will be finalized by March 1.

Construction of the playground, which will be accomplished through the voluntary labor of residents, will take place June 3 and 4, and June 10 and 11. "We need 100 volunteers on the second weekend," Whiteley commented. The first weekend of work will require about 50 volunteers.

"The designers will have the playground configuration all mapped out. All we need is the labor, skilled and unskilled, to follow their instructions. If we follow their instructions, the designers guarantee success," the coordinator said.

The winter and spring months will be filled

CHS council recognizes excellence in students

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

"We want kids to feel appreciated for what they do, and be recognized," said John DeLorenzo, assistant principal of Cohasset High School which recently established a Student of the Month program.

Students may be nominated for academic excellence, extra-curricular activities, community service, school service, unusual accomplishments or a combination of these things.

The selected student's picture and reason for selection are displayed in the new display case across from the attendance office for the rest of the year. Any of the school's 540 students in grades 7-12 can be nominated.

Winners so far have been senior Jay Staunton, September; senior Jackie Lydon, October; and junior Jim Reidy, November.

"They were very surprised," said DeLorenzo.

"The kids have been pleased. I think it's a nice honor."

Nominations so far have come from staff members, but this month it will be opened up to include students and members of the community.

"People in town can nominate a student who did something for senior citizens, for example," said DeLorenzo.

"They can come in and fill out a short nomination form with the student's name and reason for recognition, or they can call and we will send out a form," he said.

"We're looking for students to be recognized.

"A lot of times, students are recognized in the hallway, or office.

"But the whole student body doesn't know about it."

A decision on the winner is made by members of the student council, a guidance counselor and DeLorenzo.

"We just discuss the nominees," he said.

"We've been pretty much in agreement on the winners to date.

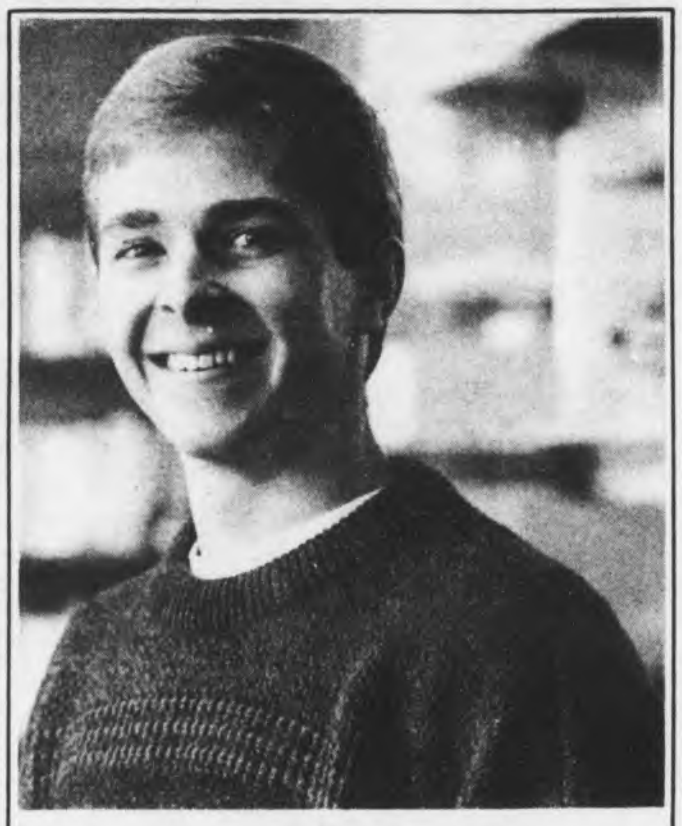
"We announce the winner at the beginning of the month."

Winners receive a student council award.

A student of the year will be selected from among the students of the month.

Staunton was selected for his award for his "cheerful willingness to contribute to the school," according to his award.

Jackie Lydon



Jim Reidy

"Jay has maintained excellence doing honors work, has substantially helped the soccer team, and has fully participated in the student council activities," states the award.

"He faithfully reads the announcements every day."

Staunton was nominated by language teacher Thomas O'Neill.

Lydon was recognized for "her easy going personality, combined with a fierce determination on the (girls' field hockey) playing field and her selection to the all star team."

"Jackie, as co-captain of the girls' field hockey team brought them to the state tournament for the second time in three years. The team was young and inexperienced, yet Jackie's leadership qualities molded a winning combination of youth and experience."

She was nominated by social studies teacher Scott Newkirk.

Reidy was honored for a number of accomplishments but, "above all, however, Jim is a gentleman" according to his award.

"Jim certainly meets the description of 'all-around student/athlete.' He is an outstanding student, member of the student council, state student advisory council, representative to the state board, a Hugh O'Brien scholar, and during the month of November, he became the leading scorer in Cohasset's soccer history.

"He further distinguished himself by his selection to conference, local and state soccer all star teams."

He was nominated by DeLorenzo.

According to DeLorenzo, the program was used at Silver Lake High School in Kingston where he had been assistant principal.

"It was very successful there," he said.

And the idea seems to be catching on at Cohasset High School.

"We didn't have a lot of nominations for the first couple of go-arounds," DeLorenzo said.

"But now students are asking when nominations can be put in.

"We're seeing students come in and ask how they go about nominating someone."

The program should be beneficial to the whole student body as well as the winners of the awards, he said.

"I think the other students will look at what the winners do," he said.

"They'll ask, 'what kind of qualities do they have?' " 'I can strive for that.' "

with community fundraisers. Although a final cost of the project can not be determined until the plans are completed, Whiteley estimates it will cost about $25,000 including the designers' fee.

About $500 has already been raised from a candy bar sale at the November 8 election polls. A recent telephone sale of holiday wreaths was extremely successful, she reported, with more than $5,000 allocated toward the project.

There is a money raffle scheduled for December 23. Tickets, which may be obtained by calling 383-2076, are $100 each. Whiteley quickly explained that groups of people can contribute toward one ticket. The first place drawing will mean $1,000 for the winner; second place, $750; third place, $500; amd fourth place, $250. If all 100 tickets are sold, the coordinator said $7,500 will be raised by the raffle.

"Hopefully," she said, "we'll have $10,000 by Christmas. That's our goal."

A March dream auction, featuring items for five dollars and more, will be held on cable television. There'll be items such as sky box tickets to the Celtics, craft items and cruise tickets available. Persons interested in donating items for the auction are welcome to contribute.

"I think everyone in this town realizes the importance of playtime and socialization for our children," the coordinator noted. "We have to teach them young that it's good to work together - that it would be a better world if we helped each other and worked together. We have to start somewhere - why not at the playground?"

School administrators pleased with test scores

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The school administration was pleased with the "expected" high scores attained by Cohasset students in the state Education Assessment Program tests.

The testing including review of curriculum in the areas of math, reading and science. Social studies was included for the first time since the test was initiated in 1986. Grades four, eight and 12 participated in this second year of testing last spring.

Supt. Stephen Hart emphasized that the assessment tests are just one diagnostic tool the school system uses to analyze its curriculum. Based upon these tests scores which were received three weeks ago, Supt. Hart said the Cohasset curricula appear "on target" although some review of the eighth grade reading and social studies will be made.

According to Supt. Hart, the test levels in those two area were as not as high as expected when compared to the state averages.

"There could be two reasons for that - certainly not excuses," he explained. "One, is that all of Cohasset's special needs students participated in the testing, although they have the option not to. I don't know if that had any impact at all. But if we look at the eighth graders last year we see there was no developmental reading curriculum in that grade last year - the year they took the test. This year, all the eighth grade students have had it. I'd like to see the test scores this year after that program has been in place."

The superintendent also explained the new chairman of the social studies department is looking into that curriculum, as well as the principal of the Deer Hill School. "They will be looking into the curriculum to see if the test scores indicate a need for some change.

"This is one way to look at our curriculum," Supt. Hart said. "But keep in mind that this test measures every students in those grades in the state. There is a potential danger for towns to look at these types of testing and compare one community to another. We like to think of it as a diagnostic tool - are we teaching what we should?"

Scores are given to each school indicating the grade level percentage compared to a state average. There are no individual student scores given to the schools.

The superintendent noted that the test results help individudual schools and school systems to match their curriculum with those of schools throughout the state.

Another facet of last spring's test is series of student behaviorial questions. The participating

Editorial

Signal has been sent

The warning has been sent, the red flag has been raised. The town should settle into the uncomfortable knowledge that more Proposition 2 1/2 overrides will become reality.

The advisory committee informed residents at special town meeting this week that the new firefighters' contract, one that was overwhelmingly approved by town meeting, dramatically decreased the town's free cash fund. The town will have to look elsewhere for money to fund special articles and purchases for the coming fiscal year.

This is bleak news for Cohasset households. Not only is Cohasset's town coffers looking mighty thin, but perhaps the state's are in more critical condition.

While state administration officials are scurrying about, attempting to locate ways in which the deficit can be reduced, one thing is known for sure. State employees will be laid off, and cities and towns should not cross their fingers and hope for an increase in state aid. It won't be there.

The future looks a bit grim. While residents are attempting to balance their own finances, we must also look wearily to the decreasing fortunes within town government.

The school committee has already said it will prepare two budgets, one a realistic, hold-the-line budget, and the other will contain a "wish list' of items that administrators, teachers and some parents would like to see in the school next year.

They don't hold out much hope for the wish list, because they realize they'll be standing in line along with all the other town departments.

School maintenance repairs and school bus purchases will all have to be considered along with town employees' salary increases, a town cemetery proposal and many other considerations that have yet to firmed up for the annual town meeting.

Town officials warned residents last year that they had better realize that as long as Proposition 2 1/2 is around, the overrides will continue. Last year was just a preview for Cohasset, as well as other area communities.

It will be time in fiscal 1990 to tighten that belt even more. It's going to hurt, and town services will likely suffer, but the bottom line is we can't afford to spend more than we receive from local and state receipts.

If the state wallet is hurting, we will be privileged to share the pain. New purchases must be limited, new town employees will be a passing thought, and repairs will likely be suspended for another year. It's not the best way to run a town. But until someone can figure out how to squeeze blood from a stone, it's about the only way we'll survive this latest financial calamity.

Water resources need protection

Letters

To the Editor:

Much time, effort and money has been expended trying to address the water supply problems of communities in Southeastern Massachusetts with very little result. Each year increased numbers of communities are unable to meet the demands for water and are forced to place moratoriums on water usage or to restrict water use. When drought conditions occur, state officials dutifully report the communities who are experiencing difficulty and give the impression that the situation is beyond control.

The fact is that Southeastern Massachusetts and all of New England has abundant water resources compared to other areas of the country and our problems stem mainly from poor management and the development of our water resources. Each year on average, Southeastern Massachusetts receives in excess of 40 inches of rainfall, most of which ends up as runoff to rivers and streams and is carried out to sea. Almost no effort is made to impound water from public supplies in other than a handful of natural lakes or ponds. The main source of public drinking water supplies in SEMass is from ground-water well supplies. Yet even these groundwater supplies are exceptional in many communities and valued as prized possessions that often remain undeveloped and reserved for future development.

Southeastern Massachusetts has sufficient water resources to meet its present and future needs. The problem can be solved by properly developing and allocating this valuable natural resource among communities so that water short communities can reach their maximum economic growth potential. To do this, the state will have to show more leadership and provide support and direction to assist local and regional efforts to develop the organizational mechanism necessary to develop and allocate the region's water resources. The present State Water Policy and laissez-faire attitude toward local water supply problems must be changed.

Area legislators should take particular note that they must provide the leadership necessary in facilitating this change.

Sincerely,
John J. DeMarco
President
Old Colony Planning Council

Reader objects to 'outrageous' article

To the Editor:

It was with total disgust that my family read your accusation in the December 1 issue of the Scituate Mariner in which you unjustly accuse my son, Jonathan, of operating a "bogus fitness center" at the Hingham Shipyard.

It is indeed a tragedy when an honest young man with considerable background and education in his chosen field attempts, against almost insurmountable odds, to follow his dream with the full moral support and financial backing of his family and friends only to be shot down and unmercifully branded a criminal by his hometown newspaper without even the courtesy of a telephone call or interview. The presumption of "innocent until proven guilty" apparently has no significance to the Mariner Newspapers.

The allegation that "there never have been any negotiations between the Hingham Shipyard managment and Davey" is an OUTRAGEOUS LIE. Numerous telephone conversations between Jonathan and Mr. Tony Caner of the Neelon Corporation, managers of the Hingham Shipyard, extended over a period of six months.

In addition, Mr. Caner was mailed a nine page typewritten business proposal outlining, among many other things, the future location of the fitness center, the square footage, ceiling height, and rent — all pertaining to a building to be erected in the Hingham Shipyard. This information was furnished to Jonathan by Mr. Caner for the expressed purpose of a lease agreement with the proposed Hingham Fitness Center.

Also included in the business proposal mailed to Mr. Caner was an outline of Jonathan's intent to conduct a pre-membership drive in order to present a more promising financial projection prior to finalizing a lease agreement with the Neelon Corporation. Let me state emphatically that NO MONEY WAS COLLECTED FROM POTENTIAL MEMBERS BY MY SON. If Mr. Caner had not abruptly ended all negotiations, any monies collected as a result of a pre-membership drive would have been safely deposited in an escrow account until the center became operational.

The reason for Mr. Caner's abrupt end to lease discussion is not known to us at this time. Any company or individual may terminate negotiations at will, but publishing a news release branding an honest, sincere young man a criminal in an intentional and malicious manner is LIBELOUS. Any newspaper that would inflict perhaps irreparable damage to the reputation of an innocent young member of the community which it purports to serve by publishing such an unsubstantiated news realease is not only unprofessional, callous, and irresponsible, it is STUPID.

The proposed Hingham Fitness Center was not "bogus." My son is not a thief, and there was never any intent to defraud. Jonathan is a young man, who in the pursuit of his dream, was filled with idealism and trust — a trust ruthlessly violated by the Mariner Newspapers.

Yours truly,
Elizabeth M. Davey

Where's the signs?

To the Editor:

Someone has done it again — crashed Hagerty's fence on Atlantic Avenue! Flashing lights and reflectors were operative and ineffective.

When will the town install yellow signs with black arrows.

Sooner or later someone will be killed here.

Wildlife Center offers unique gifts for the holidays

The New England Wildlife Center in Hingham is offering unusual gifts.

A special offering is an instructive video game called "Gone Birding." The playing board contains a map of more than 100 North American "hot spots" for watching birds.

The players join Peter Alden and other naturalists on the "ultimate" birding tour. Along the way, players can actually compete for prizes such as binoculars and natural history trips.

The VCR game (available in BETA and VHS) is for all ages, one to six players, and features hundreds of bird species in "living" color and sound. It contains discount coupons for purchasing related products and services.

Other gift items can turn you into an instant conservationist. A raptor nest constructed of black rattan will attract a variety of hawks and owls. The large basket-like nest comes complete with mounting and placement instructions.

A bat house from Bat Conservation International is back, due to popular demand. New Englanders are discovering the benefits of providing bats with roosts. Bats can consume as many as 500 mosquitos per hour and are environmentally sound. This house resembles a bird house and can easily be mounted on any verticle surface.

Also offered are a variety of books, recordings, bird feeders, cedar bird houses, exclusive NEWC gifts and Center memberships.

For further information and to order, call the Center's office at 749-5387. Proceeds will benefit the private, non-profit Center's wildlife education and rehabilitation programs.

Test results . . .

students were asked various questions, such as the amount of television they watch each day, the amount of time spent on homework, whether the student read for fun during the week, and how they feel about the four subject areas in which they were tested.

An interesting result from Cohasset indicated that the boys scored higher than the girls in the math, science and social studies portion of the test. The girls averaged a higher score than the boys in the reading portion only.

Forty-four percent of the Cohasset students tested stated that they watch one hour or less of television each day. That is in comparison to a 19 percent statewide average.

Another wide variation was found when 83 percent of the Cohasset test-takers said they read almost every day for fun. That was in comparison to 49 percent statewide.

"What we're looking at now," Supt. Hart said, "is to review these results and look for recommendations for any type of modifications that should be made to our curriculum.

"This is just another piece of information for us, along with the SRA's and the Education Resource Bureau tests we give to the students."

Thanks for support

To the Editor:

The Cohasset AFS Club wishes to extend its sincere appreciation to those who have responded to our appeal for financial support.

Your help enables the club to provide assistance to foreign students who live in our community, and to offer scholarships to Cohasset students who travel abroad. We also host area weekends for AFS students living in the region, and long weekends to larger groups of departing AFS'ers from countries throughout the world.

The opportunity for all qualified Cohasset students to participate in exchanges is a goal we continue to reach with your assistance. The AFS experience — here and abroad — narrows the gulf of understanding and acceptance among world cultures.

If you have not yet made a donation (tax deductible), please join now in helping AFS continue its enriching work. Send your contribution to AFS Cohasset, c/o Leo Dwyer, 724C Jerusalem Road, Cohasset. Thank you!

Firefighters acknowledged

To the Editor:

The dramatic installation of Joann Winkler's handmade paper work in the current "CONTEXTURE" exhibition could not have been achieved without the cheerful and capable help of the Cohasset Fire Department's Captain Robert Silva, Bob Protulis and Hap Pompeo. They scaled our 32' ceiling with aplomb. We are most grateful as are the many visitors to the exhibition.

We are also very grateful to these multi-talented men in performing their more traditional duties in early November. Our kiln room overheated and the efficient work by Chief Brock and his men prevented serious damage from the sprinkler system. Cohasset is indeed fortunate to have such a fine Fire Department.

Thanksgiving feast

To celebrate Thanksgiving, the 5th and 6th grade students of the Deer Hill Open Space Classroom held their annual Thanksgiving program and feast.

Students began researching all aspects of Pilgrim life in the 1620's when they went on a field trip to Plimoth Plantation in October. They transformed their classroom into a Pilgrim and Wompanoag Indian village complete with replicas of the Mayflower and Indian huts called wetus (wee tooz). The walls of the classroom were covered with murals depicting interiors of Pilgrim homes or outdoor scenery.

On Monday, Nov. 21, all the other classes at Deer Hill visited the Open Space to hear the presentation. Students, dressed as Pilgrims or Indians, told about their lifestyle and culture in the Plimoth colony.

On Tuesday, the students gave their presentation for parents and relatives, then sat down to a traditional Thanksgiving feast of turkey and all the fixings.

Mr. Shultz and Mrs. Magoun, the teachers of the Open Space room, and Mr. Ekberg, the principal, were also dressed for the occasion in authentic Pilgrim costumes. This was the 12th consecutive year the Open Space has presented this special Thanksgiving program.

Artist of the month

In order to prepare the students at Osgood for their forthcoming trip to see the Nutcracker Ballet, the artist of the month program focused on a project in which the students created a picture that looked like a stain glass window of their favorite character from the Nutcracker. The students used the technique of crayon-resist in which crayon resists watercolor paint in order to create the effect of stained glass.

Many thanks to the teachers who prepared their class by reading the story of the Nutcracker before the volunteers arrived and to the following individuals who went into the classrooms: Martha Equi, Norma Grassie, Patty McCarthy, Retta Dwyer, Kathy Gray, Susan Pyle, Betty O'Sullivan, Karen Devine, Gail Whitehouse, Olga Nohe, Priscilla Sullivan, Kathy Walsh, Monica McKenney, Rose Kahn, Nancy Kinchla, Paula Buick, Janet Lamp, Elaine Coyne, Diana Kinch, Vickie Kennedy, Dayle Dickinson, Pat Baird, DeeDee Nicynski, Janet Amiri, Connie Afshar, Cissy Cullivan, Lindsey Guild, Linda Keller, Liz Bates and Sara Pease.

We are happy to announce that Pat Baird has offered to join Retta Dwyer and Olga Nohe in organizing the program this year. We were delighted with the number of volunteers that helped this month. Some lucky classrooms even had three mothers. This is a great opportunity to see your child's class and everyone is most welcome to participate. If you would like any information, please call Pat Baird (383-6997), Retta Dwyer (6629), or Olga Nohe (1273).

Bubble contest

Bubbles filled the Deer Hill School gym on Wednesday morning Nov. 16, as the sixth grade held a bubble making contest. This was one of a series of contests being held this year designed to improve students' problem solving ability, research skills, and group cooperation.

The teams were made up of three students, one from each of the sixth grade homerooms. Each team had been meeting for three weeks to secretly plan their special bubble-making formula and perfect their designs for their individual bubble launchers.

Prizes were awarded to the following teams:

MOST ORIGINAL LAUNCHER

Jemilah Afshar, Molly Pease and Nicole Vasseur.

LONGEST LASTING

Brendan Kinchla, Jim Magner, Thomas Greco, and Mike O'Hearn.

PRETTIEST

Serena Quemere, Kate Carroll and Amy Silvia.

Fifth grade essays

The following ideas were created by the fifth grade Enrichment Class on the topic: What should George Bush do in the first six months of his presidency?

What I think the next president should do in his first six months of presidency to improve our country is: more homes and shelters for the homeless, more drug rehabilitation centers, and better day care for working mothers.

More homes and shelters for the homeless would change our country. A change for the better. Have you ever walked down the street and seen a tramp sleeping on a bench, or a bag lady fishing through a garbage bin, and thought, "Gee, I wish they didn't have to be like that," or, "I wonder what they were like before whatever happened to them happened to them?" This project could stop your wondering. Thre would be very few people on the streets. Put yourself in a bag lady's shoes, where the only thing you dream about are a good, warm meal and a place to sleep. They are dreaming about these things while perhaps you are in warm, soft, comfortable clothes and stuffing yourself with cookies and hot cocoa. Perhaps you are even fretting about some Christmas present you didn't get. Just think about that!

More drug rehabilitaton centers could change America for the better, too. Teens nowadays take drugs if they are under pressure, or they sell drugs if they need the money and then get hooked. The next president could change that!

Better day care could help working mothers greatly. The appreciation and thanks the next president would receive would make you feel so good. I just wish the president would do something about that!

I hope this could help you change your views a bit. This debate has given me a chance to express my views on life.

While George Bush is in office, I think he should:

1. Lower the Budget Deficit:

a. So that when we grow up the taxes aren't so high you could live off them. Mr. Bush should do this gradually cutting weapon expenses.

2. Have more college funds and educaton funds:

a. So that there are better faculty. Poor kids get a college education by use of these funds. Mr. Bush should do this by implementing a two cent tax on cigarettes nad alcoholic beverages.

3. Inform people about AIDS:

a. So they don't get the AIDS virus and die. He should do this by having the surgeon general put out more information for children and adults on how you can and can't get AIDS.

Ryan Sawchuk

I think the next president should communicate through the use of a fax machine, and representatives from every town or country. These representatives could meet in Washington, D. C. He should also send questionnaires to people in the U. S. asking what people think of certain issues. The answers would help him run the country.

He should stop homelessness by creating new shelters.

He should get world peace by having more peace conferences, and he should stop arms dealing.

Mr. President please pay attention to these issues!

Simeon Ketchum

George Bush has his work cut out for him in the next four years. Here are a few suggestions that I have made for him.

I think that George Bush should make shelters for the homeless and try to stop illegal drug use. I think that he should also give money to the scientists to try to find a cure for AIDS.

I think that he should try to protect the environment by trying to stop nuclear and toxic waste. I don't really mind the nuclear power plants that are already up, but I don't want them to build any more. Another way that he could protect the environment is to get scientists to try to find a way to make energy out of smoke, instead of having it pollute the air.

I also think that he should make better education where it may be needed.

Finally, I think that he should educate the homeless to provide day care for working parents in special buildings, until the homeless can learn a trade.

Those are some of the issues and approaches that I think that George Bush, as president, should consider.

Michael Kasameyer

Well, I think he should do something about taxes, have a program for the homeless and the people on drugs. I think of these issues first, because I think they are the most important.

For the homeless, I think the president should ask some builders to give up some of their free time to help build a three-story building for the homeless. At this building, the homeless people can stay and live there. On the first story, they can have different programs for people. On the second story, he can have people working for the building to get a small wage each day. On the third floor, he can have an all day care center for the homeless and orphans.

For the people on drugs, I think we should open some more counseling centers so people can try to stop their habit.

The tax situation is another big issue. George Bush says he will not raise taxes, but I ask myself how he will pay our debts? I think he should raise taxes on cigarettes and alcohol, not on wages.

I think the next president should think about these issues and not just use the first idea that comes to him. Please do something for the homeless. It could help us someday too!

Danielle Nohe

I think that in the first six months of his presidency, George Bush should help raise money that charitable associations will use for good causes. For example, the government could find useless old fields where food drives for the hungry could be held, where large restaurants, supermarkets, and individuals could bring their canned goods.

The president could also have programs in which a working mother drops her child or children off at a building in which homeless people help take care of the children, under the supervision of teachers. The homeless will have been carefully screened to check for alcoholism and other mental or emotional problems. The homeless who pass the test would then live in the building at night, using the money which working mothers of the children pay them to buy food and clothes.

The presdient could also help set up programs in which people with no arms or legs paint pictures with their mouths. These paintings would then be sold and the artists would get ten percent of the profits. The other ninety percent would go to a fund for paraplegics. The purchase of the paintings should be tax deductible which would encourage people to buy them.

Lily Faulhaber

The president of the United States of America should make programs that are worth the money spent. For instance, thousands of Vietnam vets are homeless today without a program for the governor or the new president. These people are the ones who did go to Vietnam to fight for the country, despite the fact that war was never declared. The president should have programs for unfortunate people like these, that are sensible so that everyone can benefit from them. The programs shouldn't be some far fetched idea that was inspired by the Sunday sports page.

The federal deficit is another major issue that needs to be addressed by the president. The problem faces the new generation if someone doesn't do something about it now. George Bush has said no more higher taxes. But I ask him where are you going to get the money to pay back the country's debts? He doesn't have to raise taxes so that it would be a dramatic change in many peoples lives, he could raise taxes on cigarettes and alcohol. This is a suggestion that people are talking about, but will he really do something? In conclusion the next president could do wonderful things for our country if he really thought about what must be done, and if he faces the things that face us too.

Curtis estate renovated . . .

families.

"That's the first I ever heard about it," Patrick Plante stated. He was in attendance at the court hearing, as part of a group of town officials and CAC members who expressed their interest in obtaining the property. It was at that hearing that Dorothy Newell, vice president of the Hingham Interfaith Shelter, explained the need for more shelters for local homeless families.

"She talked about families that no one else really thinks about - the guy who is forced to relocate to another job and has to pay first and last month's rent and a security deposit on some expensive apartment in this area. He can't afford to do that, and with no relatives in the area he's forced to bring his family to a shelter until he gets back on his feet. That's the type of help the interfaith shelter provides," Plante recalled.

Plante was impressed with Newell's message, and immediately thought that at least one of the four existing structures on the estate could be rehabilitated while a solution to the Curtis legal problems were being solved.

"I went to Judge (James) Lawton (presiding judge at the Sept. 15 hearing) and asked him for permission to fix up one of the homes for one of Dorothy's families. He told me to talk to the assistant attorney general who was at the hearing, and with the trustees," Plante said. He conferred with them and after a legal agreement was created and signed by the trustees and the shelter agency, Plante began the labor.

For the past several weeks, including fulltime on weekends, Plante, with the help of other local volunteers, has just about completed the major renovation work.

A homeless family could be living there by next week, he predicted.

His first priority was to go to the local boards for permission to renovate the home which was vacated almost a year ago. The most pressing problem, Plante said, is a failing septic system. But after the situation was reviewed by Health Agent Joseph Godzik, whom Plante described as "incredibly helpful and cooperative," the health board agreed that a family could occupy the site temporarily if the system was pumped every other week.

Ross Rosano agreed to empty the tank on that scheduled at no cost.

"It seems that everyone I've met with agrees that we can make a go of this thing," Plante stated.

The former Cohasset High School industrial arts teacher went to Hingham Lumber for building supplies, and owner John McNulty donated everything - roofing materials, sheetrock, carpentry supplies and all the paint Plante needed to brighten up the home.

Among the major repairs was patching a hole in the roof, renovating the kitchen, and rewiring the home. It required time, skill, supplies and money.

After talking to a local member, Plante attended a Cohasset Rotary meeting and asked for money to help install the heating and hot water system at the home. He walked away from that meeting with a donation of $2,000. "They told me, whatever Interfaith needed to get the house back on line," the Jerusalem Road resident said.

Other donations from the community flowed freely. John Lennon of Alco Oil Co. not only donated the installation of a heating system and a hot water tank, he also gave Plante a more-than-adequate set of used kitchen cabinets.

Jim McNamara of Garry Owen Electric, donated his labor costs to wire the electrical fixtures he had given to the shelter. McNamara also put in 220 electrical service and wired a stove that was donated by Cohasset's Taffy Nothnagle.

Troop 228 Boy Scouts, under the supervision of Merle Brown and organized by Windy Hill resident Chris McElroy, spent a weekend at the home, cleaning the interior and exterior. The scouts included Josh Preston, J.C. Parzyck, James Parzyck, Michael Campfield and Derek Edmonds. With a truck donated by Joseph "Skinny" Laugelle, the scouts were able to clean the entire property - filling several truck loads with debris.

Hap Pompeo, a local contractor, volunteered last weekend to locate and excavate the area around the water pipe leading to the home. After the water line was found, Pompeo and Plante also discovered a break. With some assistance from Water Dept. Supt. Ben Curley who was at the water plant last Saturday, the leak was repaired and the Hingham Water Department turned on the water.

"Hap volunteered his help all day long,' Plante noted.

In addition, Kearin "Whitey" Dunn helped Plante with the interior painting. Plante's son, Patrick Jr., assisted with the rough carpentry work.

"At that September court hearing, listening to Dorothy talk about her shelter, I thought what a sin it was to let this home remain vacant," Plante recalled. "It needed some work, but I knew it could be used for some purpose. The major problems were the water and septic system - but those things could be resolved on a temporary basis."

What Plante will always remember is the goodwill that resulted from this community effort.

"Everyone I asked to help said yes - without question. All the town boards, all the businesses, and all the residents. I don't think most people realize the need there is out there for good housing - but once they realize it, they want to help."

Cohasset football team honored by residents

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

Players, cheerleaders, coaches and parents gathered at Hugo's Restaurant last Sunday evening to pay tribute to the just-concluded 1988 Cohasset High School football season.

Moreover, trophies, jackets, plaques and certificates were distributed to the students who participated in the football program. The break-up dinner was coordinated by the Cohasset Football Boosters' Club.

Tri-captain Paul Froio was named the most valuable player for the season. The senior halfback accumulated 1,150 yards on the ground, becoming the fourth consecutive Cohasset runner to gain 1,000 yards in a season. He also received the Thanksgiving Day defensive award due to his team-high nine tackles in a 12-0 loss to crosstown rival Hull. The offensive trophy went to senior fullback Matt Buckley, who rushed for 62 yards on 13 carries against a stingy Hull defense.

Buckley was also honored for the most improved player on the club. In fact, it was quite appropriate since he had just completed his first varsity season.

The best defensive and offensive players throughout the fall campaign were presented to two-way linemen Chris Froio (Paul's twin brother) and Mike Meers.

Head coach Phil Pisano handed out the Coaches Award to both Eric Thierault and Sean McCarthy. The unsung hero went to Pat Conroy.

Conroy was elected as the lone captain for the 1989 football season.

Both Froio brothers and Meers were selected to the South Shore League Small Schools All-Star club. Most importantly, Meers was named to the Divison Four Boston Globe all Scholastic team. The six foot, two inch, 230-pound lineman was recognized as the best offensive center in the Eastern Massachusetts region.

There was no guest speaker at the banquet.

Next week: Cohasset winter sports preview.

Tax refunds unclaimed

The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) has undertaken a wide-ranging effort to locate taxpayers who are owed 1987 tax refunds, according to U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds.

There are nearly 2,500 unclaimed refunds totaling $1.5 million owed to Massachusetts taxpayers alone, Studds said.

To pursue the possibility of a 1987 refund, local residents may call the IRS toll-free at 1-800-424-1040. In an ongoing effort to locate affected Tenth District taxpayers, regional IRS authorities have distributed lists of undelivered refunds to newspapers throughout southeastern Massachusetts.

Taxpayers have a year to claim 1987 refunds. Refunds unclaimed after Jan. 1, 1991 will return to the U.S. Treasury.

Rte. 3A businesses oppose housing plan . . .

wedge into the only remaining business-zoned land left in town. We foresee that if this is approved, more and more developers will come along and try to take our only business-zoned land away for residential purposes."

Sawchuk recalled a recent town meeting petition which called for the rezoning of portion of Rte. 3A from business to residential. The article was defeated after pleas from local businessmen and the Cohasset Chamber members.

"If this is approved, what will stop the 120 residents of Rte. 3A from saying they don't want any more businesses there. They could say, 'let's put out some more petitions to rezone the highway again.' It's just additional pressure on our residential town to keep this a 100 percent bedroom community," Sawchuk argued.

The land proposed by Deck Point for the 128 condomiums is currently zoned for light industry.

"It would be very unfortunate if the town allowed this to cut into our business land. It is zoned for light industry - that land was set aside to create job opportunities."

Other local businesspeople are also unhappy with the proposed residential project.

Bob Roth, general manager of Norfolk Conveyor said locating a housing project next to an industrial company could be "offensive" to future residents.

"I feel we will run the risk of being offensive to the people who will be living next to us," he said.

Norfolk Conveyor has been located at 155 King Street for the past 23 years. The company specializes in the manufacture of light metal fabricated parts, specifically conveyor materials.

"We've always tried to be good neighbors - that's what we want to be," Roth noted. "We certainly don't want to offend anyone. But when you locate residences next door to a company, that's the risk you run."

Although the company is not considered a "noisy" business, the sounds from employees entering and leaving the building, particularly on the 3:30 to midnight shift, might create some unwanted noise in the residential neighborhood, Roth said. There are about 125 employees at Webb-Norfolk Conveyor.

"People might forget we were here first. I think it's like the situation where a person moves next door to the South Shore Music Circus and as soon as the season begins, they complain about the unwanted noise."

John Seavey, owner of Seavey Engineering on King Street labeled his opinion of the project "a tough call. But on balance, I would have to say I'm against this particular project."

The Cohasset resident has long supported the need to build low and moderate income housing in this community.

"I really blow hot and cold on this," he explained. "I support the concept, yet I don't like the density and the location of this particular plan. On balance, I don't think this is a good idea.

"I also don't think it's an appropriate use of land which is zoned for light industry," he continued. "I have been vociferous in the need to use this property for its intended purpose. I feel strongly about having mixed use of land in Cohasset."

Seavey, who has owned the antenna manufacturing company for eight years, has been at the King Street location for the past two years. Previously, he rented space in Webb-Norfolk Conveyor.

He does not foresee any problems with his manufacturing business existing alongside the residences. "But I guess it disturbs me that a developer would want to locate residences so close to businesses. This place will be next door to a commercial dump and the Rte. 3A businesses. They'll have to barb wire the entire project. I see Deck Point literally as some fenced - in ghetto, and that bothers me."

Chamber director Sawchuk noted that the business community's concerns are not the legalities which the zoning board must consider in its Deck Point deliberations.

"But what kind of a place will this be to raise children? Lousy," he answered. The Chamber board of directors are a diverse group, he noted, encompassing local business owners, residents, non residents and all types of professions.

"We all could foresee a lot of problems with this development," he continued. Among those problems is a limited amount of open, recreational space.

"Webb-Norfolk Conveyor is going to be right next to them," he noted. "They have been there for years without notice, out of site and out of mind. You put 128 people next door and they're going to start demanding things."

Regarding the units of affordable housing to be set aside in the project, Sawchuk noted, "it's only 12 units. Believe me, they're not trying to do this project to help out a lot of unfortunate people.

"The Chamber is not looking to prevent low and moderate income housing from coming into Cohasset. We simply object because it's going to use up a resource for a non-intended purpose. It's going to hurt the future of planned commercial development in this town."

A look at the first Minot's Lighthouse tragedy

By David Wadsworth
Special to the Mariner

One of the most tragic mishaps in the history of lighthouses in the United States was the collapse, during a great storm in 1851, of the first Minot's Ledge Lighthouse just off Cohasset's shores.

Originally constructed to warn mariners away from the dangerous "Cohasset Rocks" the first Minot's was a structure some 70 feet in height, having its Keeper's quarters and its great oil lanterns supported by nine tall iron legs called "piles." The first Minot's Ledge Lighthouse first showed its powerful beacon on January 1, 1850. Its first Keeper was Isaac Dunham, a veteran of the lighthouse service. Keeper Dunham, however, was to remain at Minot's for only a short time. A few months later he submitted his resignation from duty at the light. Dunham had become convinced that the new structure was not strong enough to withstand fierce Atlantic storms that sweep the low-lying ledge, and that the tower was destined to be destroyed by the sea.

The Keeper feared for his life at Minot's Ledge Light. Dunham's successor, Capt. John Bennett, was on shore in mid-April of 1851 when a great storm, now called "The Lighthouse Gale," struck the New England coast. At the lighthouse were two Assistant Keepers, Joseph Antoine and Joseph Wilson of Cohasset. During the days of April 15 and 16 the storm worsened, driving high winds and mountainous seas against the entire coastline. It was the most severe storm seen in many years, and watchers ashore, including Head Keeper Bennett, began to fear for the safety of the two men isolated at Minot's Ledge Lighthouse some two and one half miles at sea. By nightfall of the 16th watchers ashore observed that the lighthouse appeared to have developed a pronounced tilt to one side, then darkness obscured the view.

Suddenly, at about 1 a.m. of the 17th, Minot's great fog bell was heard "clanging furiously, then no more." Morning presented a grim scene to the watchers, for no trace of the lighthouse was to be seen. Minot's Ledge was bare, washed by the raging sea. During that night the lighthouse had been swept into the ocean, and its two Keepers had perished while trying to swim ashore. Strangely, the tragic collapse of Minot's Light set in motion a train of events which leads modern historians to the small village of Bryant Pond, Maine. For there, in the bell tower of a small white painted New England church building, today hangs the same bell that fell into the sea on that stormy night in 1851, off Cohasset's shore.

Soon after the appalling disaster at Minot's Ledge, salvage divers, under the command of one Peter Fox, a professional diver described only as being "a Scandinavian," raised the wreckage of the lighthouse from the bottom of the sea. It may have been Fox's crew that salvaged the sunken bell and took it ashore, where it was to be sold at a Government auction. That first fog bell at Minot's Ledge had been placed in service only six months earlier, in October of 1850, and its weight was recorded as being 639 pounds. The announcement of installation of the bell appeared in a "Notice To Mariners" dated October 26 of that year. Old accounts of the Lighthouse Establishment give the cost of the bell as $172.53, and of its installation as $77.25.

At a Government auction held in Boston the bell from Minot's Ledge was purchased by a Mr. Dwight Francis Faulkner of Turner, Maine, prominent owner of a large woolen mill. Faulkner placed the old lighthouse bell in the bell-tower of his mill in Turner, where for half a century it rang to call mill workers to their job each morning. By 1905 ownership of the Faulkner mill had passed to Dwight Faulkner's son Francis T. Faulkner. On Sunday morning, September 3, 1905 the Faulkner woolen mill was totally destroyed in a disasterous fire which left the small Maine community without its sole important industry. Millowner Francis Faulkner himself discovered the fire and rang the bell from Minot's to summon the help of townspeople. Soon after, Faulkner became trapped by flames and perished while fighting the spreading conflagration. At its height the fire reached the mill's bell tower and the old lighthouse bell fell to the ground for a second time.

In its fall from the mill's tower the bell itself was severely damaged, its top broken apart. Following the fire the fog bell was salvaged, this time by Francis Faulkner's daughter Mrs. Anna Faulkner Chase.

The bell that had "tolled for two tragedies," first at Minot's Ledge then at Faulkner's mill, soon was restored to its original size and shape, ready to ring again. In about 1907 Mrs. Anna F. Chase presented the bell to the Baptist Church in the nearby village of Bryant Pond, Maine, in memory of her father who had died during the fire at the mill. Inscribed on the bell was a brief history indicating its origin at Minot's and its use at Faulkner's mill. The old fog bell now called Parishioners to Services each week, ringing from the belfry of the church building. As an ironic postscript to the air of tragedy which seemed to accompany those associated with the bell in its early years, not long after its presentation, another member of the Faulkner family met an untimely demise. In May 1912 Francis T. Faulkner's son Osborne Faulkner, a prominent Lewiston, Maine sports writer, drowned while "shooting the rapids" during a sporting trip on the Androscoggin River at Turner Center Bridge. Since that time, however, the much-traveled bell appears to have settled into a more placid existence in its Bryant Pond belfry, where it hangs today. The citizens of that small community know the story of their church bell, and have recorded its history. Some years ago the bell's story became known to a Cohasset resident, the late Dr. Theodore Badger, whose grandfather, Erastus B. Badger, had been the coppersmith for the construction of the 2nd lighthouse at Minot's Ledge during the latter 1850's. It was Dr. Badger who gathered much of the information presented herein.

More recently several Cohasset residents have visited Bryant Pond to view and to ring the historic fog bell that began its long service nearly 140 years ago at storm-buffeted Minot's Ledge just off Cohasset's shore.

Abutters express concerns about cemetery process was finished.

They suggested that other sites might be better suited and ultimately less expensive to develop, than the former school-owned land.

They complained that this proposal, like the affordable housing proposal approved this week, is placed before town meeting where a majority of residents will decide to approve it.

The cemetery committee spent $2,500 on a consultant who recommended the school-owned site. But both residents said a complete cost-analysis of the sites could not be accomplished with that amount of money.

"The question is," Kidder stated, "is this the best site and how is that determined with $2,500 and by walking the sites once or twice?"

Jerz noted that the time for engineers to study the property and determine whether the site is cost-effective, is before the committee appears before town meeting for engineering money.

"I'm at the point now where I've had it with the whole thing," Jerz commented. "The root cause of the problem is that the town allocated only $2,500 to do this (preliminary study). I know how much it costs (to complete a study) for a $1 million job, and it's not $2,500."

Other open space sites, such as the nine-acre Hayes property on Rte. 3A near Beechwood Street was ruled out because it was considered too small for the town's future cemetery needs, Pratt explained.

After comparing the size of the two sites, Kidder noted, "if we solve the problem for 78 years rather than 100 years, isn't that reasonable?"

The current proposal calls for a 5,000 plot cemetery on 14 cares of land. Considering the town uses an average of 50 burial plots each year, the former school property site could be utilized for 100 years, Pratt explained.

Currently, there is virtually no burial plots remaining in Cohasset, although some families who purchased a groups of plots forty years ago have yet to use them all, Pratt explained. A town regulation does not allow owners to return those unused plots to the town.

Some residents suggested that more emphasis should be placed on finding those unused plots and asking residents to release them.

Pratt said it is only part of larger problem dealing with management of the town cemeteries. "We will go to the cemetery commissioners (selectmen) and say, 'we don't think you have the time, but someone has to manage this situation and start getting more revenue than we are getting now. More emphasis should be placed on getting these unused graves back.' I think they should get off the commission and appoint a new commission and think about what will be changed and work on getting those plots back. But it's a question of whether they'll accept our recommendation," he said.

Pratt emphasized that the meeting was scheduled so residents could voice their concerns about the current proposal. Changes to the development will likely be made before the committee begins its formal site plan hearings before a variety of town boards, including the planning , zoning and health boards and the conservation commission, as well as the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering.

Several residents, including Gerry Deveney of Pleasant Street, complained about the proposed access from Pleasant Street and Pleasant Lane, and the problem of increased traffic of trucks, and funeral corteges in a heavily residential neighborhood.

Other residents, including Joe Perroncello of Pleasant Street said residents would oppose the plan without an increased buffer between the cemetery and their property lines. Pratt agreed the buffer should be expanded and said that consideration would be reviewed by the cemetery committee.

The committee chairman was not greatly concerned with the drainage problems the residents felt would increase with the cemetery development. "That's an engineering concern" he said, which would be addressed when the proposal proceded to that point.

One resident suggested that an access be developed at the end of the South Shore Music Circus parking lot. Sohier Street, he said, is a much wider street than Pleasant Lane and could accommodate the stacking of vehicles waiting to get into a cemetery during a funeral.

"Perhaps Pleasant Street and Pleasant Lane is not the best solution," Pratt stated. "I think we ought to look at access from Sohier Street - probably on the lower side of the parking lot, not on the crest of the hill."

At the conclusion of the meeting, Pratt said he considered the buffer issue a valid concern, as well as residents' suggestion that the Pleasant Lane entrance be blocked off at night. "I also wonder if we're on track about the entrance on Pleasant Lane," Pratt said. "I'm not opposed to going to the Playhouse Associates (trustees of the Music Circus) about an access there."

The cemetery committee was scheduled to meet Wednesday, Dec. 7 with the planning board.

Students are learning by pushing buttons and watching lights flash. They're becoming personally involved in obtaining vital information on energy through varied and sophisticated technologies.

They're learning about electricity and magnetism, about home energy savings, about supplying electricity — about the many ways electricity shapes their lives, including the very computers they're working on!

Offering computer software to schools is just one of the many free educational services programs Eastern Edison provides. Voters approve contract, despite warning

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

Town meeting voted Monday night to appropriate $189,422.20 towards a three-year contract with the firefighters union.

But the advisory committee chairman cautioned that approving the transfer of funds from free cash will necessitate an override of Proposition 2½ for the next fiscal year.

"You must be ready to vote an override or accept drastic cuts in services," said advisory chairman Jane Goedecke.

"Police and fire can't be cut if an override fails."

Goedecke explained that the figure represents some $62,000 for obligations under the fiscal 1988 contract, and some $120,000 for fiscal 1989.

"The advisory committee recommends approval," she said.

"We feel the firefighters negotiated in good faith.

"Originally, we had hoped all of this could be funded through an override vote, but the state would not allow it.

"So it must be paid through free cash.

"We will then be below $2,000 if this is funded.

"It has never happened in my memory.

"There will be no free cash to spend until next August. There will be no free cash at the next annual meeting."

Goedecke said that each successive year of the contract must be raised from taxes.

The contract will cost some $251,000 in 1990, she said.

"It becomes almost a foregone conclusion that the override will be necessary," she said.

Goedecke also said that minimum manning is in the hands of the union, not the chief or selectmen.

"We strongly urge at town meeting that selectmen resume control of minimum manning," she said.

Goedecke also requested a secret ballot.

Charles Douglas, chairman of the personnel board, said that the contract represents a 26 percent increase over the three years.

He said that Cohasset firefighters are paid some 8 to 9 percent less than their counterparts in other communities.

"If you deduct that, it is a 17-18 percent increase, or about 6 percent a year," he said.

"They'll still be slightly behind in the salaries paid in other communities," he said.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle disagreed with the secret ballot.

"I feel the hall is not stacked," he said.

"By no means is it stacked tonight."

Fire Chief Daniel Brock explained that the 26 percent increase breaks down to 9 percent the first year, 5 percent and 4 percent, in two steps the second year, and 4 percent and 4 percent the third year.

"We'll begin to catch up with the surrounding towns," he said.

John O'Toole of Linden Drive asked why it took so long to reach an agreement.

Douglas said that negotiations started prior to the expiration of the contract in June, 1987.

"There didn't seem an urgency on the part of the fire department," he said.

"This just took longer than expected.

"There was no animosity; they were very reasonable.

Douglas also said that the contract negotiations ended up in mediation.

"The changes were not substantive," he said.

Robert Davenport of Sohier St. asked whether an override would be necessary if the contract agreement were not approved. He also asked that there not be a secret ballot.

Goedecke said, "We will still have a hard time avoiding an override (if the contract were not approved.)

"It will be touch and go all the way.

"We have hit the wall and we are going to have to deal with this every year.

"If the fire contract passes, there is no way we can avoid an override."

"The firemen are underpaid," agreed Kevin O'Donnell of Fair Oaks Lane.

"But I can't see wiping out the free cash to make the contract retroactive."

O'Donnell asked that both sides be sent back to the contract table for a "fair agreement."

A secret ballot was defeated 134-148 in a hand count.

The contract was then approved on a voice vote.

Town meeting votes on 14 articles

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

Almost 300 people came out on a wintry night to vote on 14 warrant articles during the special town meeting Dec. 5 at Cohasset High School's auditorium.

They took the following action during the meeting which lasted just over two hours:

- Approved a resolution submitted by Emmet Holt of Highland Ave. opposing the dockominium development proposed by Oaks Realty Trust, formerly the Cox Estate.

"We urge selectmen, state legislators and town committees to take whatever steps are legally necessary to ensure defeat of the development," he said.

Moderator William Weeks pointed out that the resolution is not binding on the community.

- Unanimously agreed to pay $237.50 for an unpaid medical bill to MGH Professional Services Corp. incurred during the 1985 fiscal year.
- Unanimously approved the payment of $40,794.18 for unpaid bills for the fiscal 1988 year.
- Defeated a petition to the general court to enact legislation that would create a municipal housing authority.

"You might say it would be home rule rather than state rule," said Planning Board member John O'Toole.

Housing authority member Fred Koed said, "We cannot afford this duplication of the Cohasset Housing Authority."

The same article was defeated last year as well.

- Agreed to indefinitely postpone an article regarding increased density-affordable housing.

Planning Board member Al Moore explained that the article was related to the municipal housing authority proposal.

- Unanimously approved the transfer of $6,975 towards the purchase of a new van for the Council on Aging.

It will replace one destroyed by fire last summer.

The rest of the money will come from an insurance settlement.

- Agreed to indefinitely postpone an article which would ban the use of jet skis in Little Harbor or Cohasset Harbor.
- Agreed to indefinitely postpone an article which would transfer funds to acquire or construct a shower and lavatory facility for the Wastewater Treatment Plant.
- Unanimously adopted amended definitions for private boat docks and marina.

Private boat dock will mean a single dock for the private use of the owner of the land on which it is constructed, located such that it will not adversely affect the property of the abutters.

Marina will mean docks, including without limitation, so-called dockominiums and/or mooring facilities that are rented, licensed or leased on a short or long-term basis.

"Part of the $41,000 from the previous article which was withdrawn will be covered by the $80,000," explained health board member William Baird.

He also said the transfer station will not be completed until April.

Unique print exhibit at art center

"The Art of the Unique Print," the first international joint exchange travelling exhibit of works by Australian and American monotype/monoprint artists, including South Shore Art Center artist Berj Kailian, opens at the Center on December 1.

The Center, at 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset, is one of four East Coast locations selected for exhibiting this joint effort by the Monotype Guild of New England Inc. and the Glyde Gallery in Mosman Park, Western Australia.

Fox is a lithographer who works with artists to produce monoprints. His artistic collaborations have included such artists as David Hockney, Saul Stinberg, Carol Emilia, Arthur Polonsky and many others. He most recently did an artist book for Sylvia Edwards, Portraits, and Daniel Owen Stolpe, Coyote Now. He was the producer of a five-day print expo, World Art Exposition, in Boston. He also teaches at the Boston Museum School.

Kailian's work is among works by 45 artists selected to participate in this exhibit, a venture undertaken to promote understanding and appreciation of the art of the unique print within the two cultures and to provide an opportunity for the interchange of ideas and techniques between Australian and American artists. The exhibit along with Fox's lecture will help define the idea of the unique print in terms of monoprinting/monotyping. The exhibit establishes the unique print as a thrilling and new visual art adventure for the art collector.

"Art of the Unique Print" runs concurrently with "Contexture," a multi-media exhibit of 12 New England artists working in different media. Both exhibits continue through December 23.

The Center is open to the public Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Saturday, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Programs of the Center are supported in part by a grant from the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities, a state agency.

Women and finances booklet available

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray distributed a booklet entitled, "$Money Matters$ A Booklet for Older Women and Finances: A Guide to Resources."

"The booklet will be available at the libraries in my district—Cohasset, Hingham and Hull," she stated.

It was compiled by Massachusetts Office of Women's Issues.

Rep. Murray quoted the introduction which is explicit as an explanation of the vast need for such a guide.

"Older women in the Commonwealth constitute a growing segment of the population. Their concerns and needs are special ones. Recognizing the importantce of addressing crucial issues such as finances, health care, and housing for this population, the Office on Women's Issues is developing a series of handbooks.

"The message from our valuable network of advocates and service providers for the older community is clear: the lack of centralized information geared toward older women is a continual frustration. This guidebook, then, is offered to help alleviate that problem. The selection of "finances" as our first guidebook topic reflects the concern with economic difficulties that exists, particularly for older women.

"The financial problems that older women face reflect the economic difficulties that women in general experience throughout their lives. Women still earn less than men, despite equivalent experience and education. The majority of part-time employment is performed by women, which often translates to low wages, no benefits, and no pension or retirement plans. As women are the primary caretakers of our young and old, they often disrupt or delay their careers. Such disruption may decrease their Social Security and other retirement funds, such as pension plans.

"In Massachusetts, women comprise 62 percent of those over 65 and 73 percent of the age 85+ population. The median annual income for older women is $4,149—older women account for 74.10 percent of the Commonwealth's poor elderly. In addition to having financial difficulties, many older women must handle their own affairs: 40.6% of older women live alone. For those who are not alone, other problems surface. For although most married households are comprised of two earners, Medicaid, Medicare and Social Security benefits are often based upon the traditional family model: the man as primary earner and the woman as homemaker. If one spouse is hospitalized or institutionalized, current laws require that the community spouse must "spend down" the couple's joint earnings. This may ultimatley result in both family members needing financial assistance: the community spouse becomes impoverished while depleting joint assets, and the institutionalized spouse almost always requires more care than the community spouse can afford.

"Divorce is often another traumatic reality for older women. Many women are unprepared for the difficult financial decisions which they must make, for the first time, as single divorced people.

"With these challenges to economic security, older women are faced with a need to be educated and assisted in financial matters. This resource guide outlines the steps for financial planning. The initial sections focus on pre-retirement planning, including the need for compilation of records and preparation of a budget. The remaining sections of this guide include a list of some of the resources available.

"While information included is most specific for the Greater Boston area, a statewide general information number or contact office is also included for each service.

"The information in this guide is intended to assist individuals in their planning process and should not be construed as legal advice."

For further details, pick up the guide book at the Cohasset, Hingham or Hull libraries.

Assistance to elders about HMO's

Elder Affairs Secretary Paul J. Lanzikos offered to help elders assess their health insurance options because of the cancellation of federal Medicare risk contracts by five Health Maintenance Organizations (HMOs).

"Because the Reagan Administration has shortchanged funding for HMOs, more than 13,000 elders in Massachusetts must now choose other arrangements for their health coverage," Lanzikos said. Nationally, 34 HMOs are cancelling their contracts with the federal government to serve Medicare beneficiaries.

The contracts will end December 31, 1988. Three of the HMOs in Massachusetts are offering their members an alternative program to continue receiving their health care through the HMO. They are Tufts Associated Health Plan, Central Massachusetts Health Care, and the Capital Area Health Plan in Pittsfield. These HMOs will continue to offer their current members a different financing arrangement by offering benefits that supplement the regular Medicare coverage. Elders will pay a higher premium under the new arrangements, but it is less than the premiums that would have been charged had the HMOs kept their contracts.

Lanzikos said that a law passed in Massachusetts last year will help elders who want other options. The law allows elders to automatically convert to the Medex program with no lapse in coverage and without waiting for the next open enrollment period if they want to leave the HMO.

All the new plans are subject to review and approval by the state Division of Insurance, which regulates the HMOs.

The other two HMOs that have cancelled their Medicare risk contracts are the Berkshire Health Plan in Pittsfield and the Montachusetts Health Plan in Fitchburg.

Lanzikos said he was generally pleased with the commitment of the HMOs to develop alternative coverage for their members and noted that the federal government has to improve payments for HMOs if this health option is to survive in the future.

Elders who want more information about the impact of the changes and their options should call their local Councils on Aging to see if there is a SHINE health benefits counselor there to assist them; or contact Kathy Glenzel at the Executive Office of Elder Affairs, 1-800-882-2003; 617-727-6036 or TTY, 1-800-872-0166.

Studds offers guide to pension

A new federal guide to pension plans is now available.

Since the first private pension plan was established in 1875, pensions have become a significant source of retirement income for most working Americans. Today there are more than 834,000 plans across the country covering nearly 54 million workers.

The new pension guide, "Your Pension," details basic facts about the operation of employer-sponsored pensions. The pamphlet is published by the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation, the federal agency which insures most private pension plans.

"The retiree on Cape Cod, the clothing worker in New Bedford, and the engineer on the South Shore — all of us need to understand the pensions on which we stake so much of our retirement security," Congressman Gerry Studds said. "This booklet lays out the fundamentals in a concise, highly readable manner."

The 24-page primer explains provisions common to all pension plans, such as vesting, survivor benefits, and pension funding and insurance. "Your pension" also describes how pension benefits are calculated and paid in most plans, and what to do if your plan is terminated. It includes a handy checklist of questions for plan participants and spouses to review.

Congressman Studds is offering copies of "Your Pension" free-of-charge to Tenth District residents.

The booklets are available through his offices in New Bedford (999-1251), Pembroke (826-3866), , or Hyannis (771-0666).

Christmas concert

Each year it has been the distinct pleasure of the men of the South Shore Men of Harmony to entertain the students, staff and guests at the Cardinal Cushing School and Training Center in Hanover by singing Christmas Carols to and with the children.

Once again the carols will ring along with regular barbershop melodies Tuesday evening, Dec. 13 at 7:30 p.m.

Of all the numerous programs given by Division IVs Championship chorus each year, this one with the children is decidedly a favorite as they blend their voices singing "Silent Night" and other yuletide songs.

There is no charge for admission to this program.

The chorus is under the direction of/Phil Carter of Hingham.

Antique gowns on display

Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Dec. 8 to 10, are the days of the Cohasset Historical Society Costumes Committee's special showing of unusual antique gowns for the festive season. Hours of the event are 2 to 5 p.m.

More than a dozen 19th century gowns from the Historical Society's extensive collection have been chosen for this special exhibit. Members of the Costumes Committee will be on hand, and refreshments will be served. Costumes are being exhibited in the setting of the 1821 Caleb Lothrop House, the Society's headquarters on Summer Street, Cohasset. Decorations for this Christmas season exhibit have been provided by the Community Garden Club of Cohasset and the Amateur Garden Club of Cohasset.

Be sure to visit the Historical Society Gown Committee's exhibit this week, for a chance to see some of the many fine and unique costumes and accessories in the Society's collection of costumes donated by Cohasset residents. A donation of $4 is asked of those visiting.

Men of Harmony rehearsals

The South Shore Men of Harmony meet every Thursday at 8:15 p.m. to sing Barbershop music at the Hingham Community Center, 70 South St., Hingham.

Any male, young or old, interested in joining in the camaraderie and singing pleasure to be enjoyed is invited and encouraged to drop in.

Many of the members do not read music, so don't let that keep you away.

All you need is a love of music and to be able to carry a tune.

For information, call either Al Lundgren at 749-3171, Jerry Diegel at 545-9176 or Joe De Castro at 837-2463.

Recreation dept. offers dog obedience classes

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for beginner and intermediate dog training classes to be taught by Laurie Cleveland.

Classes will be held Wednesday evenings at the GAR Hall in Scituate, beginning January 11, 1989.

Beginner classes will be from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., and the intermediate/advanced class will be from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. on Wednesday evenings.

The fee for the eight-week program will be $25. Checks, made payable to the Town of Cohasset, may be brought to the first class January 11. Dogs should be a minimum of three months of age.

The purpose of beginner classes is to teach novice pet owners basic obedience and responsible pet ownership. Subjects to be covered are proper use of voice corrections, stay commands, getting the dog to come, heel, etc. Helpful hints on ownership and responsibility will also be included. The training will include exercises beneficial to every pet owner, as well as those who are thinking about showing their dogs in obedience.

The Intermediate/advanced class is designed for dogs that have completed the Recreation Department Beginner class.

Owners are required to have their dogs equipped with a humane choke chain. The proper size of the chain is determined by measuring the dog's neck and adding four inches. Absolutely no spike collars allowed. It is also suggested that handlers wear comfortable shoes and clothes for this session.

To register, call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791.

Classes are limited in size and non-residents will be accepted on a space available list.

Oaks owners to revise plan

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The owners of The Oaks called for a "pause" in the deliberations over their plans to place 109 private boat slips around the Cohasset Harbor property.

The conservation commission, which was in the midst of public hearings on the plan, has agreed to grant a general continuance to the owners.

In the meantime, Oaks Realty Trust has instructed its engineers to modify the plan "to address specific concerns recently raised by the Harbor Committee and other matters that have come to our attention," Atty. Paul Feldman stated in a letter to the commission last week. Feldman is representing Oaks Realty Trust.

"The reaction was quite strong. And all that caused us to pause until we can decide how to proceed."

Atty. Paul Feldman

Michael Palmer, a principal of Oaks Realty Trust, did not return telephone calls from the Mariner.

Among their concerns, Feldman noted, was a resolution approved at last week's special town meeting in which an overwhelming majority of residents voiced objection to the current Oaks plan.

The resolution, initiated by Emmet Holt of Highland Avenue, urged local and state officials to "take whatever steps are legally necessary to Questions arise over local liquor licenses

Although some people don't like it, one-day liquor licenses are still handed out on a regular basis.

The disagreement is whether these one-day license holders should be charged $600 for a club license, and be subjected to the same local and state regulations as other profit-making organizations in town.

Opponents say alcohol should not be used as a drawing card for community events. They worry that local non-profit organizations do not have adequate insurance coverage in the event of an alcohol-related incident.

Other people argue that establishments such as the Cohasset Community Center, could not exist without the one-day events. Although some say the non-profit organization should not schedule so many licensed events, the center's director says these activities help keep the facility afloat.

Judy Volungis, director of the community center, said the six licensed events they have held thus far this year have helped the center reduce its mortgage balance.

When the center leases space to an organization for an event, all money made from the sale of alcohol is given to the community center's mortgage fund.

"The organization we rent to makes a profit from their ticket price. We make the money from the liquor they sell," Volungis stated. "And the only way we can sell liquor is if we have a license."

On several occasions, Selectman Burt Pratt has voiced his objections to the one-day licenses. The board of selectmen are the licensing authority in Cohasset. This week, Pratt was the only selectman to vote against issuing one-day licenses to the community center for two upcoming events.

Christmas business

Merchants say: 'it's good so far'

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

Most Cohasset merchants report that business is bustling so far this holiday season.

"We're very pleased so far," said June Stonier, who with her husband, Will, owns the Red Balloon toy store at 35 South Main St.

"Business has picked up," she said.

"So far, we are having a good holiday season.

"We're a toy store, and we do a great business at Christmas."

Stonier reported that baby dolls are selling well this year.

"We're over the Cabbage Patch craze," she said.

"People are interested in more traditional kinds of toys.

"They are more back to basics."

Other popular items, she said, are Brio Train sets and Playmobiles.

"They're like Legos with figures with them," she explained.

Stonier noted that customers seem to be coming from farther distances to shop in Cohasset.

She also said that merchants do about a fourth of their business at the holidays.

"At least a quarter of their business," she said.

Philip Smith, owner of the Shops at Smith Place, said business is good, but that his is not really a seasonal business.

"In my case, most of my business is for the home with items such as vases, decorative things and furniture," he said.

Selectmen stand with neighbors against project

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Unlike the housing partnership committee which last week endorsed the plan, selectmen have taken a firm stand against the proposed 60-unit Crystal Woods townhouse development off Brewster Road.

To the applause of about 50 appreciative abutters, selectmen voted Monday night not to support the developer's application for state Homeownership Opportunity Program (HOP) funding for the project.

The developer, Jack Hurley Jr. of Crystal Land Development Corp., is seeking a comprehensive permit from the state which will allow him to bypass some local zoning and health regulations. In return, Hurley will provide 17 market-rate units, at about $75,000 each, within the development.

Two selectmen, James Gallagher and Burt Pratt, expressed their unwavering opposition to the state's comprehensive permit process. Pratt read a prepared statement in which he declared, "I will vote against all comprehensive permits in this community."

"I'm scared to death about these permits," Gallagher said, adding that the town is fulfilling its obligation to provide affordable housing by constructing 12 units on former school-controlled land off Rte. 3A. That development proposed by the housing authority was supported last week by a vote of special town meeting.

The planning board, represented Monday night by Al Moore and Robert Sturdy, also voiced their strong objections to the plan. Their arguments were accompanied by statements made by several neighbors who also oppose the project.

It was the housing partnership committee which alone stood in favor of the development. Chairman Israel Sanchez and member Chartis Langmaid asked selectmen to approve the project as their committee had last week, attaching to that approval a list of conditions to be met by the developer.

Cohasset's week . . .

New office hours for Golden

Senator William B. Golden (D-Weymouth) recently announced his new district office hours for 1989. Senator Golden and/or Susan Phippen, an administrative aide to the Senator, will be available at the following times to consult locally with town officials and residents:

First Wednesday of the Month (beginning January 4)
At Hingham Town Hall — 10:30 - 12:00
At Hull Town Hall — 12:30 - 2:00
At Cohasset Town Hall — 2:30 - 4:00

Second Wednesday of the Month (beginning Dec. 14)
At Duxbury Town Hall — 10:30 - 12:00
At Marshfield Town Hall — 12:30 - 2:00
At Scituate Town Hall — 2:30 - 4:00

Third Wednesday of the Month (beginning Dec. 21)
At Weymouth Town Hall — 12:30 - 2:30

Phippen is Senator Golden's administrative assistant at large. She is responsible for coordinating Senator Golden's office hours in the district at local town halls. In addition, Susan is responsible for meeting with constituents locally, being a local liaison with Golden's office who allows the Senator to be most effective at responding to constituent opinions and needs.

Phippen grew up in Michigan and was educated at Adrian College. She moved to Scituate in 1980 and quickly became active in the community. Phippen became a member of the Conservation Commission in 1981, and is also currently active with the Public Buildings Commission, the Animal Shelter Study Committee, and the Town Election Committee.

Constituents are encouraged to make use of these local office hours and to contact the Senator's office at 722-1646 at all other times with any concerns they may have.

Architect's list

Donham & Sweeney, architects for the town hall addition, recently forwarded a list of services it will provide at no cost to the town, as well as services for which it would need to be paid.

The list was requested at a Dec. 3 meeting with the selectmen, building committee, executive secretary and building inspector.

Services to be provided at no cost to the town according to Brett Donham are:

- A final inspection of the completed work;
- A certification that the work has been completed in accordance with the contract documents;
- A certification that to the best of my knowledge and belief, construction has been completed in accordance with the Massachusetts Building Code;
- Oversee the contractor's replacement of the brick sidewalk;
- Oversee the repairs to the roofleak;
- Consolidate the punch lists, adding the selectmen's and building inspector's list to the architect's list;
- Oversee and pay for the replacement window sash;
- Follow-up letters and memos from meeting with town officials.

However, Donham said that the following charges would be made if requested by the town:

- Inspections/site visits with follow-up memos, $250 per visit;
- Establish monetary value of punch list, $100;
- Secure from contractor and review all warrantees, guarantees, release of liens, consent of surety, $200;
- Review and approval of record drawings, $300;
- Review and approval of contractor's invoices, $100 per invoice;
- Meetings with town officials, $250 per visit.

At the Dec. 3 meeting, the town had agreed to install light fixtures over the ramp itself, and to have the prison trustees paint the replacement sash, thereby saving $1,400.

Donham & Sweeney will pay for furnishing and installing the replacement sash.

Dog complaint investigated

Executive secretary Gregory J. Doyon has asked Dog Officer William Quigley to investigate a dog complaint and report back to him by Thursday, Dec. 15.

Eleanor C. Sandberg of Locust Rd., Cohasset, said she was walking down South Main St. recently heading toward North Scituate when "a very vicious dog came running out of the yard barking and showing his teeth and growling and came right at me.

"He grabbed me by the leg and only the fact that I had heavy slacks on saved me from having the skin broken, but it did leave deep teeth marks on my leg and my leg is still sore.

"Needless to say, I was almost paralyzed with fear and for a moment couldn't move.

"I attempted to cross the street and the dog started coming after me still snarling and showing his teeth.

"Finally, after what seemed like an eternity, I managed to get away and went and rang the bell at the Thaxter residence to find the people's name (who own the dog).

"They told me it was Curley, and they thought the first name was Jack."

Sandberg said that she reported the incident to the police, who in turn called the animal control officer.

"The animal control officer called me for details and then said to me, 'there's nothing I can do because there is no leash law in town, you will just have to change your direction of walking.' "

"Now I have to walk every day due to health reasons," said Sandberg, "mainly back surgery, and I don't feel that as a taxpayer in this town that I should have to be limited to where I can walk in town due to someone owning a vicious dog.

"After this experience, I could not stop shaking for hours after it happened, and it is something I would not care to encounter again," she said.

Quigley is to respond with verification of the owner and breed, any reports or complaints concerning this dog in the past 12 months, and recommendations.

Landfill holiday schedule

The Cedar Street solid waste disposal facility will be closed Sunday, Dec. 25 and Jan. 1.

The landfill will be open during its regular hours of 7:30 to 3:30 Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday during the holiday season.

This means the landfill will be open Dec. 26 and Jan. 2.

Oaks plan to be revised . . .

ensure defeat of the development."

Feldman noted, "when we read in the newspapers about the meeting vote to oppose the development, it obviously caused us to evaluate which way we should proceed."

He continued, "we think something positive will come of the development of the Oaks, if we are able to have some meaningful dialogue with the town. But our attempts have not worked so far. We'd still like to have that dialogue."

Oaks Realty Trust has applied for a notice of intent with the local conservation commission. The commission has held three hearings on the matter, and requested additional information after the last meeting in November.

Rather than return once again with the same plan, the owners have requested that their engineers revise the project. It may take several weeks, Feldman warned the commission in his December 6 letter. But the goal is to create a proposal that will be acceptable to the owners and the town, he added.

In the meantime, the original plan for the 109 boat slips is still on the table, Feldman said.

The wide separation between the developers and the town may have been caused by misunderstanding by both sides, the attorney explained. In particular, the developers' offer to give the town the 58-room mansion in exchange for the boat slip approval has been misconstrued, he said.

"We're trying to say we can present a proposal that we understand will achieve some municipal goals while providing the private developer what he wants without screwing up a very valuable resource in this town - its harbor," the attorney stated.

This process was strated when the owners requested a plan that would place the uplands portion of the property under municipal ownership, along with an adjacent municipal parking area and some public docks in the harbor.

"The owners instructed their engineers to come up with that plan - something that would not impact negatively on the environment. We're sensitive to that. There's no way we're going to get local, state and federal approval for this development if we damage the environment," Feldman stated.

At the time, Feldman said the owners were surprised that some people perceived their offer of the former Jessie Cox mansion as a "threat, or blackmail" against the town.

" We were simply making a statement that if we can do the 109 slips, then we'll be in a position to give the uplands to the town, because we won't need it anymore. It's a simple matter of linkage, which is what many towns require from their developers - what can you give back to the town in return for plan approval."

Although they recognized that townspeople have never sought change in the harbor, Feldman said the owners were still unprepared for the extremely strong reaction against their proposal.

"The reaction was quite strong," Feldman admitted. "And all that caused us to pause until we can decide how to proceed."

Right now, the owners are disappointed with the delay. "But we need the time to re-evaluate," the attorney stated. "We're disappointed because we felt that so many municipal needs could have been met through this one development."

Oaks Realty Trust has yet to talk to anyone from the committee recently formed to consider town ownership of the former Cox estate mansion. Although the planning board was to form a study group to begin discussions, none of the developers has talked with the committee members.

Cable TV show looks at drug dependence

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

A well-known Boston disc jockey described his former life - nights spent on the streets of Boston, shooting his veins with heroin in unsuccessful suicide attempts.

He's been "straight" - drug free - for more than 18 months.

He's back on the streets of Boston, but this time he's preaching against the horrors of drug addiction.

His latest testimony was given to more than 100 teens and parents who attended last week's cable television seminar, "Drugs: What's Happening to Our Kids?"

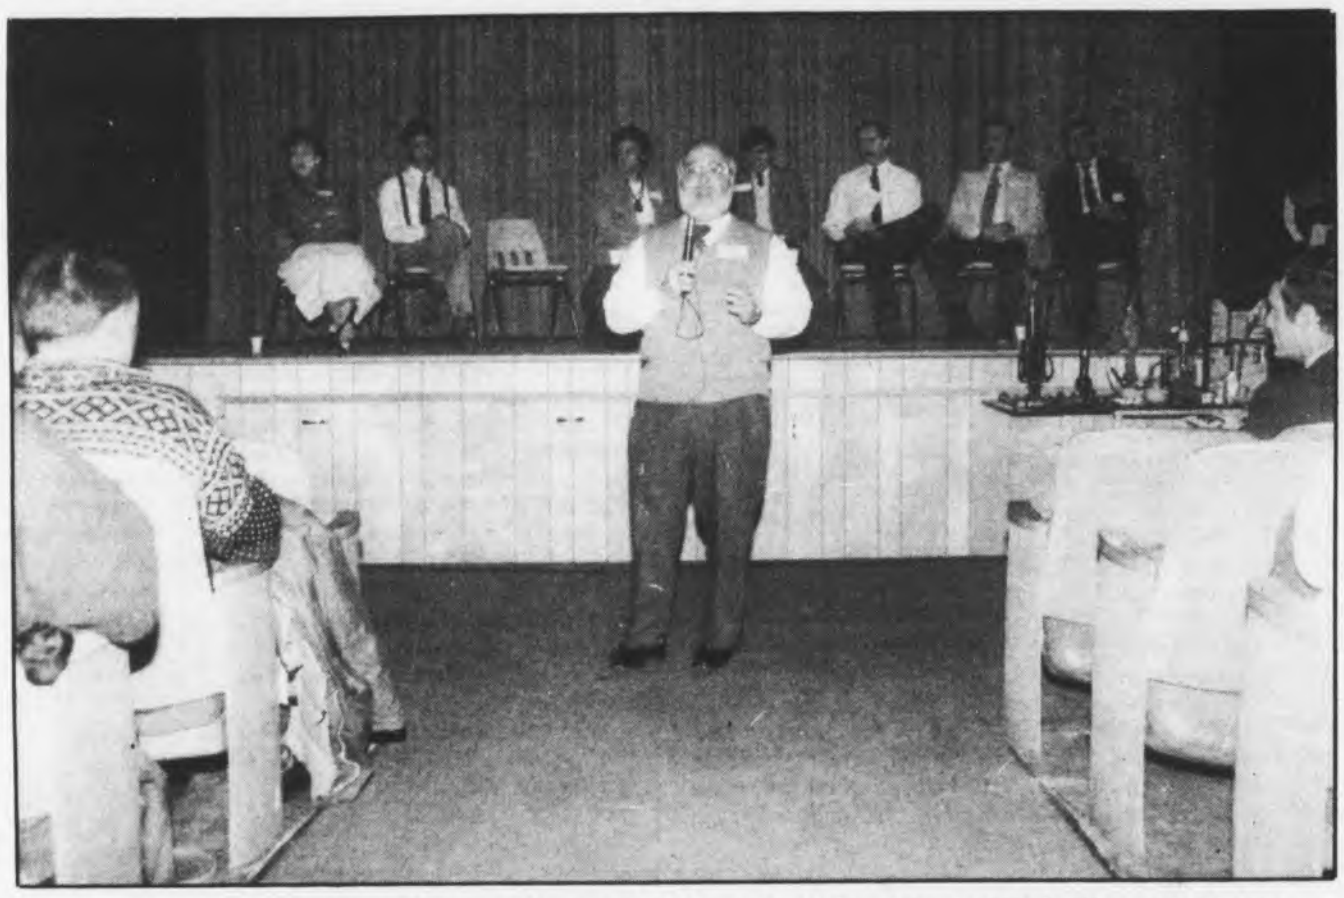
The panel discussion was televised live December 8 from Cohasset High School to several Continental Cablevision communities. More than 100 people attended the seminar along with panelists Michael Gill, coordinator of Cohasset's health education department, Lt. Paul Hayes, Hanover drug enforcement officer, Dick Shire, chairman of the Massachusetts Mothers Against Drunk Driving, Charles Soris, Parent RAP Coordinator, Betty Joy from Tough Love, Tim Fox, WZOU disc jockey and former drug addict, and two teens currently in recovery from drug addiction.

Although he arrived late into the two-hour event, Fox presented the most dramatic picture of the widespread drug problem. Although Fox was voted "most likely to succeed" in his high school class, his first sip of alcohol at school started his downfall into drug and alcohol addiction.

He was 24 when he ended up homeless on the streets of Boston. His road to recovery began the night he tried to kill himself by overdosing on heroin.

"What are my chances of staying clean?" he asked himself. "One in 36 addicts stay straight. But I'm a gambler. I know that I will never be able to use drugs again or I will die."

Eric, a young drug addict who recently completed months in a rehabilitation treatment center, testified that education of young children is the key to prevention. "It's one hundred percent harder to tell someone to stop when he's using the drug. Education when they're young is much easier," he told the audience.



Wigmore Pierson was host of last week's special cable presentation, "Drugs: What's Happening to our Kids."

Fox agreed. "We're very good at saying, "Say no to drugs' but we're not giving them that arena that's drug free." At a recent talk in an elementary school, Fox had all teachers and administrators leave the hall. He asked the kids to empty their pockets. Not surprisingly, Fox said, he found heroin and marijuana and "works" - the paraphenalia used to take the drugs.

When asked by moderator Wigmore Pierson how students buy their drugs, Eric answered, "most of the time, I bought them from some student at the school."

Marie, another teenaged addict in recovery, agreed that a drug-dependent person quickly finds "scurces" within the school, and becomes friendly with those persons. As for storing the illegal drugs, Marie said she kept all types of drugs at home in books, encyclopedias, mattresses and in clothes.

"I had a really good time doing drugs," she stated. "When I drank, my problems went away. That was my escape - it made me feel better. Drinking was a way out."

Alcohol was Marie's drug of choice, although

Looking at the drug problem

she would use any available drug whenever she wanted to get high, or intoxicated. That included marijuana, and constant use of No Doz, an over-the-counter stimulant. She even resorted to snorting White Out, a liquid solution used to erase typewritten typographical errors.

Marie was asked if parental discipline would have helped her to stop. "No," she replied. "My parents would ground me (when they found her drugs) and they would set rules for me. But I didn't care. It made me more rebellious."

Betty Joy described the relationship she and her husband endured with their drug-dependent son. His drug use began when he was 12 years old, Joy stated, and although he agreed several times to stop, he never did.

Meanwhile, because of the attention they were forced to focus upon their problem son the other children in her family suffered. 'The blame game', Joy noted, was when she and her husband blamed each other for failing her son, and ultimately the rest of the family.

"That blame," she said, "kept us unable to respond to what was happening to our family. This was very confusing to the other children. They loved him very much,but he was doing something that was totally unacceptable to us all."

Tough Love, a national organization that helps parents deal with troubled children, saved them and their family, Joy said. "It helped us to take a stand. We told him he couldn't live with us until he enetred a drug and alcohol treatment center - although we were afraid he would choose the streets."

Michael Gill, coordinator of the Cohasset schools' health education program, called his program "far from ideal," but emphasized that early and continuous education is one key to keeping kids from turning to drugs.

"The best drug and alochol program involves a comprehensive K through 12 system set in a sequential manner. All good programs start in the elementary schools where youngsters develop self esteem. They then can draw on that experience to say no when the opportunity arises. But we must give them that basis to say no and to make them feel good about themselves so they can say no," Gill commented.

Rev. Michael McNamara of St. Mary's Church in Scituate, talked about the importance of providing a community environment where addictions are not encouraged. "If you think we have to deal with this problem as a whole," he said, "then we must look at how we live as a people."

Lt. Hayes of the Hanover Police Department, said if a student at Hanover High is suspected of having drugs within the school, school administrators have the right to conduct random locker checks. It is not, he said, a violation of students' rights to have school personnel search a locker if there is some suspicion about that student.

When asked by a teenaged audience member if innocent kids could become victims during these "locker raids", Lt. Hayes answered, "Not really. You have the combination to your locker. If someone put drugs in your locker, you have allowed them to be placed there.

"The police do not conduct the search," he stated in reply to another question. "It's the school's right to check their lockers." If illegal drugs are found on school property, however, the police are called to the scene.

Drug and alcohol use by teenagers is a problem not only on the South Shore, but throughout the nation, Gill noted. "The problem is that kids are using the drugs, not where they are doing it.

"Our experience in Cohasset suggests that the school is not the primary place where the useage is taking place."

When pressed by Pierson for the location of that 'primary place' Gill answered, "parties at home, in cars and at the beaches" - local teen hang-outs.

Marie concluded the two-hour session by noting that her recently-completed rehabilitation has taught her "that I have fun being sober. I'm growing up again. I know there are problems, but there are answers. And I know now that drugs are not the answer."

Open meeting refresher

Town Clerk Frances Marks has forwarded to town boards and committees information on the open meeting law "as a refresher for most and to clear up some misunderstanding."

"Every meeting has to be received and filed 48 hours before each meeting with the town clerk," said Marks.

"The notice must state the date, time and place of the meeting.

"I am asking you as of this date to refrain from calling in meeting notices or mailing them to the office."

Marks said that in calculating the 48-hours prior to a meeting, Saturdays should be included, but Sundays and legal holidays should be excluded.

"For example," said Marks, "a notice for a meeting to be held on Monday at 8 p.m. must be posted on the preceding Friday, not later than 8 p.m.

"Saturday would be included in the calculation, even though the town clerk's office is not open for business on that day."

Marks added that the filing and posting requirements for meeting notices do not apply to emergency meetings.

"Emergency is defined as "a sudden generally unexpected occurrence or set of circumstances demanding immediate action,' " she said.

"For example," continued Marks, "a meeting of the board of health to take action with respect to a matter endangering the public health due to a sudden flooding of an area, would be considered an emergency meeting.

"A meeting simply called in a hurry to take action prior to the expiration of a deadline would not qualify as an emergency meeting."

Selectmen stand by neighbors . . .

Their only support came from Selectman Cliff Mitman who suggested that selectmen could give their initial support to the project in order to maintain some communication and participation in the ensuing permit application process. "Is there any stipulation in this or change that would make this plan acceptable to you?" he questioned selectmen after several neighbors outlined their specific concerns about the development.

But after walking the site, Selectman Gallagher said he opposed the proposal based on a number of issues, including the elimination of open space in the neighborhood, and the proposed density of the development. He remained unmoveable in his opposition to the state's comprehensive permit process.

Several abutters talked about the problem of increased traffic if the plan is approved by the state. And although the housing partnership committee recommended a traffic study be completed with the state funds by developer Hurley, one neighbor, Joseph Baressi of Brewster Road, stated, "I don't care how many traffic studies are done."

He added that the state funding agency "views community support (of a comprehensive permit proposal) very seriously. It is only if that expression is unreasonable" that the state would require a development to be located in a community.

In a written report submitted December 2 to selectmen, the housing partnership committee recommended that selectmen approve the developer's application for funding.

The committee's approval included a list of eight conditions which the developer must meet, including: creating a trust fund to defray special charges or improvement costs; posting a $100,00 bond to defray any costs of septic failure; creating a 30-foot green space in front of or behind each unit; maintaining a distance of 90 feet from any point of the development to an abutter; requiring that all restrictions apply only to the current applicant; restricting any connection to Ledgewood Drive to a pedestrian passage; and obtaining a letter from the water department stating the development will not have an adverse impact on the town of Cohasset.

"From the Partnership's point of view, the overall quality of life appears to be appropriate for an affordable housing development which would include children," the committee concluded in its report to selectmen.

Residents of Brewster Road, Ledge Way, Wood Way and Ledgewood Drive submitted a letter to selectmen last week outlining their opposition to the proposed development.

They stated that the 20 acres of land is over-assessed by about $1 million and the developer stands to make a profit of about $800,000, which they believe creates "a potential for a windfall profit by taking advantage of a state-funded program."

They continued, "The need for affordable housing should not displace the need for sound development. The town of Cohasset's first project should be a model for successful projects."

Ed Goff of Ledgewood Drive told selectmen the development is too dense for the area. "I think he should eleiminate ten percent of the units," Goff stated. A former resident of the Veteran's Hillside neighborhood, Goff said unflattering labels are often attached to people living in specific developments. "He's taking land that is not worth much and trying to throw a separate project up there. People will stereotype this as a 'project'. It's important that this is done tastefully and that everybody is happy with it," Goff told selectmen.

Planning board chairman Sturdy said the proposed road connection to Brewster Road "makes no sense. It needs another side road into scituate," he said, where there will be an MBTA rail station and where stores are conveniently located.

"This is a reckless creation of low income housing," Sturdy stated. "It will not help to dump housing developments along 3A - this is not a responsible way to go about a problem. this is just a politically good solution." His remarks were met with loud applause by the Crystal Woods neighbors.

Al Moore, another planning board member said he would object to the developer spending state tax dollars - "our money" to complete a □ Things will certainly not be the same without Mr. Arthur Lehr Sr. walking around...he was truly a wonderful gentleman, and a stong member of our community. He will be missed by all of us.

□ Happy Birthday wishes to Ben Curley, Superintendent of the Cohasset Water Department, from his co-workers on December 20.

□ There sure are a large number of happy senior residents in Cohasset, and you can take a bow...those of you that voted for the new van for the Council on Aging that is! That is one of the finest things that we could have done for our Senior Citizens!

Pilgrim Bank to add second story

Pilgrim Cooperative Bank will soon have a new look.

The Planning Board voted approval Wednesday, Dec. 7, of a two story addition to the bank at 48 South Main St. in downtown Cohasset.

"The facilities are antiquated," said Atty. Charles Humphreys who represented the bank.

"The floor is not large enough. We need more space for teller stations and automatic banking terminals.

"We also need storage space, which is now in the eaves of the attic.

"The bank also has to be upgraded to be accessible to the handicapped."

According to Humphreys, the 1,158 sq. ft. addition will be to the back of the bank.

A canopy used for a previous drive-up window will be removed, he said. It has not been used for several years.

Landscaping will be added.

"We intend it to be extra attractive," said Humphreys.

The addition will allow creation of a conference room and secondary pedestrian access, he said.

The second floor will have offices and storage, according to Humphreys.

"There will be more teller stations and a secure automatic teller machine," he said.

"A walkway ramp will be installed for the handicapped.

"There will also be handicapped access to the board room and second level.

"I think he (the architect) is to be congratulated," said Gordon S. Hislop of the Design Review Board.

"It will enhance Cohasset, and the landscaping will be most attractive.

The site plan review was unanimously approved.

In other action, the board:

• Heard a presentation from Glenn Pratt, Cemetery Study Committee chairman.

The committee would like to develop a 5,000 grave cemetery on 14 acres of school department land with access from Pleasant St. and Cushing Road. Cost would be over $1 million.

The school committee voted in October to declare the land surplus so that the town could develop plans for the cemetery before space runs out in its other cemeteries.

If all approvals are received, it would be the spring of 1992 before the first burial would take place in the cemetery, about when the town will run out of space.

"Now is the time we have to begin," said Pratt.

Board chairman Robert Sturdy asked whether the land was suitable for human habitation.

"A portion of it would be," replied Pratt.

"From my standpoint," said Sturdy, "I hate to see land suitable for low income housing go for non-housing."

The cemetery would start 50-60 feet from where the town land begins, said Pratt.

He said there are an average of 75 burials a year in Cohasset. There are 250 graves left, but they can't be purchased unless they will be used within 72 hours, according to Pratt.

Cost is $125 for a single grave, according to Peter Laugelle, tree and park superintendent.

Pratt suggested that grave fees be increased to make the cemetery self supporting.

"The existing site will be improved radically," said Atty. John Elliot, who represented the station owner Randy Parkinson.

A convenience store will also be added, he said.

• Had an informal discussion with Jerome Pfifer, owner of Stage Coach Way, who would like to add a second floor of rental units to his property.

The eight to 12 units would rent for about $600 to $800 a month, Pfifer said.

Development . . .

traffic study for the project.

Housing partnership member Langmaid argued that zoning and environmental questions will be up to the zoning board and the state to answer. The partnership committee's only responsibility was to review the plan and decide whether this is " a reasonable affordable housing project." Their answer was affirmative.

"This is not a step for environmental issues," she told the neighbors. "The residents' concerns are legitimate, but they will be addressed at the zoning board of appeals level."

Selectman Rocco Laugelle disagreed with that assessment, noting their approval of the funding application would be "a bit of an encouragment" to the state.

"If we go along with this and say to apply (for state funding), then we are helping the developer," Laugelle said.

Selectmen voted four-to-one to oppose the application for state funding. Selectman Mitman opposed the motion.

The fast lane, part I

Two men from Braintree have formed an association to lobby for repeal of the new speeding-fine structure that took effect in the summer.

Patrick Gallagher and Richard Valentine, founders of the Massachusetts Motorists Association, are "mad as hell" about the new fines. No one knew they existed until State Police began slapping people with fines that are a lot heftier than the flat $50 penalty of days past.

Their effort deserves support, for the fine structure has little to do with public safety, and everything to do with raising revenues. In this state, everyone knows that with the exceptions of speeding and driving under the influence of alcohol and/or drugs, it's a free-for-all on the highways and byways. Nothing else gets even a look of puzzlement from the officers in blue. Indeed, it sometimes seems as if police are the first ones to violate many other rules of the road, when they should serve as examples of the law.

To prove the point, when was the last time you heard of anyone who was cited and fined for failing to signal a turn? For failing to yeild to oncoming traffic while turning left? For reckless endangerment of others on the road by weaving through traffic, even if no collision results? For running a red light or stop sign?

These little things add up to plenty of rudeness on the roads. Weaving through traffic and cutting everyone else off will never earn anyone a fine. Why do some get away with driving like that? Because they can.

That's why the speeding fines are a joke. If the state were truly serious about public safety, drivers guilty of these violations would find themselves paying dearly for the privilege. If "revenue enhancement" is at issue, the state also might discover that full enforcement of all moving violations would begin to fill up the treasury very rapidly.

The behavior of motorists on superhighways since August is instructive. After the fines were widely announced, it seemed as if most people slowed down to an average speed somewhere in the low 60s. It had a positive effect.

But after most saw there was no effort to lean hard on drivers who insist on being in front of everyone else at all costs, they found out little had changed — except the stakes suddenly were higher. When that realization dawned on the motoring public, average speeds crept right back up to where they were before the new fines went into effect. It was nothing more than a game. Most of the time, you win by speeding; sometimes, you lose. Beyond collision damage to one's wallet, who cares about safety?

Many police chiefs feel the same way about it. Because penalties are higher, more people will appeal citations to a magistrate. That increases court time — and overtime — for police. It also takes more officers off the roads, which has the effect of decreasing the egregious speed demon's overall chances of being caught.

The Motorists Association demands a return to the flat speeding fine. The police chiefs favor reducing the severity of the scale, perhaps to $5 per mile an hour, plus the $50 fine.

The chiefs make more sense. While we're at it, though, let's go after the rest of the knuckleheads that have been begging for tickets for years.

Historical Society stocking stuffers

A reminder for that last-minute Christmas season shopping: the Cohasset Historical Society is offering unique 1989 wall calendars titled "Scenes Of Old Cohasset."

The calendar features photographs from the Society's archives collection showing views of the town as it was a century or more ago. More than a dozen early photographs have been reproduced showing such historical subjects as the Common, the village, harbor, the shoreline, the first central school and the town's first Police Station.

These unusual wall calendars are available from the Historical Society and at selected shops or stores in Cohasset.

Also worthy of consideration is the town's first official history book, Rev. E.V. Bigelow's uniquely written "Narrative History of the Town of Cohasset." First printed in 1898 under auspices of the Committee On Town History, the "Narrative History" recently has been reprinted by the Historical Society. Bigelow's fine and definitive book relates the story of Cohasset and its people from a time prior to its first settlement, up to the time of publication in 1898. Another Historical Society gift suggestion is its recent reprint of E. Pomeroy Collier's "Cohasset's Deep Sea Captains."

In paperback form, "Deep Sea Captains" contains short biographies of numerous Cohasset seafaring shipmasters of the 19th century, and is illustrated with reprints of old paintings and drawings of the Sea Captains and some of their vessels. "Cohasset's Deep Sea Captains" is available through the Historical Society or at Fleming's, Elm Street, Cohasset Center.

A "stocking stuffer" from the Historical Society are its Pairpoint glass cup-plates showing historic Minot's Ledge Lighthouse. These miniature glass dishes, replicating an early 19th century art form, also are available from the Society and at Fleming's.

School vacation programs for the kids

The South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell is offering two special day-long programs for kids during December school vacation.

WILDLIFE IN WINTER

Spend a day with SSNSC staff naturalists, Wednesday, Dec. 28, 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., looking for wildlife in winter. You'll learn which animals are still out and about and how to find them. Look for animal shelters in the woods or tracks in the snow; maybe you'll find a shrew's tunnel or the skipping pattern of chickadee tracks forming a delicate imprint on the snow. Outdoor activities will be fun for all as well as educational. Two age groups: 5- to 7-years-old and 8- to 12-year-olds. Remember to dress for the cold weather and bring your lunch. Members/$20; non-members/$26. Pre-registration is required. Please call the Science Center 659-2559 for more information.

Dog license fees to increase in 1989

It's going to cost a little bit more to get a license for Fido in 1989.

The Norfolk County Advisory Board recently voted to charge $6 for a spayed or neutered dog and $10 for dogs not spayed or neutered.

The fee had been $3 for a spayed or neutered dog, and $6 for other dogs, according to Town Clerk Frances Marks.

"The fee hasn't been raised in many years," said Marks, who noted that the town gets a percentage of the license fees it collects.

She said that licenses will not be issued unless a copy of a vaccination certificate is submitted, and if spay or neuter preference is desired, a statement from the veterinarian.

In addition, the dog license period will begin Jan. 1, rather than April 1.

If a dog remains unlicensed on May 1, an owner will be subject to a late fee of $25.

"The late fee is something new," said Marks.

"We used to send out a card to delinquents, but we never collected a late fee."

Charge for lost tags will be $3 rather than the 50-cents currently being charged, according to Marks.

A good season for local merchants . . .

Smith said, however, that husbands have called up looking for suggestions as to what their wives might like for Christmas.

"We've ordered everything from an Oriental rug to bookends for Christmas," he said.

"A big item this year is a hand-carved puffin, according to Smith.

"It looks like a miniature penguin," he said.

"It's selling well."

He added that local stores can offer something that malls cannot—personal service.

"I hate to go to the malls," said Smith. "I don't like being pushed around in the crowds.

"I like to shop in a place where people know me by name.

"Cohasset is a very interesting place in which to live and shop."

Christine Looney, owner and manager of Twigs said her floral business at 9 Depot Court "hasn't really been busy, but we've only been open a month.

"Business is getting better every week," said Looney.

"It takes time for people to find out where you are."

So far, fresh and dried floral arrangements and wreaths have been popular with customers, she said.

"Boxwood trees are also popular," said Looney, who worked for other florists for four years before she opened her own busines.

Business is a little slower than usual at Cards and Shards, 45 South Main St., according to owner Sue Straley.

She said that is attributable to the six or so empty stores in the village.

"People like to come to a place with lots of stores," said Straley.

"When there is just one or two they are interested in, it's more difficult.

"When we first came here 10 years ago, you could spend the day walking up and down the street and going to the different stores.

"If people want the small stores to survive, they have to come and trade with them, not wait until they are out of business.

"I don't want to be negative, but if the small stores are going to survive, people have to be sure and spend time in them.

"But business is generally good."

Her shop offers such items as hand-painted furniture and has a Christmas room filled with paper, gifts and special candle holders.

"We also have a whole line of cards," she said.

"We try to have something for everyone."

Straley agreed that stores depend on holiday business for a large part of their profits during the year.

"If you don't do it in December," she said, "you're not going to do it any other time."

"Business is great," said Jim Hoban, owner and manager of Cohasset Meat and Produce which opened at Cushing Plaza early this fall at the former site of Bildner's.

"I attribute it to the Black Angus beef, as well as the fresh vegetables and produce."

Hoban said that business hasn't really increased during the holidays.

"It's been steady all along. People have to eat 52 weeks of the year," he said.

Hoban said that his store's prepared dinners are popular with holiday shoppers who then don't have to go home and cook.

"The deli has been doing fantastic," added Hoban. "We have Christmas party platters and have done really well."

The store's busiest hours, according to Hoban, are 4 to 7:30 p.m.

"Lunch business is good, too," he said.

Holiday items at the store include fruit baskets, wrapping paper, plants in the floral department, Christmas candy, cookies and pastry, said Hoban.

"We've had a lot of orders for Christmas prime ribs and lambs," he said. "So far, 800 prime ribs and 900 turkeys have been ordered for Christmas.

"For Thanksgiving, we sold 800 fresh turkeys.

"I want to thank all our customers and wish them a Merry Christmas and Happy New Year," said Hoban.

Woolen throws and Christmas linens are popular items at Fleuri Home Fashions, also at Cushing Plaza, according to owner Pat Belanger.

"Hat boxes are selling well and so are baskets filled with soaps and potpourri."

Belanger owned The Linen Chest in Cohasset village for a year and a-half before moving to Cushing Plaza at the site of the former Walpole Store eight months ago.

"We blended them both," she said.

"The difference (in locations) has been tremendous, like day and night.

"It was a very successful move for us.

"I can't even compare the two."

Another Cushing Plaza store, Sea 'n Cheese, is also doing well.

"We're doing ok," said owner and manager Rick Peters." Based on Thanksgiving, sales are up over last year.

"This is our busiest time of the year. December is our busiest month.

"We get requests for party platters, and wine and cheese baskets.

"It's a good time of the year for us.

"Fish and wine are big sellers."

Other popular items are Maggie's breads, cakes and cookies, according to Peters.

"They are all natural with only the best ingredients.

"Central Market used to carry it."

Sea 'n Cheese also offers such things as prepared fish dinners, gourmet specialties, quiche and hors d'oeuvres.

Tilly Nardo sat in Santa's lap as she hoped for a happy Christmas and lots of presents.

A clash over one-day liquor licenses . . .

In September, when Volungis requested a one-day license for a Democratic Town Committee event, Pratt opposed that action.

"You can't continue to sell liquor for your own profit when you rent the hall to someone," he said at the meeting. We support your programs but we don't think selling liquor is appropriate.

At that time, Volungis argued that other non-profit organizations, such as churches and the yacht club, also request and are granted one-day liquor licenses. "What the difference?" she asked selectmen.

"You lease the hall to someone else," Pratt answered last fall.

Town counsel agreed with that opinion.

And so did a local businessman.

Daniel Leahy is general manager of Kimball's BY The Sea, a motel and restaurant that depends on weekend and "special event" bookings particularly in the off-season.

Leahy does not want it to be construed as an "us against the community center" situation, but he has stated his opposition to what he views as the "back door competition."

In a letter written last September to selectmen, Leahy stated, "These one day licensees should not become back door competition for your full time licensees, remembering that they have no way near the mandatory overhead and thereby can reflect that in their 'retail' price."

Leahy insisted he has no vendetta or axe to grind against the community center, and noted that he has financially supported the organization.

"But it's these highly-increased incidents of one-day licenses that I'm opposed to," he stated. The community center's continual requests have blown these one-day events into a regularly-scheduled, profit-making occasions, he said.

Leahy freely admitted that one reason he opposes frequent one-day licenses is because they takes business away from establishments such as Kimball's.

At the time he wrote the letter last September, he found selectmen grappling for some reasoning on which to base their actions regarding the license requests. It was his observation that non profit organizations such as the community center were more frequently requesting the one-day license which comes at a much lower cost than a club license, and without the state and local restrictions, Leahy argued.

"Certainly," he noted,"there are some events that typically belong to a community center. A resident winning a local election - the community center is the perfect place to have a reception afterwards. But there are certain events that should have been held in a licensed facility that end up there."

Kimball's pays $600 a year for the club license. But the storage and dispensing of liquor requires other related licenses, including those for the serving of food, dumpster, ice cream and milk dispensing, music and a common victualler license. "All those go hand-in-hand with the operation of a bar," Leahy said. "And all together, it costs us $1,200 a year in licenses. That's compared to $25 for each one-day license the community center receives."

Liability of the town is also something selectmen should consider when doling out the one-day licenses, he added. "If something happened as a result of someone drinking at one of these events, somebody would be sued. I would tend to think it would be the person or agency with the most money. Unfortunately, that would be the town," Leahy argued. Club licensees are required to have complete liability insurance coverage.

Another fact of life for club licensees is the regularly inspections by local and state authorities. "I consider myself a licensed drug dealer. I serve alcohol. But I am accountable to the state Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission and I am inspected and guided by a full set of regulations. A one-day licensee is not," Leahy added.

Community center director Volungis said the board of directors has received information from the ABCC stating that they qualify for one-day licenses, not club licenses. "The establishment has to have specific hours and days of operation in order to qualify for a club license. We don't do that. We ask for a one-day license only when there is a request," Volungis explained.

Liquor is never sold on the premises when there are children on the property, and the liquor is no longer stored within the building.

Domenic Micarelli

Framer adds art gallery to shop

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

"We have a deal," said Domenic Micarelli, owner of the Artist's Son Gallery and Picture Framer at Jonathan Livingston Square, Route 3A, Cohasset.

"My father (Clement Micarelli) paints and I frame," said Micarelli, 33, a Hingham resident.

"That's why we call it The Artist's Son.

"Who else would you want to do your framing?"

Micarelli's three-year-old business offers creative custom framing, original art/portraits, prints/graphics, corporate/contract work, and decorator assistance.

Hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday to Thursday, and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday and Saturday, and by appointment.

In addition, Micarelli recently opened a gallery in a 550-foot addition to his business.

Seventy-five to 100 people attended the open house Dec. 4.

The gallery offers original works by artists including his father, whose specialty is portraits.

"He's not as well-known as he should be," said Micarelli about his father.

"We'll see if we can change that.

"He's a major league artist who should be known as such."

The gallery also offers works by Scituate artist Donna Green, as well as by artists from Hawaii to Boston to California.

"All of the works are owned by the gallery," said Micarelli.

"They're not on consignment.

"It has to be a good work of art.

"Everything in this gallery is here because I like it."

Prices range from a few hundred dollars to $10,000, according to Micarelli. He described the paintings as representational rather than abstract.

"It will take time to build up a clientele," he said.

"It will mostly be through word of mouth.

"People don't come in and pay $2,000 for something unless they know you and trust you.

"You have to be reputable."

Micarelli said that a lot of galleries offer sea scapes and still lifes.

"We want to be on the cutting edge," he said.

In time, he said he would like to include sculpture, painting demonstrations and one-person shows.

Micarelli is proud of his picture framing business, as well.

"I like to think that we are the best picture framers around," he said.

"We have high quality, very good selection and good design work.

"We have frames from middle of the road to Rolls Royce.

"The every day frames are $5.50 a foot, and lacquer is more expensive," said Micarelli.

But he also offers such things as a hand-carved, gold-leaf frame for $1,600.

"It's an art work in itself, as far as the frame is concerned," he said.

Micarelli said his four employees are always ready to assist customers.

"What makes a shop like this is the people," said Micarelli.

He is excited about the new gallery.

"Cohasset people are art oriented," he said.

"We'll see if Cohasset needs something like this."

Abagail Adams of Cohasset recently qualified for three national equestrian events. Adams is a graduate of Cohasset High School.

Local equestrian nationally-ranked

Abigail Adams, daughter of Mr. & Mrs. William Adams of Cohasset qualified for three national equestrian events.

Through a series of wins this past season, Abby qualified to compete in the AHSA Medal Finals, the ASPCA National Horse Show Event and the United States Equestrian Team Junior Rider Finals. Abby traveled to New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey to compete in these special Medal classes. She was among the select few nationally with only 100 riders competing for the ASPCA, 200 for the AHSA and only 90 at the USET finals.

Abby has also received the honor of having her horse, Waltzing Wave invited to compete in the Pennsylvania National Horse Show Finals for Junior Hunters. There were only 30 Junior Hunters representing the US in this event. But, the highlight was winning ribbons in Junior Hunter and placing 12th in the Medal finals.

Abby and Wave have been most successful this year. They have captured the New England and Massachusetts Horsemens Councils' Junior Hunter Championships. The duo began their quest last December and have just completed their season.

On the regional level, Abby qualified for and competed in the New England and Mass. Equitation Finals at Mt. Holyoke College. Abby won the Open Equitation class there. During the summer Abby was named Best Child Rider at the Greater New Haven Horse Show by winning 6 of the 8 classes she entered and taking 2nd in the remaining 2!

Locally, Abby and Wave were big winners at the Southeast Hunter Annual Awards Ceremony. Wave was crowned Junior Hunter Champion with over 1,000 points and received a cooler. She also received the Yankee Saddler Challenge Trophy for being the highpoint hunter of the year. In the equitation division Abby placed third.

Abby graduated from Cohasset High School in June. She will be attending Hobart College in January. In order to maintain her peak performance level, Abby decided to forego the fall semester and concentrate on her riding. She will be returning to the horse show world after her freshman term and will compete in the Amateur Owner Division.

Abby has trained since she was eight years old at River Wind Farm in Pembroke with owner Carl Catani and his assistant Kathryn Kenney. River Wind is a hunter-jumper facility with emphasis on competitive horseback riding. The farm extends congratulations to this dedicated and talented rider.

Prize-winners learned at River Wind Farm

River Wind Farm and owner Carl Catani have had a hectic but thoroughly rewarding show season.

Each of the farm's more than 20 students achieved their goals for the 1988 season.

River Wind Farm, located at 49 Cross Street, is a hunter-jumper facility with an emphasis on competitive horse showing.

Riders at the farm take lessons and go to horse shows geared for their individual level of achievement.

Catani and his assistant Kathy Kenney are proud of their champions for 1988.

Abigail Adams, of Cohasset, qualified for the top three equestrian events in the country; the AHSA medal finals, the ASPCA Maclay finals and the USET junior rider medal finals.

Only the top junior riders in the nation are invited.

Her horse, "Waltzing Wave" also was invited to compete in the Junior Hunter Division at the Penn. National and Washington International Horse Shows.

Only 30 hunters from the country were selected on a basis of points won at A-level shows. The highlight of the nationals was "Wave" winning ribbons in the junior hunter classes and Adams placing twelfth of 257 riders in the medal.

Adams also qualified for the NEHC and MHC medal finals, and was the winner of her age group equitation class there.

She received the junior hunter championship and the Yankee Saddlery Challenge Trophy for junior hunters from the SouthEast Hunter Assoc. She also will be the champion junior hunter for New England and Massachusetts, as well as the reserve champion for the AHSA Zone I.

Adams had the honor of being named best child rider at the Greater New Haven Horse Show this summer for winning 6 of 8 classes and second in the two remaining.

Julie Chandler, of Marshfield, is also an equitation "star" from River Wind. She qualified for the Big Three, AHSA, ASPCA and USET finals as well.

She also won a third place in her age group at the NEHC medal finals.

Chandler was not eligible for the MHC finals — she already won that event two years ago at age 13.

Debbie Sloan, of Hanson, is a longtime competitor in the horse show world.

Sloan, a second grade teacher in Rockland, devotes all her spare time to her horses. Her dedication paid off.

She was awarded the following: champion adult hunter, champion amateur owner hunter, the Kingston Trailer Adult Hunter Challenge Trophy and the Fredrick Reeve Amateur Owner Challenge Trophy from the SouthEast Hunter Assoc.

Sloan and her horse "Audacious" also are in contention for first place in the New England and Mass. Horsemen's Councils in the adult and amateur owner hunters as well as in the AHSA Zone I.

She also placed eighth at the New England adult equitation medal finals.

Kara Tedeschi, of Norwell, is another adult who loves to show.

A student at Stonehill College, Tedeschi commutes daily to ride her horses, "Standing Ovation" and "Rave Review".

Tedeschi and Stanley are the reserve champion amateur owner hunter and the third place low hunter for SEHA.

Tedeschi also qualified for the NEHC adult medal finals. "Standing Ovation" has been invited to compete at the Washington International and Penn. National horse shows in the conformation hunter division. And, he was recently named champion green hunter for New England and Massachusetts with ribbons in adult and amateur owner hunters.

Amy Davis, of Duxbury, also has had a successful show season.

Davis has captured the reserve champion small junior hunter for New England and Massachusetts with her horse "Velvet Sneakers."

She also qualified to compete at the NEHC and MHC medal finals for the second time.

Elaine Fernandes, of Halifax, is the third place winner in the amateur owner hunter division for SEHA with "Caesar's Pal."

Brook Sheerin, of Cohasset, will take top honors again this year in medium pony hunter for Massachusetts.

She is second in New England and SEHA in that division as well.

In her age group equitation, Sheerin received a third place from SEHA, reserve in New England and champion of Massachusetts.

This is the third consecutive year Sheerin has brought home a championship from the state and regional councils.

The following riders also received year-end awards from SouthEast Hunter: Kirstin Saunders of Marshfield, fourth in children's hunter; Rebecca Hurley and "Freeway" of Norwell, fourth in special pony; Sarah Hurley and "Harvest Ball" of Norwell, fifth in short stirrup and pet pony; Mitzi Fowler, of Hingham, and "True Colors", champion pre-green hunter.

Qualifying for the NEHC and MHC equitation medal finals in addition to the above were: Amy Davis of Duxbury, Laurie Bronstein of Cohasset, Meghan McSheffrey, Jennifer Lewis and Nancy Murphy all of Hingham.

Winter travel tips

The School Transportation Association of Massachusetts urges that children be especially careful when traveling to school during the winter months.

"Because there is often snow and ice during the winter, children need to take extra precautions to ensure their safety," said Ken Ballou, President of STAM, and Senior Operations Manager of Ryder Student Transportation Systems.

"Children should allow extra time to get to the bus stop and wear bright clothing so they can be seen in the early morning or late afternoon when the sky is grey and they should wear warm clothes including hats and mittens so they will be comfortable while waiting for the bus," Ballou said.

"When children are at the bus stop, they shouldn't play in the snow or slide on snowbanks or ice patches because they could slide under the wheel of the bus. Parents should tell their children it is dangerous to throw snowballs at the bus and because buses need extra room to stop when there is ice and snow on the roads, they should stand away from the bus," continued Ballou.

Motorists, too should exercise extreme caution and remember that Massachusetts Law mandates that cars in both directions must come to a complete stop when they see the flashing red lights and extended stop arm on a school bus.

"These tips," said Ballou, "are part of a comprehensive Bus Safety Program that the School Transportation Association of Massachusetts has developed. Entitled, 'Buster, think of Your Safety Now.'

Information about the program is available through the STAM office, 792 South Main Street, Mansfield, MA (508) 339-8856."

Rep. Murray files 1989 legislative bills

Several dozen legislative proposals, making up the 1989 House Republican Legislative Package, were filed today with the Clerk of the Massachusetts House of Representatives.

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R) of Cohasset said the package of proposals is aimed at developing sound public policy in a wide range of areas from budget issues to law enforcement. "Some of these proposals have been developed and worked on over the past several years," said Rep. Murray. "Some are new approaches to new problems, but they all share the goal of an improved quality of life for the citizens of the Commonwealth."

Noting the major fiscal problems that have dominated news reports in recent months, Rep. Murray stated, "The budget problems we've focused on this year are not new developments. They are the unfortunate results of long term mismanagement. One way to begin to solve the persistent problem of over-spending is by imposing a tough, realistic limitation. That's exactly what would be done under the package proposal to restrict general fund appropriations to 98 per cent of estimated revenues."

Rep. Murray indicated that the Legislature must bear the burden of passing responsible revenue generating regulations with the Executive branch.

"Occasionally weaknesses in our criminal justice system signal the need for a substantial change," declared Rep. Murray. "The situation involving heinous crimes committed by persons who are judged to be insane is a good example of this issue." The House GOP proposal includes a comprehensive package of insanity defense legislation taking a case from inception to post-release. Highlights of the proposal are: abolishment of Not Guilty by Reason of Insanity, establishment of Guilty, but Insane. The criminal court would retain jurisdiction over the defendant before trial, during detention, and after release through the probationary period. The Department of Corrections would establish and fund a medium security facility for insane women found incompetent to stand trial or Guilty, but Insane. Upon release from a facility, the court will order the person found Guilty, but Insane to submit to examinations for at least a 5 year mandatory period.

Stating that our commitment to public safety has to extend to those entrusted with preserving public safety, Rep. Murray identified a priority proposal which would establish a program for the funding of bullet proof vests for law enforcement officer.

Rep. Murray said, "We have a serious and ever increasing problem of medical waste disposal and I have co-sponsored a Republican package bill to track this waste. Under this proposal an identification system would be established for hospitals and other large medical waste generators which would allow for statewide tracking of medical waste."

Rep. Murray indicated there will be a renewed effort to pass a Massachusetts Enterprise Zone program. "When Springfield Representative Raymond Jordan and Republican Leader Stephen Pierce first proposed a state enterprise zone program, they were greeted by solid support from city and town officials and business and industry people who understand the importance of targeting assistance to areas most in need. Good headway, has been made on this proposal and it looks like 1989 is the year when we can add this important economic development tool to the Commonwealth's arsenal in the war against unemployment and urban and rural community decline.

"Auto insurance reform made some advances this past year," said Rep. Murray, "but what was accomplished was only a beginning." The Third Plymouth District Legislator said that a package of legislation targeting insurance fraud, criminal justice, and judicial proceedings are again part of the House Republican package and that they are all aimed at decreasing auto theft in the Commonwealth and lowering auto insurance rates. Murray said that other package proposals include legislative rules reform, campaign finance law changes, housing, prison overcrowding, tax reform and a range of other subjects.

Family stress time

The Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children (MSPCC) reminds you this is a high stress time for families. In the rush of shopping, wrapping and holiday happenings, are you considering your children?

Some tips for easing holiday stress:

* Secure adequate child care.
* Make time for young children to share their day.
* Examine all toys for safety.
* Minimize the commercialism of gift-giving. Competition for toys heightens a child's anxiety.
* Don't leave children alone in cars, even briefly!
* Maintain household routines, as children need schedules.
* Teach children not to open doors to strangers.
* Require the "buddy system" — holding another's hand in crowded stores and mall.

First Parish Church services

Adopt a Family for Christmas:

Our high school youth will be giving a party December 18 for some young children from Wellspring House in Hull. The high school youth will supply gifts for the children attending the party, but this year we would like to brighten the Christmas of their families as well. This Sunday morning, you will be invited to sign up to supply Christmas gifts for these families and to bring your gifts to our Christmas Pageant on Sunday morning, December 18.

The families have been given fictitious names and are briefly profiled below. If you do not expect to be in attendance this Sunday you may offer to help by calling the church office. You may adopt an entire family or a single member. Though these are people in need of basic necessities, for the moms we are suggesting something along the line of a special treat: a bottle of perfume, a box of candy, a scarf and gloves...

Family Name	Coming to the party	At Home
Snowflake	girl 3	Mom, Dad, baby 1
Twinkle	girl 4	Mom
Blueberry	boy 4	Mom, boy 12 girl 1
Dancer	boy 5, girl 4	Mom, girl 3, boy 2
Comet	girl 5, boy 4	Mom
Sugarplum	boy 5	Mom, boy 1 1/2
Wisemen	boy 6	Mom, girl 15, girl 14, girl 10, boy 8
Partridge	boy 5	Mom, boy 15,

Village Fair:

Saturday was a beautiful day for the Fair, and early reports indicate that it was a big success. To all of you who helped — our thanks for a wonderful effort.

Christmas Caroling:

Hear Ye, Hear Ye! Calling all Singers, Hummers, Bell Ringers, Children of all Ages! A Caroling Party, Dec. 18 at 6:30 p.m. Meet at the Parish House to carol around the town, sharing Christmas spirit. Return to the Parish House for Christmas cookies and cider. Dress for the cold, and bring friends and neighbors, flashlights, simple instruments (bells, finger cymbals, triangles). Call Sine Pounder at 383-6869 by Dec. 15 to offer cookies, or with ideas for places to carol.

Women's Book Group?

Would you be interested in a book discussion once a month? We would primarily read work by women authors, though male authors may occasionally be considered. The discussion promises to be lively, and the dessert fattening.

I'd like to begin late in January, when we'd all like an excuse to get out of the house, with Toni [illegible] Beloved.

If you are interested or would like more information, call Donna Mayberry (545-8175).

Happy Holidays!

The holidays are upon us, and amid the hustle and the bustle it is the time of year to reflect and hold precious the special warmth emitted from gathering families, the chatter of small voices and the goodness and charity which often receive too little acknowledgement.

We, at Eastern Edison Company, wish you a happy holiday season and offer you these tips to help keep your holidays safe, as well.

- Repair or replace decorative lighting that has loose connections, loose sockets or exposed or frayed wires.
- If you have a Christmas tree, keep it well watered and keep all wiring away from the tree's water supply.
- Make sure to turn off decorative lighting when leaving the house or going to sleep.
- Place extension cords out of heavily traveled areas.

May your holidays be happy and bright and best wishes for a happy, healthy and prosperous New Year!

New convenience store on Driftway

By David Johnson
Mariner staff

In keeping with America's trend toward gourmet food, area residents have a new place to buy fresh vegetables and fruit, cheese, crackers, hot food to go, gourmet food, deli and convenience stores items at Fresh Beginnings, in Scituate's new Herring Brook Mall on the Driftway, near the lights at Routes 3A and 123.

The 6,700-square-foot store is located in the center of the new mall. "It's too pretty. I couldn't walk away from it," said Fresh Beginnings owner Steven Willette.

Willette and his wife Norma - who will run the new venture - are veterans of the food business. Willette bought the Lambert's Rainbow Fruit store on Route 139 in Pembroke about six months ago. He runs it as a franchise.

He had worked with Lambert's for 20 years - starting and managing their Brockton store for ten years and previously working at their Dorchester store.

He said the Scituate store's 15 employees will come from the Pembroke store at first, but that he will hire new employees from the area eventually.

Willette said he chose to locate in the Herring Brook Mall because, "I think in the next couple of years it's going to be an attraction in that area. It's very well built. The workmanship is very good."

The mall is also attractive, he said, because of the high income of nearby residents and the limited competition.

Fresh Beginings will be open Monday - Saturday from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. and Sunday from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m., all-year-long, only closing for Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's Day.

Other holidays, like the Fourth of July, will be half holidays. Willette said they plan to do a lot of corn, cook outs and salads at that time of year.

The store will offer "quality, price, convenience, atmosphere and personality," Willette said. He explained that they will buy produce daily and will offer personalized service.

People can order cheese and cracker platters, (made on the premises) roses and fruit baskets which the store will send out anywhere in the country.

Although the store does not yet have a liquor license, Willette said he has taken the first steps to obtain one. He would like to sell wine and beer. In the meantime, the store will make up cheese platters around a bottle of wine brought in by the customer.

Fresh Beginnings will also fill special orders from Boston. "We can give you anything you want," Willette said.

He will sell 75 kinds of cheese, displayed in the four-tiered, 12-foot-long case; hot food to go, salads, produce and convenience items.

In December, Fresh Beginnings will sell Christmas trees, wreaths and other seasonal items.

Originally from Dorchester, Willette lived in Pembroke before moving to Hanson with his wife and two children - a boy and a girl ages nine and seven.

COUPON RESULTS

Lucia & John Blaser, owners of Fantastic Sam's of Scituate, were delighted with the response to their Mariner Merchant coupon.

"We received a total of 116 coupons from the Mariner Merchant. Forty-two coupons were repeat guests, sixty-five were new guests, and an additional nine coupon returns are unknown"

We have to admit, when the account representative first proposed The Mariner Merchant coupon, we were more attracted by the cost per thousand than its potential...With some stiff competition, the Merchant outdid its competition in cost per return, and final numbers. We're believers. We're already signed on for 1989."

Lucia added she's has also been pleased with Fantastic Sam's Mariner display ads.

Since we opened, Mariner display advertising has brought in 12% of our customers, which my corporate franchise feels is an excellent display result."

Your business can experience the same increase in sales. Call your account representative or Judy Almeida, Sales Manager for further details.

Winter safety tips for the home

Americans facing an energy shortage are turning to alternate sources of home heating.

The old pot-bellied and Franklin Stove market is suddely zooming. Space heaters are selling rapidly, or coming out of storage. Fireplaces are burning wood and man-made logs.

All of the these supplementary heat measures can be good.

But they can introduce the danger of fire into homes.

The U.S. Fire Administration offers the following home fire safety tips:

ROOM HEATING

Space heaters and heating stoves are used throughout the nation to increase the warmth in rooms. They do the job, but can be dangerous. To use them safely:

- Never use fuel burning appliances without proper vents to the outside. Burning fuel (kerosene, coal or propane, for example) produces deadly fumes.
- Be sure your heater is in good working condition. All room heaters need frequent checkups and cleaning. A dirty or neglected heater is a critical fire hazard.
- Use only the proper fuel for each heater. Never introduce a fuel into a unit not designed for that fuel.
- Never quicken a fire with kerosene or gasoline.
- Keep gasoline, or other flammable liquids stored outside of the home at all times.
- Maintain adequate clearance in all directions around space heaters and heating stoves. (Surrounding surfaces should not become too hot for your bare hands.)
- Use a screen around stoves or space heaters which have open flames. Give the heater adequate clearance from walls and combustibles, such as a clothes rack, curtains, beds, or other furniture.
- If you use an electric heater, be sure your house wiring is adequate. Avoid overloading the circuit. Avoid overloading extension cords.
- Avoid using electric space heaters in bathrooms, and certainly do not touch one when you're wet.
- When refueling an oil unit, avoid overfilling it. If cold oil is used, it will expand as it warms up inside your home and may cause burner-flooding; this could cause flare-ups. And don't fill your heater while it is burning.
- Keep young children away from space heaters — particularly when they are wearing nighgowns which can be sucked in by a draft created by the heater and ignited.
- If you are using an approved, UL labeled space heater or heating stove in your bedroom, turn off your heater or turn it low before going to bed. When using a fuel burning heater in the bedroom, open the window. Ventilation prevents suffocation that can be caused by a heater consuming oxygen.
- Use only safety listed equipment.

Holiday tips for the winter gardener

By Joan Pinkham
Mariner staff

The trees are bare at last, pond and brook waters are black as winter's gloom begins. Not to worry!

The holiday spirit of giving is shared by Mother Nature, as December offers not just one, but two, full moons — the Beaver Moon, high in the sky at the start of the month and the full Wolf Moon at year's end.

Cling to the thought that spring is barely 112 wintry days away and that following the winter solstice on the 21st, the days start getting longer, though only a minute or two.

• • •

While December — the Moon of Cold and Long Nights was what the Indians named it — marks the gardening low point for those in the frozen north, there are still things to be done.

Before the snow flies, it's still possible to scatter seeds in sheltered spots in the garden for early blooms of such annuals as cosmos, pinks and pansies.

Fruit trees and grape vines can be pruned and the latter used to make your own holiday wreath. If you haven't started feeding the birds, save your stale breads and donuts, peanut butter, suet and cornmeal to mix with birdseed.

If everyone on your gift list was a gardener, shopping would be a breeze. Leaving out all the more average gifts such as amaryllis bulbs, paper whites, seeds, books and fancy containers, a plant is sure to please.

About 80 percent of holiday potted plants are poinsettias. To keep it healthy, place it near a window where it will get indirect light, free of drafts and hot air registers. If kept at daytime temperatures between 60 and 70 degrees, the colors will not fade. To keep the poinsettia in bloom for 30 days or more, a nighttime temperature of 55 to 60 degrees is ideal.

Cyclamens are handsome plants of white, pink or red color and a cool temperature is the key to a long-life for these plants. Locate in a bright place, keep out of the sun and well watered. It helps to place the pot on a tray of pebbles kept wet or to mist the plant daily.

The Christmas cactus is an old favorite, some plants lasting for years if kept in a bright, sunny location and kept cool. Water sparingly, and if temperature is above 75 degrees, the plant won't flower.

Decorating homes with plants at Christmas should not be diminished by knowing that some of the favorites may be poisonous. An example is the favorite kissing-bough, the mistletoe, which should be kept out of the reach of young children, because the berries are extremely toxic.

Like mistletoe, the berries of evergreen and holly should not be eaten. The bright red berries are tempting to children and can cause intense stomach pains if eaten in large quantity.

Some say that even the favorite poinsettia is dangerous. These warnings arise from an account in 1919 of the poisoning of a child in Hawaii where these plants grow abundantly outdoors. It's wise to keep these decorations on a shelf or high table out of the reach of small ones.

The Jerusalem cherry plant belongs to the family of the deadly nightshades and contains toxic substances that could make someone's Christmas none too happy.

The price tags on some holiday wreaths and greenery this year are high, prompting people to think about making their own.

Clever woman such as Sylvia White of Scituate and Gloria Freitas are both well known on the lecture circuit for their artistic handmade wreaths.

Mrs. White's specialty is dried wreaths made of materials she grows in her yard and finds along the waysides, and Mrs. Freitus is so creative that members of Seaside Gardeners gasped to see what she did with the hated oak leaves so many have been fighting with a rake for weekends on end.

One thing both women have in common is the ability to make everything they do seem so easy that they inspire those who hear their talks to make the effort to copy their works.

So, if you have a few oak leaves left, Mrs. Freitus suggests making a circle of a wire coat hanger, spraying acorns and leaves in gold and copper tones and attaching them to a cardboard circle wired to the former coat hanger.

The handsomest wreath was made with mussels found on the nearby beaches, their pearly sheen set off against a styrofoam base wrapped with blue ribbon. Bayberry stems taped together on a coathanger wrapped with floral tape, weeds, grasses, hydrangea, Queen Anne's lace painted white make beautiful tree ornaments and even the lowly sumac glued to a cardboard circle was stunning.

You can go as wild as the birds when it comes to gift-giving for gardeners who love to have feathered friends in their yard.

If you are handy with the hammer and saw, you can make your gift even more special by building a bird house. The house can be as simple as a box with a roof on it and a hole for the door.

Plastic bleach bottles can make useful houses, and birds don't mind if they are covered with painted-on exotic flowers and leaves.

Five-inch-in-diameter hollow logs are suitable for wren houses, only needing an added flat roof, base and one-inch door hole placed up toward the roof.

A holiday project for your Cub Scout den could be making Mom and Dad a bird house from a large gourd that will swing with the breeze for tree-top oriented nest hunters.

You might also consider the idea of an electric water heater for the birds who find it hard to get a sip of water with everything frozen up solid.

Ever since ancestors burned the Yule log, the fragrance of balsam fir and spruce brings joy to the holiday season.

Trees sparkling with light, wreaths in the window or doors, a garland on the mantlepiece — they are plentiful, although some appeared much too soon as outdoor lights and decorations popped up as early as Thanksgiving weekend.

The most fragrant greens are the balsam fir, spruces, hemlock and pines.

A living tree growing in a pot can be decorated for Christmas then planted outside in the spring. Outside decorations can be made of hemlock with its wealth of little cones and soft feathery branches, but its needles drop quickly when used in the house.

Facing the challenge of wildlife

By Renee Roberts — Orenda Wildlife Trust
Special to the Mariner

Recently, I attended a symposium on wildlife futures, which focused on the increasing challenges faced by wildlife as a result of human expansion. Representatives of various wildlife organizations as well as concerned private citizens took part in the workshops.

There were many topics of discussion, but one of the most thought-provoking was a question broached by an "ordinary" person. She asked, "What can the average citizen do to help?" Too often, members of environmental organizations become so involved in their own groups' activities and problems that they forget about the wealth of ideas, skills and influence to be found in the private sector.

After all, how did any of us start out if not as "ordinary people?" There are an infinite number of ways in which people can make positive changes in the quality of our environment. I have thought of a few and I'm sure you can think of many more.

Educate yourself — Only through education can we make informed decisions about the proper course of action. Learn as much as you can about the natural environment. Go outside. Observe nature, take an interest in the activity going on around you.

Educate your children, watch PBS wildlife specials, read, take responsibility and be aware of your role as a human being in the natural cycle of life.

Recycle and conserve. You have enormous impact as a consumer — in the products you use, the foods you eat, the car you drive — even the gifts you buy this holiday season. Think about how some products affect the environment: furs, cosmetics, perfumes, toxic substances.

Maybe you can consider some alternatives; books, a birdfeeder, something handcrafted or homemade, a membership in a conservation organization or a magazine subscription. The list goes on and on.

Backyard habitats — Every backyard, no matter how small, is a potential wildlife habitat. There are a variety of trees, plants and shrubs which will attract wildlife.

Find out what to plant — some trees and shrubs are food sources, others serve as good nesting sites. Post your property, create your own sanctuary. Set up birdfeeders, nestboxes and feeding stations.

Legislation — Keep abreast of conservation issues on local, state and federal levels. Read the newspaper, attend town meetings, write your legislators, vote — let your voice be heard.

Volunteer — Everyone has valuable skills and abilities. Investigate the background of some of the many wildlife organizations. Find out if their philosophy is compatible with yours. Ask questions; what do they do? What services do they provide? Take advantage of their programs, volunteer, send a donation. Recognize that we are all part of a living ecosystem. If it dies, we all disappear.

Library book-buying

Within the past month the Cohasset School libraries have received several grants for purchasing books.

At Osgood a $400 PSO Grant raised through book fairs has provided for replacing a number of old worn out favorites as well as a set of new books on families in different countries — for example, A Family in Jamaica, A Family in Australia. . .Several autographed copies of local author, Jan Brett's, latest books were also part of this grant. METCO funds have provided another grant for a set of exciting new biographies for the younger set.

At the Deerhill School a $200 PSO Grant has enabled the library to acquire The Listening Library — a set of books and cassettes which provides another dimension to the fiction collection and has already proven extremely valuable for motivating the reluctant reader. . .

The Jr/Sr. High School has also been the recipient of a donation from the Newcomers Club last spring and more recently their gift from Bookport at Lincoln Plaza. These gifts have enabled us to acquire a new set of paperbacks — sure to please even the most reluctant reader. . . .For all these grants we are most grateful.

Some of the new "good reads" at the Jr./Sr. High School include: Ellen Conford's, The Things I Did for Love — "Stephanie not only learns more than she bargained for, but must also deal with her own emotions on the subject when she undertakes a research project on love. . ."

Harry Mazer's The Girl of His Dreams — "Willis Pierce slowly realizes that the girl of his dreams and his goal of running against one of the world's greatest milers can both be his with a little hard work and honest effort."

Susan Peusner, The Year Without Michael — "When the teenager Michael Chapman disappears without a trace, his family struggles with their loss". . .

At Deerhill, good reads abound and include the following:

James and Deborah Howe's, Bunnicula: A Rabbit Tale of Mystery — "If readers like shaggy dog stories at all, they'd have to search heard to find a funnier one". . . followed by The Celery Stalks at Midnight — another sure to please favorite in this series, filled "with puns, wild chases and slapstick humor!". . .and particularly fine for the season is Carol Snyder's Ike and Mama and the Seven Surprises, set in the Bronx about 1918, this story is full of charm and the warmth of family life celebrating Hanukkah and a boy's preparation for his Bar Mitzvah. . .and The Best Christmas Pageant Ever by Barbara Robinson in which "The Herdmans, absolutely the worst kids in the history of the world, discover the meaning of Christmas when they bully their way into the leading roles of the local church nativity play."

And finally at Osgood — "favorite reads" include: I Love Hanukkah by author/illustrator, Marilyn Hirsh in which "a young boy learns all about dreidls, potato pancakes and other Hanukkah traditions" . . .or Jan Brett's exquisitely illustrated Twelve Days of Christmas or My Grandfather Retired Today by Elaine Knox-Wagner, this story depicts a little girl and her grandfather whose retirement from the barber shop brings about some bittersweet feelings as they both close up the shop together.

If the school libraries could have a wish list for the holiday season it would be for more volunteers to help at the Osgood and Deerhill libraries and for a new computer to automate the Jr./Sr. High School library. . .But in the meantime all of the library/media staff at each of the three schools wish for everyone in the community the blessings and peace of the season.

Consider the children

The Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children (MSPCC) reminds you this is a high stress time for families. In the rush of shopping, wrapping and holiday happenings, are you considering your children?

Some tips for easing holiday stress:

* Secure adequate child care.
* Make time for young children to share their day.
* Examine all toys for safety.
* Minimize the commercialism of gift-giving. Competition for toys heightens a child's anxiety.
* Don't leave children alone in cars, even briefly!
* Maintain household routines, as children need schedules.
* Teach children not to open doors to strangers.
* Require the "buddy system" — holding another's hand in crowded stores and mall.

Bethany Quintin top skater

Bethany Quintin, a sixth grade student in Mr. Becker's class, recently won the New England Regional Intermediate Ladies Figure Skating Championship.

The Championship is a combined event composed of freestyle and compulsory figures. There is no age limit and she skated against 32 competitors. The four-day event is comprised of elimination rounds and a final round. Bethany now qualifies to compete in the Eastern Sectional Championship to be held in Darien, CT. in January. In her division, she will compete against 12 of the top skaters from the eastern third of the country.

Just prior to the New England Regional Championship, Bethany was invited by Harvard University to perform in the "Evening With Champions," a fund-raiser for the Jimmy Fund. Skating before thousands of people, she enjoyed performing along with Olympic and National Figure Skating Champions for such a worthy cause.

Helpful hints for the holiday babysitter

Good babysitters are always in demand. With the holiday season fast approaching there are many opportunities for responsible sitters to get a job.

Parents have one basic reason for hiring a sitter — namely their children's safety.

Babysitting is a serious job to be learned, practiced and improved on. It's a business. The sitter gives definite services and satisfactions in return for an agreed on rate of pay. Sitting is often a pre-teen and teen first paid job.

Sitting is a big responsibility and is a preparation for parenting and other areas of family living.

Babysitters should exemplify the following characteristics:

1. Love and understanding. The sitters usually understand and love children.

2. Maturity. Maturity is more than age; it's living up to the expectations of the job. It involves dependability and levelheadedness.

3. Business-like attitude. Parent and sitter should agree ahead of time on pay, arrival times, duties and safe conduct in the home.

4. Health. Sitters should be in good physical health and parents should be equally considerate about exposing sitters to sick children.

5. Adaptability. Every household is different so a sitter should be alert to the differences in routines and customs of families.

6. Good manners and ethics. A sitter should be courteous and respect the privacy of families. A sitter can decline further jobs with a family that leaves an unfavorable impression.

7. Safety. Children should be protected from accidents so a sitter must watch children at all times. The children should be kept away from the dangers found in homes.

8. Job preparedness. One needs to have some knowledge on feeding, dressing, diapering, bathing, and entertaining children. Some sitters have had the opportunity to care for younger brothers and sisters.

A preview of the CHS winter sports scene

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

CHS WINTER SPORTS PREVIEW

This winter is going to be totally different for Cohasset head hockey coach Dennis Walsh.

Walsh does not have the good fortunes of last year's best formidable scoring tandem in the state, last year's offensive defenseman and last year's reliable goaltender.

Gone from last year's Division Two South finalist (lost to Duxbury in overtime, 4-3) are Danny Pompeo, Todd Fitzpatrick and Craig Mulcahy, who scored all of the Cohasset goals against Duxbury, and Peter Sandblom, respectively.

However, Walsh can rely on two experienced defensemen for the 1988-89 campaign. The two retuurning veterans are captains Ned Chase and Brian Pompeo who according to Walsh, will alternate at forward occasionally to give the Skippers some scoring punch. Pompeo was the third leading scorer on the club last year behind older brother Danny and Fitzpatrick.

"Brian will be our all-purpose player. He will get a lot of playing time this season," explained Walsh.

Chase, a six-foot, two-inch menace, is a solid performer on the blue line. He is also an excellent puck-handler when bringing it out of the opponents' attacking zone.

First-year starter Joel Reidy will try to fill the shoes of the departed Sandblom between the pipes. Reidy should have no problem adjusting to the new surroundings, considering he was selected to the all-league team as goalie in soccer.

As usual, the overall depth will become a problem for the Skippers during the season. Then again, most people thought that the lack of personnel would be an irritation last year, but Cohasset came within two games of reaching the state finals.

Last year, Cohasset's first-line offense and defense played three-quarters of every game. Walsh hopes that this situation never occurs this season, but the potential is there. Walsh believes he can squeeze out at least two productive scoring lines.

Besides Pompeo, forwards Mike Luddington and Jim Gallagher, Paul Marks and Joel Whitman will challenge for the open slots. Brian Curran is currently out for a month with a broken foot, but will add experience when he returns to the lineup.

Defensively, John McDonald will help out Pompeo and Chase back there.

"The kids realize the situation going into this work; they are determined to work harder," he said. "We are looking for the younger players to contribute this season. We are going to be a close-checking team that relies on low-scoring contests."

The fourth-year coach (during that span, he has brought Cohasset to the tournament twice in his three years) predicts Duxbury and Hanover are the two schools to watch out for in 1989.

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

It was certainly a year to remember for the Cohasset High girls' basketball team. Last spring, they defeated Frontier Regional at the Worcester Centrum to become the Division Three champions (the girls redeemed themselves after losing the state championship game in 1986 to Bartlett by one point). Can head coach Bill Fallon and his troops make another return visit to Worcester in the spring? It is rather doubtful because how do you replace four solid performers from last year's state title club (Liz O'Leary, Marge Murphy, Cindy Spooner and Debbie Hartley). But, then again, I wouldn't bet my house mortgage on it because there is always that possibility, especially with two experienced players coming back to direct the feasible journey.

The two returning players are captain Kristin Ellinger and Sara Bishop, who will step into a starter's role after being used primarily as the first substitute off the bench last year.

"Besides being a good defensive player, we will count on Kristin for her offensive scoring as well. We did not need her scoring last year, but, with everybody gone, it is required this winter," said Fallon.

Rounding out the other starters include Nancy Reilly, Heather MacDonald and sophomore point guard Barbara Lagrotteria. The first player to come off the bench this year for Cohasset is senior forward Amanda Church.

"It is certainly going to make a tremendous impact on our club without those four players. However, it is not as bad as most people think," Fallon said. "Our depth will be a factor because it is not as deep as last year. Our strengths are that we will be a good defensive team and the potential to be a good rebounding club. Also, we have been working on the half-court game.

Fallon feels that the team's objectives in the 1988-89 season are to make the state tournament again (Cohasset has qualified for it five years in a row) and to be very competitive in the South Shore League.

Fallon predicts that Norwell will challenge Cohasset for the small schools title this season.

BOYS' BASKETBALL

Cohasset has lost scoring machine Bryan Edwards, the state's all-time scoring leader to Boston College. In the past six years, head coach Ed Minelli has guided his team to a 111-12 mark with five straight South Shore Small Titles. Minelli expects a lot from 6'2" forward Jeff Bryant and 6'2" guard Lincoln Marsac, whom he says is "a player of the future."

"This change is good for us. We're not expected to win. We expect to be competitive, but we do have limited experience. the kids have never been associated with a losing season."

Next week Wrestling and Gymnastics.

Recreation Dept. starts winter programs

The Cohasset Recreation Department's first trip of the season is scheduled for Sunday, Dec. 18. All participants should report to town hall at 5:15 a.m. Those who are renting equipment, or taking a lesson, should bring $11 into the office before boarding the bus, unless you have registered for the special beginner package. The beginner package includes a lesson and equipment rentals in the fee.

Because this is the first trip of the season, it is suggested you try on your equipment prior to the trip, and make certain your boots fit and bindings are adjusted. Your skis might need a coat of wax as well.

The second trip of the season is to Ragged Mt. Monday, Jan. 16, the Martin Luther King holiday, and registration details will soon be available. However, early registration is advised as the trip must be paid three weeks prior to the trip date. Also, the trips fill up very quickly.

BASKETBALL PROGRAM

All participants of the Recreation/Boosters Basketball program should now have their schedule for the year. If not, please check with your team coach who will provide you with one.

CHRISTMAS VACATION PROGRAMS

The recreation department will conduct a structured activities program at the Deer Hill School gym, during Christmas vacation for the following grades, during the following days and times:

Tuesday, Dec. 27 through Friday, Dec. 30; Grades K, 1 and 2: 9 a.m. to Noon, Grades 3, 4, 5 and 6: 12:30 to 3:30 p.m.

There will be no registration or fee for this program. However, the number of children allowed to attend will be limited for safety purposes. Recreation department staff members will conduct a variety of structured, low-organized games and activities, as well as team sports. Should weather conditions allow, groups will be taken outside for sports and group activities. Children must wear sneakers, and should be dropped-off/picked-up at the designated times for their grades. If demand indicates, arts and crafts will also be offered on a daily basis.

OTHER PROGRAM INFORMATION

During the school vacation period, December 21 through January 3, none of the regularly-scheduled youth and children's recreation programs will meet. However, all the adult programs will meet except those on the holidays, or holiday eves. Regularly scheduled programs for youth and children will resume during the week of January 2.

Should you be interested in any of the following programs, you may call the recreation office at 383-6791. Registrations for these programs are currently being accepted: Aerobic Exercise classes, (ages 15 and over-5 classes weekly), adult co-ed Volleyball, adult women's Volleyball, (ages 16 and over), Furniture Refinishing classes, (held Thursday mornings), Dog Obedience training classes, (dogs must be minimum of 3 months old, handlers age 12 and over), Blue Hills Ski Lessons, (ages 7-18), Bridge classes, (Monday mornings), Ski Trips, (ages 10-18). New children's programs are scheduled to begin during January 1989.

Announcements will also be sent home from school. Basketball league clinics begin again Saturday, Jan. 7.

Dwyer's appeal

The owner of Dwyer's Cleaning Spot will appeal the building inspector's decision about rebuilding its headquarters at a Zoning Board of Appeals public hearing Thursday, Jan. 5, at 8 p.m. at Town Hall.

Dwyer's is rebuilding its headquarters at 754 Chief Justice Cushing Highway after a $1 million fire destroyed the building last summer.

Building Inspector Don Robbins issued a cease and desist order Oct. 20 after being asked to investigate the site by planning board member Al Moore.

Robbins explained in his letter to owner Robert Dwyer that he had the right to rebuild what was in place.

"Now I find that instead of a one and a half story building, we have a two and a half story building," said Robbins.

He explained that any extension or enlargement requires a special permit from the ZBA and any extension over 200 feet requires a site plan review from the planning board.

Dwyer indicated during an informal talk at the Nov. 2 planning board hearing that the new main office and central processing met local zoning requirements.

But last month, Robbins reiterated that Dwyer should seek a special permit from the ZBA and site plan review from the planning board.

In addition, the town was granted a preliminary injunction in superior court Dec. 2 prohibiting further construction on the second floor of the building.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson said the action was taken at the direction of the planning board.

Tree chipping dates

Arrangements have been made with the Tree and Park Department to accommodate disposal of Christmas trees at the Cedar Street municipal landfill. Trees can only be brought to the landfill during the following days and times:

Dec. 30, 8 a.m. to noon (Friday);
Dec. 31, 8 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. (Saturday);
Jan. 4, 8 a.m. to noon (Wednesday);
Jan. 7, 8 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. (Saturday)
Jan. 14, 8 a.m. to noon (Saturday).

No trees will be accepted at any other time at the landfill. They also must be cleaned of all metal products such a wires, nails, etc.

No third term

Selectman Cliff Mitman will not seek a third term.

He announced Monday night that a new job as a management consultant has forced him to spend more time on those responsibilities.

Board members expressed their regrets about Mitman's decision.

Prior to his two terms on the board of selectmen, the 49 year-old Beach Street resident served two terms on the town's personnel committee.

School capital needs

School Supt. Stephen Hart told the school committee Monday night, Dec. 19, that he is requesting two new school buses and a mini bus next year as part of a five year capital outlay projection submitted to the capital budget committee.

Estimated cost would be $87,000, he said.

That would bring Cohasset's total to seven buses and two mini-vans, according to Hart, who compiled the projection.

"We do five routes now," he said. "We need one as a spare, and one for athletic activities and field trips.

"We'll look at whether it is less expensive to rent than buy," he added.

"We'll also look at used buses."

Also requested for 1989 is replacement of flat, tar and gravel roof at the Osgood School at an estimated cost of $100,000, he said.

State reimbursement would be possible, added Hart.

The slate roof has been repaired, according to Hart, but there is a leak in the front of the building from the roof.

"We should replace it," he said. "It's 30 years old.

"We should do it rather than wait for more damage to be done."

In 1990, some $75,000 will be requested to complete the junior/senior high school auditorium renovation, said Hart.

That will include installation of acoustical ceiling, and side sound panels, as well as completion of reupholstering seats.

He said that the project has been partially completed, but more funding is necessary.

Also in 1990, about $1,400 is needed to repair a burner at the junior/senior high school.

Capital outlay requests for 1991 will include the $90,000 rem val and replacement of glass block wall and windows at Cohasset High School, said Hart.

State reimbursement would be possible, he said.

The work would be the second phase of a window replacement program necessitated by the fracturing of glass blocks which resulted in deterioration of windows, according to Hart.

In 1992, the school department will request the $75,000 installation of unit zone ventilation system at the Osgood School.

In 1993, $50,000 will be requested to renovate Sullivan Gym, replace the lighting and sound system, according to Hart.

The school department will request $100,000 in 1994 to replace windows at the Deer Hill School.

Clarification

In last week's edition of the Cohasset Mariner it was stated in an article about one-day liquor licenses that Kimball's By The Sea pays $600 a year for a club license.

In fact, Kimball's pays the town $1,225 for an inn-holder's license. In addition, there are 12 to 14 associated licenses necessary to operate the motel and restaurant business, bringing Kimball's total license fee to $2,100 each year.

Kimball's manager, Daniel Leahy, made the argument that establishments such as Kimball's are required by law to operate with such licenses, although some establishments, such as the community center, are allowed to apply for one-day liquor licenses which carry a fee of $25. He noted that such establishments are given the one-day licenses frequently throughout the year, although they do not carry the liability insurance and are not subject to the numerous local and state regulations as are the club and inn-holder licensees.

Zoning board gets set to approve Deck Point

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

Zoning Board of Appeals members indicated at their Dec. 15 meeting that they will vote in favor of the town's first affordable housing complex on 16 acres off Route 3A at their next meeting early next year.

But members said that the comprehensive permit for the proposed Deck Point project will come with a number of conditions including eliminating 22 of the 128-units to make way for a central open space area.

The board was to have voted in time for a Dec. 26 legal deadline, but the attorney for Deck Point agreed to an extension.

Atty. Robert Devin agreed, "if there is no question that it will be granted, but is a matter of conditions."

The board is scheduled to vote on a draft decision written by board chairman Myrna Putziger Thursday, Jan. 5. If any revisions are needed, a final vote will be taken Tuesday, Jan. 10.

Cohasset's housing partnership committee, selectmen, planning board, conservation commission and health board have all opposed the project.

But the ZBA faces stiff opposition if it denies the application.

Board member Mark DeGiacomo said that of 200 denials of comprehensive permit appealed to the Housing Appeal Committee, only seven have come out in favor of the town.

Deck Point developers are requesting a comprehensive permit which would allow them to bypas some local zoning in exchange for providing affordable housing in the residential condominium on sloping land at 81-119 King St.

The project would come under the Homeownership Opportunity Program and at least 25 percent of the units would be priced as "affordable," an average of $78,500.

Qualified homebuyers under HOP may put downpayments as low as five percent and borrow the balance at interest rates as low as five percent.

Amenities include a 20-by-50 foot swimming pool and two-level clubhouse, tennis and basketball area, three tot lots, two barbecue areas with cook-outs and picnic tables, and a gazebo.

Member Terrence Farrell said Dec. 15, "There isn't adequate open space for recreational use on the site itself.

"They need to make it more livable, and more attractive for children to stay there."

He said that a central open space is intersected by a gazebo.

"We want this to be attractive and safe," he said, and proposed eliminating the 22 units to make more open space.

"It's really going to be a neighborhood, so it should be self-sustaining," said Farrell, who noted that the nearest playing field is at the Deer Hill School.

"If this neighborhood has adequate open space, it's going to be a very positive addition to the housing stock in Cohasset."

Farrell said that the enlarged open space area "is the center of the development."

"It gives it a nice neighborhood feeling," he said.

Farrell also said that the developer should install a sidewalk along the perimeter of the property on Route 3A as well as street lighting.

"They should also obtain all permits and construct a pedestrian crosswalk to tie it into the (neighboring) Jonathan Livingston Square improvement," he said.

Farrell said that the shops at Jonathan Livingston Square would be attractive to children and adults.

"We should insist that there be a safe way to get across the street," he said.

"By encouraging a larger play area on the site, it would discourage crossing the street.

"We should encourage a safer pedestrian crosswalk, and it's important that we condition the permit on these issues."

"I don't think it's a bad site (for the project)," added Farrell.

Putziger said she voted at a previous town meeting to rezone the land residential.

Both Farrell and Putziger agreed that a proposed bus stop should be moved from the base of a secondary entrance to the main entrance.

Putziger said she was concerned about the phased construction of the project, and the ability to pay for facilities when only half of the project is completed.

She suggested a $60,000 escrow account for the annual cost of running facilities such as the leaching field.

Member Barbara Power said that the water department was concerned about adequate water pressure.

"There's no reason they can't have a pump with an emergency generator," said Putziger.

"I don't want to approve an open leaching field," added Putziger.

"It's in their front yard, close to the road.

"I think it's just an abomination to have an open leaching field in the front yard."

"The term open leaching field conjures a bubbling, gurgling gunk — but it's not," said Farrell.

School rules for extra activities

Parents of Cohasset Junior/Senior High School students will soon be receiving in the mail a copy of the extra curricular regulations.

"We just want to re-emphasize the policy so that everyone understands," said School Supt. Stephen Hart at the Dec. 19 school committee meeting.

"It will probably go out after the first of the year," he said.

In a cover letter with the regulations, principal Mary Ellen Gallagher said the school has received inquiries requesting clarification of school rules and regulations governing students' participation in extra curricular activities.

She said the regulations regard policies on eligibility, drugs and alcohol and attendance requirements.

School committee member Russ Reidy suggested that the athletic director be responsible for every team being aware of the regulations.

"The same person should present this to everyone in the presence of the coach," he said.

"Then there is no question that everyone has read it."

"I'd like to see a discussion with students," said School Committee chairman Diana Kornet.

"This is to remind parents as well as students," she said.

Member Nancy Sandell said she would like to see students who run for school office act as role models.

"They shouldn't run for something if they are not going to accept the responsibility," agreed Kornet.

Student school committee representative Kim Dwyer said that students pay attention to the regulations so that they won't jeopardize their eligibility in sports or other activities.

"Sports is a big thing," she said.

The regulations are:

• Scholarship - students must be passing in at least 20 periods of prepared work, per week.

• Alcohol - students shall not use or have possession of a beverage containing alcohol regardless of quantity. Students violating this standard shall be suspended from the team, club, production or activity he or she is currently participating in. Athletes shall be suspended for the season along with being subject to MIAA rules and regulations.

• Drugs - students shall not use or consume, possess, buy, sell or give any substance defined by law as a drug unless specifically prescribed by a doctor for personal medical use. Students violating this standard shall be suspended from the team, club, production or activity he or she is currently participating in. Athletes shall be suspended for the season along with being subject to MIAA rules and regulations.

• Attendance - all students must be in attendance at school in order to participate in an extra curricular activity scheduled for that day. Students absent from school on Friday, may not participate on that day or on Saturday. Students absent on the day preceding a holiday may not participate on that day or the holiday. Students who have an excuse acceptable to the principal will be allowed to participate in an extra curricular activity if given permission by the principal.

Duck pond to freeze

At the suggestion of Selectman Rocco Laugelle, the duck pond on Cohasset will be prepared for winter skating.

The duck pond, which has been a popular winter skating spot for generations, is currently under repair. In the fall, the water was drained and renovations were started in what selectmen believed would be a $38,900 repair project.

Soon after contractor Jeffrey Morse began the sandblasting, the concrete bottom gave way and crumbled. It has remainded in that unfinished condition while selectmen faced the prospect of spending another $25,000 for a coating of gunite along the bottom.

Engineering consultant John Modzelewski advised selectmen to wait until the spring before attempting the new surface coating.

Selectmen decided to eliminate the new lining. In the interim, town workers will cut off the steel reinforcement rods that are currently protruding from the bottom of the pond. The contractor has promised to replace the water circulation pump and the gate valve.

Selectmen were concerned about the safety of skaters, but they decided that the walls of the pond pose no danger.

Shuttle drivers honored with Christmas lunch

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The Council on Aging and the many drivers who make the senior shuttle a success, were honored with a Christmas luncheon this week.

Dan Leahy of Kimball's By The Sea hosted the annual Volunteer Recognition Luncheon for about 65 volunteers Tuesday afternoon.

Senator William Golden made a brief appearance, recalling all the familiar faces in the crowd, including his former Boy Scout den mother Mrs. Simeone, and childhood neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Gerard Keating.

"I'm here to say thank you," he said, noting that in this season of blessings, "you have been there every day, helping the people of this town."

Althea Stamp of Cohasset FISH, explained that volunteers are always needed for that local organization. Trips must be made daily to area hospitals, she said, including thrice-weekly trips for dialysis patients.

The guest speaker at Tuesday's event was Phyllis Dane, head of voluntary services at South Shore Elder Services.

A former longtime member of the Marshfield School Committee, Dane talked about the history of volunteerism in the United States - a phenomenon that began in the 1700's. Because the new colonies were governed by a system 3,000 miles away, and their economic centers were across the Atlantic Ocean, early settlers had to depend on each for various services.

Senior volunteers honored . . .

"Volunteerism prepared the way for independence," she noted.

People volunteer their time and services "so we can be a part of something," Dane noted.

Seventeen years ago she began the volunteer program in the Marshfield schools with 25 other parents. Today, that program includes more than 100 volunteers.

Five hundred volunteers are necessary to prepare and deliver the Meals of Wheels sponsored by South Shore Elder Services. They participate, she said, "because they have been touched to the core by a smile, a nod, by a soft touch - money can't buy that wonderful feeling.

"You truly care," she told the Cohasset audience. "You make a difference that is real and so important."

Gerard Keating of the Council on Aging noted that volunteering has become "a way of life in Cohasset."

And Senior Center Director Kathy Bryanton added her praise. "You are instrumental in keeping the wheels moving," she told the drivers.

Bryanton recalled the recent ecumenical service hosted by St. Anthony's Church and the Council on Aging. More than 250 people, many of them residents of area nursing homes, attended the event.

"Working with you," she said, "has probably been the best experience of my life."

IT'S A FACT

Chiropractic Can Help

Chiropractors have a very special education and training in treating nerve-related health problems caused by spinal misalignment. Chiropractors find the areas along the spinal column where nerves may be "pinched" by a spinal vertebra. After finding the problem, the chiropractor manipulates the misaligned vertebra back toward normal. This restores normal nerve supply and function. The result is that the body heals itself with no drugs, surgery or continued discomfort.

around town

Walt Sweeney was in town a few weeks ago, here to speak to various schools in connection with the M.I.A.A. He looks great, and reports that Nanci is great too. Walt and Nanci send lots of love to all of their friends, and best wishes for a Merry Christmas season.

Happy birthday to Joe Hoffman....his family threw him a surprise party to celebrate his "10,250th day" last weekend, and a super party it was!! Here's to many more, Joe.

We hope that Phil Lehr is much better as he reads this, after undergoing surgery recently. May Santa bring you a speedy recovery, Phil!

The Community Center has a nifty idea planned for after the holidays, a good way to start your year off on the right foot. They are holding a 90 minute workshop on January 4th, for anyone interested in learning how to get the most from their diet and exercise program. It is a highly personalized session which will give the participants information to help increase their energy and maximize their fitness benefits in a minimum amount of time. They will also start people off who aren't involved in a program. It will be taught by Patricia Messing and Normandie Nigh, Directors of the International Fitness Consulting Company - Fit for Success. Pre-registration for this course is necessary, call Judy at 383-0088 for more information.

Had a wonderful newsy letter from Kit and Sue Megathlin. Their three sons certainly have grown up, their baby, Mark is a senior in college (Union College.) Shawn is a married man now, living in Cleveland, Ohio and he is a second year law student at Case Western Reserve. Craig has been working at L.L. Bean for three years, and enjoys it a lot. And, Kit and Sue have purchased a home on Vinalhaven as a true get-away (it is on an island, an hour away by ferry.) Wouldn't Norman and Evie be proud of these folks?

□ Margie Murphy, a 1988 graduate of CHS is averaging 18 minutes per game for the Salem State College girls basketball team. Recently, she scored 14 points in an 86-64 win over Pine Manor.

We certainly hope that Mary Williams is up and around as she reads this, and on her way to her winter in Florida.

This is the week of the "Santa Express." On Christmas Eve a postal messenger dressed as Santa Claus will deliver special "Santa Express" Christmas packages to addresses in Cohasset, for the cost of express mail...your presents have to be there by today (Dec. 22nd) and can weigh up to 70lbs. The receipient will get a card alerting them that Santa is coming on Christmas Eve....what fun!

Heard from Ken, Pat and Tom Leicher, they still love it down south. They are hoping to make a trip to Cohasset in the Spring, it will be good to see them.

The Second Congregational Church held its annual Christmas pageant last Sunday, and it was wonderful. The costumes were terrific, the cast was full of animals, angels and shepherds. There was an added treat, there were two choices for the role of Baby Jesus! Carolyn or Christiane Muir (twins of Mr. and Mrs. Craig Muir) were both named on the program, guess they chose by which one was the happiest at the time. Don't know how they did that, they were both perfect! In any case, whichever little one was Jesus helped Rod Milburn sing "O Holy Night" beautifully.

Hats off to Abigail Adams, who competed in AHSA Medal Finals, with her horse, Waltzing Wave. Abby has certainly had a banner career, one to be proud of. For now, she and Waltzing Wave will be on the sidelines, as Abby begins her college career. She will be leaving for Hobart College in January.

If everyone in your house is wondering what to do this winter, check this issue of the Mariner. The winter sports schedule is listed. Tack it to your bulletin board, and make your plans to support our teams.

We congratulate Bethany Quintin, who recently won the New England Regional Intermediate Ladies Figures Skating Championship, competing against 32 others. Bethany is a sixth grade student at Deer Hill School, in Mr. Becker's class.

That's the news from here. Here's hoping that all you have a wonderful Christmas, and that you get everything that you asked Santa for. Call me with your Christmas news, surely there is a lot to report!!

Selectmen not to reconsider Crystal Woods

Selectmen this week rejected a suggestion by member Martha Gjesteby to reconsider last week's vote to oppose the Crystal Woods development off Ledgewood Drive.

Last week, board members voted 4 to 1 to oppose the development which will include about 20 units of affordable housing. Developer John Hurley is applying to the zoning board for a comprehensive permit which will allow him to bypass certain health, zoning and planning regulations in return for the affordable units. If the comprehensive permit is approved, state monies will be provided to subsidize the construction.

At last week's selectmen's meeting, which was attended by about 50 abutters opposed to the project, Selectman Gjesteby did not comment on the project, and voted to oppose it. Only Selectman Cliff Mitman voted to support Hurley's application for state funding, explaining it would allow local officials to provide more input into the permit process.

"I agree with Cliff that we should try to work out a consensus of the abutters. We should try and formulate all the reasons they are opposed to this project and see if we can work out a solution, rather than simply opposing it altogether," Gjesteby explained.

"By denying this, it has cost selectmen all leverage in this issue," she continued. "I sympathize with the neighbors, but the town has signed a housing agreement with the state and we can't go around saying we're opposed to comprehensive permits. We said we would cooperate with the state - we can't just make a blanket statement and say we won't accept any comprehensive permit developments here. When we voted against the Deck Point development, we listed specific reasons, such as the safety and traffic issues. We gave no such reasons during our vote last week."

At the suggestion of Selectman Mitman, board members voted this week to include a list of the reasons why they voted to oppose the Crystal Woods development.

"Every community is going through the same thing," Gjesteby said this week. "What we need is more dialogue with the neighbors who will be living next door to these developments. That needs more clarification in the comprehensive permit law."

Deer Hill special projects

The fifth and sixth talent pool classes have decided to donate their special Christmas project to the Deer Hill School student body. Two lucky students will take home the products of their labor.

Grade six, consisting of Ann Dane, Jessica Jenkins, Corrina McMackin, Candice Buckley, Jeremiah Stevenson, Josiah Slotnick and Dean Volungus made a candy castle complete with turrets and drawbridge.

The fifth grade Talent Pool Class consisting of: Megan Fahey, Lily Faulhayber, Michael Kasameyer, Simeon Ketchum, Megan McNamera, Danielle Nohe, Abagail Pease, Ryan Sawchuck, Laura Slotnick, Conor Magman and Tafana Fiore made a log cabin covered in cookies and candy.

All students at the Deer Hill School will have their names placed in a box. Michael Kasameyer will draw the winners' names. Good Luck and lets hope the winners like to share!

Happy Holidays!

The holidays are upon us, and amid the hustle and the bustle it is the time of year to reflect and hold precious the special warmth emitted from gathering families, the chatter of small voices and the goodness and charity which often receive too little acknowledgement.

We, at Eastern Edison Company, wish you a happy holiday season and offer you these tips to help keep your holidays safe, as well.

- Repair or replace decorative lighting that has loose connections, loose sockets or exposed or frayed wires.
- If you have a Christmas tree, keep it well watered and keep all wiring away from the tree's water supply.
- Make sure to turn off decorative lighting when leaving the house or going to sleep.
- Place extension cords out of heavily traveled areas.

May your holidays be happy and bright and best wishes for a happy, healthy and prosperous New Year!

Editorial

A happy ho . . . ho . . . ho . . . ho . . .ho . . .

Well, it appears that Santa has arrived a little early in Cohasset once again. And what does he have in his bag this year for all the good girls and boys of our town?

Let's take a look inside and see what special presents we've received this year . . .

To local developer Donald Staszko, an opportunity to purchase the Oaks estate, propose some outrageous development, and grab the chance to alienate even more people in town.

To the current owners of the Oaks estate, the good sense to convert the property into office condos and unload a white elephant.

To the board of selectmen, a garage sale featuring all the old artifacts from the town hall cellar - old selectmen excluded.

To the duck pond on the common, a magic wish that would return the water, the ducks, and the children.

To the board of health, sewer department and planning department - peace and harmony in their new Highland Street home.

To Cohasset Heights Ltd. owner Paul Barry, a very quiet year up on the hill.

To Robert Davenport (of Sohier Street), a season's pass to the selectmen's meetings. No one else will take it.

To Kimball's By The Sea manager Dan Leahy, a sympathetic audience at the annual town meeting.

To Selectman Burt Pratt, ownership of a hometown newspaper where never is heard a discouraging word.

To the old Stop and Shop, a tenant.

To the neighbors of the Crystal Woods development, some Christmas spirit.

To the future tenants of Deck Point, a good reason for paying $200,000 to live next door to a commercial dump, two industrial companies, and a state highway.

To the townspeople who paid $1 million for an addition to their town hall, a reason why the job is not finished, but the money is.

To the members of the police and fire station renovation committee (part III), a word of advise - start collecting bottles and cans, because we won't be seeing another $1 million town building project real soon.

To Fire Chief Dan Brock, a big raise this year, or you can threaten to bring back Martin Dooley.

Wait a minute - the chief has another gift. It's a plate of brownies. But don't tell your wife, chief.

To Kathy Bryanton and the Council on Aging, a senior shuttle that won't chip, break, burn, bruise or self destruct. Rev. Keohane has some connections he could probably talk to about this.

To Patriot Ledger correspondent Molly Hochkeppel, a promotion to another town.

To Police Chief Joseph Kealey, no accidents or incidents, an inconspicuous, quiet community - a town without crime.

To Animal Control Officer Bill Quigley, a leash law.

To Richard Barrows, a future in politics.

To Selectman Cliff Mitman, a future out of politics.

To the students of Cohasset High School, an explaination why the taxpayers of this town won't give them adequate playing fields.

To the residents of 60 Elm Street and the two Cohasset nursing homes, a happy holiday to share with someone.

To the Cohasset Mariner, just one story without a typo.

To the school committee, a generous benefactor who owns a school bus factory.

To young families, the possibility to purchase a home here.

To Selectman Martha Gjesteby, a pair of boxing gloves for Monday night action up at town hall;

To Selectman Rocco Laugelle, a matching set;

To the members of the Curtis Estate Action Committee, a happy ending.

To Historical Society Curator David Wadsworth, an IBM computer to replace his quill pen.

To Town Clerk Frances Marks, anything she wants.

To Selectman Jim Gallagher, a Boston team worth rooting for.

Wait a minute . . . Santa just opened a second bag filled with Christmas wishes for the members of Cohasset's finest . . . the fire department.

To Capt. Bobby Silvia, a trip out west for some Colorado powder; to Hap Pompeo, six inches of frost; to Paul McGaffigan, a shuttle ticket; to Matthew Marr, a gift subscription to House Beautiful; to Bill Protulis, a motor home with a red flashing light on top; to Bob Protulis, a permanent address; to Eddie Corbo, a year-round mooring in Scituate; to Tommy Boswell, a gift certificate from AT&T; to Randy Rosano, a one pound can of Mister Donut coffee; to Paul Bilodeau, a Soloflex; to Bill Sestito, a pair of slow sneakers; to Capt. Mark Trask, a franchise for Trask Tackle World; to Capt. Lee Gurry, 12 trips to the Robo car wash; to Ed Struzik, Love potion No. 9.

To Bill Litchfield, a 25-year retirement law; to Eric Winslow, a 19-foot Boston Whaler with trailer; to Frank Mahoney, a gift certificate of ten 2 a.m. calls; to Lenny Davis, a helicoptor for Box 3's; to Tommy Finnegan, ML's for the M.L.S.; to Jim Rooney, a battery certificate from radio Shack; to Jay Fiori, an emergency IV when cable goes out; to Tommy Hernan, anti-scratch truck wax; and to Jim Curley, a ladder truck with a sander on the back.

Sharing the joy of Christmas

Letters

To the Editor:

Here's an idea for families in the Cohasset area who are looking for a project they can do together to share the joy of Christmas with someone less fortunate. In 1984, my wife Diane and I started an organization called Friends of the Americas to reach out to children in Latin America and the Caribbean suffering from war, natural disasters or extreme poverty. Since then, we have founded a hospital, refugee center, five medical clinics and 25 self-help projects in 21 countries of this hemisphere. We help homeless children — refugees, disaster victims, street children, orphans and children living in the marginal areas of the big cities of Latin America. Our most popular project is the Christmas Box Project which allows an American family to put together an individualized gift box for a needy child of a particular sex and age. Families send the boxes to us, and we process and ship them to our chairman in each country — usually the American ambassador or his wife. Each box must be personally handed to the needy child by the ambassador or another American citizen.

Friends' Christmas Box Action Kit provides instructions on how to prepare a box. Each box contains 30 new items, including clothing, school supplies, toys and a small American flag. Most important, it includes a letter and a photo from the family who prepared the box. In the highlands of Guatemala, the slums of Mexico City, the San Blas Islands of Panama, La Mosquitia of Honduras and a thousand other places, Christmas boxes provide a chance for Americans to go where the need is greatest and share with children the joy of Christmas and the generosity of the American people. Here in the states, preparation of a Christmas Box is a chance for families to express our love for the children of Latin America and spend family time together giving of ourselves.

Since 1984, Friends has delivered more than 200,000 Christmas Boxes to needy children, including many prepared by families in the Cohasset area. This year thousands of children in Latin America are hoping and praying that we will remember them. These are children who have never had a single toy or new piece of clothing. We invite you to prepare a Christmas Box this year. To receive Christmas Box Action Kit, call (504) 926-5720 or write Friends, 912 N. Foster, Baton Rouge, La. 70806. Please mention the Cohasset Mariner.

Thanks to merchants for a great fair

To the Editor:

On behalf of the 1988 Cohasset Village Fair we would like to extend our thanks to everyone who helped make this annual event a huge success. While there have been articles published in the last two issues thanking individuals from the appropriate churches for their efforts, we would particulary like to thank, by means of this letter, our local merchants, who each year donate goods, services, etc. Without the continued support of these people, we could not have a profitable event. We hope that all you will take time to read this list and appreciate our local merchants: Reed's Country Way Nurser (the tree), The Strawberry Parfeit (hors d'oeuvres for the dinner), Cohasset Meat & Produce (50 lbs. of hot dogs and rolls), Stop & Shop (gift certificates), Dunkin Donuts (20 dozen doughnuts), Cohasset Liquors (wine for dinner.)

Among the merchants who donated for the Raffle were Hugo's, Red Lion Inn, Liquor Unlimited, Cohasset Jewelers, Flemings, Cohasset Hardware, Kit n' Kaboodle, Nothing More Natural, Sea n' Cheese, Cohasset Texaco, Cohasset Exxon, Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy, F. W. Woolworth.

We hope that we have not missed anyone. Thanks again for your continued support to a very worthwhile event.

Recreation programs for the vacation

The recreation department will conduct an activities program at the Deer Hill School gym during Christmas vacation:

Tuesday, Dec. 27, through Friday, Dec. 30, Grades K, 1 and 2: 9 to noon; Grades 3, 4, 5 and 6: 12:30 to 3:30 p.m.

There will be no registration or fee for this program. However, the number of children will be limited for safety purposes. Recreation department staff members will conduct a variety of structured, low-organized games and activities, as well as team sports. In good weather, groups will be taken outside for sports and group activities. Children must wear sneakers, and should be dropped off/picked up at the designated times for their grades. If there is the demand, arts and crafts will also be offered on a daily basis.

OTHER PROGRAM INFORMATION

During the school vacation period, December 21 through January 1, none of the regularly scheduled youth and children's recreation programs will meet. However, all the adult programs will meet except those falling on the holidays, or holiday eves. Regularly-scheduled programs for youth and children will resume during the week of January 2.

Should you be interested in any of the following programs, you may call the Cohasset Recreation Dept. at 383-6791.

Aerobic exercise classes, (ages 15 and over — 5 classes weekly); Adult co-ed volleyball, adult women's volleyball, (ages 16 and over); furniture refinishing classes, (held Thursday mornings); dog obedience training classes, (dogs must be minimum of 3 months old, handlers age 12 and over); Blue Hills ski lessons, (ages 7-18); bridge classes, (Monday mornings); ski trips, (ages 10-18).

New children's programs will begin during January. Watch for more details. Basketball league clinics begin again Saturday, Jan. 7.

DOG OBEDIENCE CLASSES

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for beginner and intermediate dog training classes by Laurie Cleveland. Classes will be held Wednesday evenings at the GAR Hall in Scituate, starting January 11.

Beginner classes will be from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. and the intermediate/advanced class will be from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m., Wednesday evenings. The fee for the eight-week program will be $25. Checks made payable to the Town of Cohasset may be brought to the first class Wednesday, Jan. 11.

Dogs should be a minimum of three months of age.

The purpose of beginner classes will be to teach novice pet owners basic obedience and responsible pet ownership. Subjects to be covered are proper use of voice corrections, stay commands, getting the dog to come, heel, etc. Helpful hints on ownership and responsibility will also be included. The training will include those exercises beneficial to the pet owner as well as those thinking about eventually showing their dogs in obedience. The intermediate/advanced class is designed for dogs that have completed the recreation department beginner class.

Owners are required to have their dogs equipped with a humane choke chain. The proper size of the chain is determined by measuring the dog's neck and adding four inches. Absolutely no spike collars allowed. It is also strongly suggested that handlers wear comfortable shoes and clothes for this session. For all classes the fee is $25 per dog for the eight-week, one-hour per week program.

To register, call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791. Classes are limited in size; non-residents will be accepted on a space available basis.

SKATING

The following should be used as a guideline for safe ice.

ICE SAFE FOR: 0-30 degrees, 30-40 degrees, 40-50 degrees;

SINGLE SKATERS: 1¾ inches, 2¾ inches, 6 inches;

COUPLES: 2¾ inches, 3¾ inches, 8 inches;

CROWDS: 3¾ inches, 4¾ inches, 12 inches.

These figures are for clear, fresh water ice only; for snow ice add two inches; for water logged ice, add three inches; if skates cut in — go home!

Salt water in mild climates is always treacherous — keep away from it. Also thickness in the 40-50 degree column are safe depths for short periods of time only, testing your weight as you go.

ELMS MEADOW SKATING

The deepest portion of Elms Meadow is towards the Spring Street dam (about 12 to 18 inches) — the shallowest is towards the back of the area, which is about 3 inches.

Do not throw debris on the ice to check for safety. This only clutters up the ice, making skating dangerous, and does not give you an accurate indication of ice strength.

Ragged Mountain Ski Trip

While we celebrate, others toil on Christmas

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Most of us will be gathered with the family, opening presents around the tree.

Others will be sitting behind a desk, gulping down that third cup of coffee by the time we're peeking into the Christmas stocking.

While most of us enjoy a day with family and friends, there are others who will be on duty Christmas day.

For some, it's just another day at the office.

In Cohasset, just about everything is locked up and shut down on Christmas day. Christmas sales will have ended and store owners will be taking a well-deserved day off.

Schools will be closed for vacation and restaurants will stop serving on this one day a year.

But in Cohasset, as in any community, the police and the fire departments are exempt from holidays. The calendar may say Christmas, but to those officers it will be another day on duty.

And in one local establishment, it will be business as usual, as it is 365 days of the year.

Jane McCombs is assistant manager at Kimball's By The Sea. She will be working Christmas Day, a fact of life for employees of the service industry, she said.

"It's no big deal," she stated. "It's just another day at work."

In fact, McCombs will be working alongside her two daughters, Prudence and C.C.

They will probably not work more than five hours Christmas day, and will be home in time for a late afternoon dinner with her husband and mother.

"I actually volunteered to fill in for someone else who wanted the day off," she explained.

The day will be uneventful, McCombs predicted, except in the event of bad weather. If it snows Christmas Eve, the local motel could be jammed with unexpected overnight guests. "Then the next day would be very busy accomodating our guests. But if all goes well, Christmas day will be quiet," she said.

It's tough to get employees to work on Christmas, she conceded. Hotel management never expect days off - "it's always time off on different days," she explained.

New Year's Eve and New Year's Day will be busier for the motel management. Kimball's is offering a special package deal that includes a New Year's Eve dinner and celebration, overnight accomodations and brunch in the motel restaurant on New Year's day featuring a jazz band.

"A lot of people are aware of the dangers of drinking and driving, and they take advantage of a deal like this," McCombs said, noting that reservations for the event have been coming in steadily.

"That night I'll be working and it's going to be very busy," she noted. "Christmas day will be nothing compared to that."

In the police station, veteran Officer Cliff Jones will be on duty.

"Somebody's got to work, it might as well be me," the officer said. In the past 24 years, the Cohasset officer has worked many Christmas days, filling in for younger patrolmen who want to stay home with their families.

"No one did it for me when I was a young man. So I want to make sure I can do it for someone else," Jones said. In fact, this year he will be working a double shift from eight in the morning until midnight.

The boredom of the day is usually as irritating as having to work on a holiday. "It really depends. It can be the most boring day of the year, without a single call. It could be really busy if there are accidents, especially after a holiday party. Sometimes, I've gotten calls from someone in town who just wants to talk to someone because they're so lonely. That will realy get to you," Officer Jones said.

Holidays can be particularly sad for elderly or lonely people in the community, he said. One year he was working on Thanksgiving and just before his shift ended, he was called to the scene of a suicide.

"I went home and my wife had cooked a big holiday dinner. But I couldn't eat a bite," he remembered.

Officer Jones' wife died a year ago, and his five children are grown with families of their own.

"It's a time for young men to be home with their families. It doesn't really matter to me," he said.

"I remember thinking when I was a young cop, 'I wish someone would work for me on Christmas.' No one ever did."

The day will likely be uneventful, he predicted. "It's not like there's going to a lot of armed robberies - everything is closed up," he said.

The 50 year-old officer said the busier time will probably be on Christmas Eve, when partiers are returning home after an evening of holiday revelry. "But by Christmas morning, everyone is home and wants to stay there. It's usually really quiet," he said.

Next door at the fire station, Capt. Mark Trask will be the commanding officer on duty Christmas day. He's been on the force for 12 years and this will probably be his ninth Christmas spent at the station.

"I remember when I first started Deputy Chief Tom Hernan had a tote sheet in his locker. Over 32 years of duty, he probably had six Christmas days completely off," Trask recalled.

"Somebody's got to be here, so we all get called sooner or later."

The men assigned to Christmas duty know a year in advance when the assignments are posted. "There are no surprises," Capt. Trask said. "We usually complain, but it won't do you any good. You just make your plans around work."

Christmas day at the fire station usually stirs some culinary genius among the firefighting chefs.

"We've had some real gems," Capt. Trask said, describing previous Christmas dinners at the station. "We usually have a turkey or a ham and all the fixings. It's a day long project cooking the dinner, just like at home. Then if we get a call in the middle of dinner, we all let out a few groans. After the call, it's back to dinner."

There will be five firefighters on duty this year. As in previous years, single guys may come to work early that evening and relieve the men who are anxious to return home to their wife and children.

"Between the day before Christmas and Christmas night, we tend to have one fire. Mostly it's a case of chimney fires. It never seems to be an exceptionally quiet time, usually because people are using their fireplaces or wood stoves, or they're celebrating and are careless with their cigarettes," the captain recalled.

There was one Christmas night not long ago, he remembered, when the ladder truck was responding to a call on the Hillside. As the truck was stopped at Summer and South Main streets, it was struck by Santa who was behind the wheel of a Volkswagen.

"He never stopped," Capt. Trask stated. "That car smacked right into the side of the ladder truck and kept going. I don't think Santa ever saw us at all."

Most of the people where I work socialize all day. At a nursing home, just sharing of yourself is one of the most important parts of your job. And once you get to know the people, you'll be surprised at how much you get back. There are career opportunities for nurses, nursing assistants, recreational therapists, dietary and housekeeping staff. We offer competitive wages, excellent benefits and flexible hours. But most important, a kind of satisfaction you just can't measure. To find out more, call us. And make a difference.

Town employee learned trade at father's knee

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

When Cohasset's new executive secretary Greg Doyon was growing up in Lisbon Falls, Maine, his father regularly went to town hall to give his opinion on one issue or another.

Now Doyon is the one other people can talk to about town issues.

"I'd like people to know that I'm accessible," said Doyon, 38, who started his new position Nov. 14.

"I'll be fair and objective," he said. "And I will listen.

"But I reserve the right to disagree without being disagreeable."

Doyon replaced Don Andrew who left last summer to become city auditor of Everett. He has a three-year contract.

Former executive secretary in Hopkinton, he was interested in coming to Cohasset for a number of reasons.

"I believed it was an opportunity to reassert myself," he said, "and have more authority in the day to day affairs.

"I like the idea of going from a three-person board of selectmen to a five person board.

"I've always felt that a five person board allows more diversity of opinion which I feel is positive.

"I also looked forward to returning to the South Shore."

Doyon is no stranger to town administration.

While a student at the University of Maine at Orono, he interned with the town manager of Brunswick.

After graduating with a BA degree in public management in 1972, he attended the University of Rhode Island where he studied for a master's degree in public administration.

He also interned with the town manager of Barrington, R.I.

In between schools, he interned with the town manager of Arlington.

"During my freshman year in college," said Doyon, "I knew I wanted to be a town administrator. I switched majors from engineering.

"I like the variety, and the ability to have an impact on running the town.

"I like to deal with the nuts and bolts like finances as well as the human relations aspect of helping people out.

"I'm not a political person.

"I'm only casually interested as a citizen.

"But I'm interested in good management."

After graduation from the master's program, Doyon worked for the State of Maine Bureau of Taxation, Property Tax Department as a property assessment analyst.

"I compiled sales information, and compared local values of property with the market prices to determine sales ratio," he said.

"That was one aspect of the job."

He also checked compliance with state tax laws.

"I found it interesting to a point," said Doyon, who stayed at that position for two years.

"I was responsible for 60 small communities and I travelled alot.

"After a while, it got repetitive.

"But it was another step in experience."

His next position was assistant to the town manager of Brunswick, Me., where he had interned during college.

"If there was a mentor in my professional life, it was the town manager John Bibber," said Doyon.

He said he was impressed with his fairness and ability to deal with people and the town council.

"His concept of what it meant to be a professional manager was to be objective, and fulfill the policies of his bosses," said Doyon.

Greg Doyon

"I enjoyed it very much," said Doyon, who was at that position for four years. "I did a lot of different things.

"Essentially, I was the personnel manager and I was involved in the 911 emergency communication system."

Doyon was also part of a three-member management team which directed the police department for five months during the search of a new chief.

"It was a good job, but there was nowhere to go," said Doyon, whose next position was as town administrator and part time town accountant in Hanover.

"It was difficult to leave Maine," admitted Doyon, "but I had interned in Arlington, and for other towns.

"I'm a small town boy but I had gotten out of Maine for a while.

"I liked Hanover," said Doyon. "It's a very nice community.

"But there was too much work to do and too little time to do it.

"The town was leanly staffed and toward the end of my tenure, it was difficult.

"Since I've left, they have boosted the staff and separated the positions.

"After six years, it was time for a change of scenery for me."

He left to become executive secretary of Hopkinton, a position he held for a year and nine months.

"The two previous administrators had had short terms, each less than a year," said Doyon.

"They didn't have a good track record there.

"It was a challenging position," said Doyon, who was involved in such things as a sewer construction project.

"The selectmen have a different concept of what the executive secretary should be than I have," he said.

"We disagree on the philosophy."

He saw Cohasset's ad for an executive secretary in the Mass. Municipal Association's "Beacon" and was hired from among a number of candidates.

He sees his position as coordinating the various departments, working on the budget and the town's financial forecast.

"I'll also be involved in such issues as the Curtis Estate," he said, "as well as completion of the town hall addition."

According to Doyon, the departments in the Bates building will move to town hall in early January when the phone service is installed.

"There is also a backlog of things to be done," he said.

"I came at a very busy time.

"I find it very challenging and rewarding, and I have very much enjoyed my first month here.

"Cohasset has a lot going on, I have to play catch up and work on the day to day nitty gritty."

Doyon thought the recent special town meeting was "very well run" and had a "very good turnout."

"As town meetings go, it was a very good turnout, particularly for a special."

He considers personnel management and financial management his strengths.

"I like dealing with financial issues and projecting resources," he said.

"I like that aspect of the job.

"I also like employee relations."

A bachelor, Doyon enjoys running, skiing, bicycling and a bit of golf.

He recently moved to Cohasset.

"I don't sail but the thought has occurred to me to learn windsurfing," he said.

"When you live this close to the water, it's really on your mind."

Doyon said he enjoys living and working in a small town.

"I never really wanted to go to a big city," he said.

"Eventually, I'd like to be a town manager. That's my long term goal.

"But I don't see myself as manager of a community of 50,000 people.

"I grew up in a small town; that's my orientation.

"I enjoy living in a small community and working in the community I live in."

Special vacation programs

The South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell is offering, for the first time, special, day-long programs for children during the December school vacation.

"Wildlife in Winter," to be held on Wednesday, Dec. 28, 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., will teach children how animals survive the winter. Visiting the Center's woods and nearby Jacobs Pond with SSNSC naturalists, the children will seek out animal shelters and tracks, do some bird watching, play games, and perform activities, all geared to teach them the hibernating, migratory, and wintering habits of the animals. Indoor crafts and other activities will complement the childrens' experiences outdoors.

The second program, "Drawing and Painting in Nature," will be held on Thursday, Dec. 29, from 9:30 to 3:30 p.m., at the Science Center. Local artist Susan Rodgerson will help children increase their powers of observation to become more aware of natural art that is all around them. The creative juices will flow as the children draw, paint, and make crafts with natural materials they gather outdoors. This program is a real hands-on experience for art and nature lovers alike.

New dates for wildlife classes

The New England Wildlife Center has announced a schedule change for its two upcoming wildlife art classes for children.

Classes at the Center in Hingham will begin the week of January 30 instead of January 16 as previously announced. The six-week sessions will combine the worlds of art and nature and will feature live models such as owls, hawks and other wild animals.

"Exploring the Animal World Through Art", for kindergarten children, will meet Monday mornings from 9:30 to 10:30.

"New England Wildlife Art Safari", for children in grades 1-3, will meet Monday afternoons from 3:30 to 5. Both classes will be taught by noted South Shore artist Linda Stevens who will introduce students to many different types of media.

Advanced registration is required for both classes and enrollment is limited. For further information, contact the New England Wildlife Center at 749-5387.

Sen. Golden honored

State Senator William B. Golden (D-Weymouth) was recently honored by the Massachusetts Legal Assistance Corporation for his support of equal justice under the law.

The Mass. Legal Assistance Corporation is a non-profit corporation which provides legal assistance to low and moderate income families and individuals. Golden was a co-sponsor of legislation which increased funding for this corporation in the last fiscal year.

The legislation was a response to a statewide report which indicated that less than 15% of low and moderate income persons were able to afford access to the courts on civil proceedings.

"Too often in the legislature we create new rights without providing citizens with the ability to exercise these rights," added Senator Golden. "If we are truly to have a society governed by law, we must all set as our goal a future where each individual of our society has equal access to the courts."

Derby Academy open house

Derby Academy will hold a morning coffee for visitors Thursday, Jan. 12.

The coffee is planned as an informal introduction for parents who are interested in learning more about the Hingham school, which offers a rigorous, traditional education in small classes for students in pre-kindergarten (four-year-olds) through grade nine.

Visitors will meet at 9:15 a.m. in the George S. Terry Library of the school, where Headmaster John Pistel will describe the curriculum and approach of Derby's program, and admissions director Jay Sadlon will review application procedures. After time for questions, guests may tour the campus with present parents and visit classes in Preprimary, Lower, and Upper Schools.

Applications for kindergarten (five years old by September 1) through Grade Eight will be accepted until January 31.

Candidates for grades five through nine must register for the upper school entrance exam, which is scheduled for Thursday, Feb. 16 at 1:30 p.m., and must submit an application prior to the testing date.

Interested parents should contact Mr. Sadlon as soon as possible regarding openings in particular classes. Arrangements to attend the morning coffee may be made by calling the school office at 749-0746.

Rep. Murray files drug legislation

As a state legislature for the past 12 years I have learned when a state rep. wants to accomplish passage of legislation it is most effectively achieved through alliances of both sides of the aisle.

Many issues have common concerns of both parties. Mary Jeanette Murray has in her term of office forged such unions and important legislation into law for the people of the Commonwealth. Rep. Murray formed alliances with other legislators to achieve diversified laws of importance such as donating organs for transplantation, no liability for sports volunteers, auto lemon law, drunk driving, pornography, lowering estate tax, drug education, notifying employees of hazardous waste, state to pay interest on overdue bills and medicare hospital discharge plan.

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray filed a packet of bills for the year 1989 pertaining to the Massachusetts Drug Problems and how to help resolve this situation.

Two of the bills, "Mandatory Jail Sentence for Drug Dealers" and "No Bail for Drug Traffickers" will eliminate the bail jumpers and give the courts the power to sentence.

"Many police officers with whom I have talked to regarding drugs say it is a farce to arrest these people. They are repeatedly arresting the same people and the law slaps the culprits wrists and lets them off scott free. These laws would put some bite into the law and stop condoning this insidious cancer which is eroding our, youth, commonwealth and nation. The drug industry is larger in billions of dollars than our major industries."

ADVENT EVENSONG

Services of evensong continue this season Thursday, Dec. 22 at 6:45 p.m. This is a wonderful service of hymns, Bible readings, and service music — a special way to prepare for Christmas.

WORSHIP ON CHRISTMAS EVE AND DAY

The family service on Christmas Eve will take place at 6 p.m. this year. Children's choirs will sing and children will be invited to carry one of the creche figures forward for the blessing of the creche. The bells of our carillon will ring out and bring Christmas to Cohasset.

The Festival Holy Eucharist on Christmas Eve will be held at 11 p.m., with a special music program beginning at 10:30 p.m. Harpsichord, Baroque Flute and Viol da gamba will combine with the organ and senior choir to create the delightful music of Christmas.

Christmas Day, Sunday, Dec. 25, there will be one service at 10 a.m. Readings of the Christmas story and Christmas carols will highlight this service on the day of Christ's birth.

HOLY INNOCENTS remembered

The midweek Eucharist on Wednesday, December 28 at 9:30 a.m. will commemorate the Holy Innocents. These were the children of Bethelem massacred by King Herod in his futile attempt to do away with the child born to be King of the Jews (Matthew, Chapter 2.)

VISITATION OF THE WISE MEN

The church school will hold its annual pageant on Epiphany Sunday, Jan. 8. This pageant commemorates the appearance of Christ to the wise men who journeyed from the east. The significance of the Epiphany celebration is that the light of Christ is given to all the world.

Rehearsals for the church school pageant will be on Thursday, Jan. 5, 4 p.m., with a dress rehearsal on Saturday, January 7, at 2 p.m.

NO CHURCH SCHOOL

There will be no church school on Sunday, Dec.25 and Jan. 1, Christmas and New Year's Day.

VESTRY approves outreach grants

At its meeting December 12 the Vestry approved grants to the Teen Parents' Program in Scituate and the Episcopal City Mission of the Diocese of Massachusetts.

The Teen Parents' Program has three objectives: 1) to allow young women the opportunity to complete their high school education; 2) to increase their competency as parents; and 3) to follow their progress after they leave the program.

The Episcopal City Mission has a long commitment to support and provide access to affordable housing. They have worked to create new housing for the elderly, the poor, and the handicapped; and to eliminate causes of homelessness.

YOU CAN GIVE A FLOWER

The Alter Guild always sees that the beautiful flowers on the alter for Christmas are given out soon after Christmas Day. Tuesday, Dec. 27, has been set aside as the day for giving flowers. If you would like to deliver a Christmas plant and brighten someone's Christmas, please give your name to the Rector, or to Betty Madden, director of the Altar Guild. If you like to take the flowers to someone prior to the 27, that can be arranged as well. Thanks for your help in spreading Christmas joy.

CHRISTMAS COMMUNION

The Clergy are eager to bring communion for Christmas to all who desire it. If you would like communion and are unable to attend church this Christmas, or if you know of someone, please call the office (383-1083.)

COURSE ABOUT THE FAMILY

A three-session course, the Dynamics of the Family, will be offered on January 18, 25, and February 1 at 7:30 p.m. This course is designed to look at the structure of the family in some detail.

Since the course time is short (only three sessions) and the content concentrated, course members are asked to read selected chapters from a book entitled, "Bradshaw. On the Family," before the start of the course. The cost for the book is $10. "Bradshaw. On the Family" is also a popular television program on PBS.

Please call the church office to register for the course or register with the instructor, Max Munro. We need to know how many plan to attend the course so that we can make sure each person or couple has a book and time to read the material.

For further information please call Max Munro at 383-1152.

ADULT education "Forum"

Save Sunday afternoon, Jan. 15, from 3 to 4:30 p.m. for the first of several Forums to be held at St. Stephen's during the year. Parishioners will be given the opportunity to discuss local and global contemporary issues and how we might respond as faithful Christians.

This first Forum's topic will be "Our Environment —A Crucial Challenge for Christians Today."

The Sunday afternoon time has been set aside to help as many persons attend as possible; child care will be provided.

Thanks to Elena Sestito for the lovely centerpieces, wall decorations and tree decorations and her special touch in making the room so festive. To Rev. Gary Ritts and staff for the use of the Congregational Church hall, and the great Santa's helpers who came early to set up — work long hours to make sure everything would be ready for the guests when Santa arrived, namely Ann Leonard, Helen Murphy, Betty Enders, Virginia Anderson, Anna Abbruzzese, Rose Kierce, Peggy Nyland, Pat Ryan, Lillian Lincoln, Shirley Laidlaw, Selectman Jimmy Gallagher, Elena Sestito. Also thanks to the drivers, Frannie Wakeman and Malcolm Onwood. We would be very remiss if we forgot to thank South Shore Elder Services nutrition department for the fantastic array of food. It was a great party and we thank everyone for all their caring spirit. Happy and healthy holiday to all! Happy New Year!

New S.S.I. Limits

Many seniors are eligible for S.S.I. and do not realize it. Some rules have changed and you may now be eligible. The "aged" (65 & over) income guidelines have been raised as of 1/1/89 to $496 for an individual and $750 for a couple. If an applicant falls into more than one category, he or she is eligible for a higher payment. The social security administration runs the S.S.I. program. However, S.S.I. is not the same as Social Security. Even if elders do not have Social Security coverage, they may be eligible for S.S.I. For more information, contact the Social Security Administration in Quincy. 472-6951 — Ask for Ed!

The committee, Lillian, Virginia and Jane will hold its first meeting on Monday, Jan. 9 at 10 a.m. at the Senior Center to plan for the spring/summer calendar. Call 383-9112 if you are interested in serving as a member of the committee.

Council on Aging — Is taking names for this year's Hingham Community Center '89 cabaret that will take place on Jan. 26 at the Hingham Armory. Seats will be limited to 40 and we will provide transportation on Thursday evening. First come/first serve. Call today 383-9112.

Are you ready for winter? — As the days grow shorter and colder safety in your home and outside is very important, for example: Do you have sand or salt ready for your outside stairs and walkways. Even table salt will help melt ice. Salt comes in a cannister that is easy to use. Make sure you keep the sand or salt in a place where it will not get wet and then freeze. Are your outside stairs and walkways well lit? Now is the time to replace any burned out bulbs before it gets too cold. Do the stairs and walks have railings? Sometimes a rope, if it is secured tightly at both ends, can help when it is icy or windy. Have you had your heating systems checked? Make sure your oil burner contract and oil delivery are current. Many companies deliver on a scheduled basis according to fuel degree days. Check to see if heating filters need to be cleaned and or replaced. If you have radiators, make sure that you can turn them on. Sometimes a little lubricant will make them easily adjustable so you are not wasting heat when you are not in the area. Also, make sure that furniture is at least six (6) inches away from heater to allow air to circulate and heat the room. Finally, if you use a free-standing, movable space heater, make sure the heater has an underwriter's laboratory (UL) label. This (UL) label means that it has been through stringent safety tests. Also be careful not to leave an electric heater near curtains or other flammable materials in a passageway or in an area where water is used.

S H I N E — Serving health information needs for elders — This is a program to assist folks with medical health insurance problems. If you need someone to help explain or fill out forms or if you need help battling the system, please call the COA office, ask to speak with Mrs. Pat Ryan. She can speak with you or have a trained volunteer come and visit you in your home. Over the following months, SHINE will provide answers to some common questions asked about the new Medicare catastrophic protection act.

Q. Won't only a small number of Medicare beneficiaries benefit from these changes?

A. Catastrophic coverage, by definition, is designed to help the relatively small number of individuals who will experience catastrophic medical expenses. The idea is to spread the risk of incurring great medical expenses over a large group, making it affordable for everyone. Catastrophic protection is similar to other insurance: Most people hope they will never have to "benefit" from their auto or fire insurance policies! About 22 percent of Medicare enrollees will now be entitled to higher Medicare benefit payments. It is important to remeber that the vast majority of seniors have been willing to insure themselves against these expenses by purchasing private insurance at a greater cost.

Elder Affairs honors walkers

The Massachusetts Executive Office of Elder Affairs recently honored "Keep Moving" leaders Virginia Anderson, Kathy Bryanton, Anne Leonard, Lillian Lincoln, and Jane Tilden of the Cohasset Strutters, at an appreciation luncheon at the Royal Park Plaza in Marlborough.

"As walking club leaders, you inspire and motivate elders to be active and fit, and to take control of their health," said Secretary of Elder Affairs Paul J. Lanzikos. "By bringing people together to share exercise and companionship, you are positive role models for your peers, your families, and your communities."

The "Keep Moving" Program is a state-wide network of walking clubs that promotes fitness and socialization for people 50 years and older. More than 400 trained and certified volunteers work with local councils on aging, senior centers, park and recreation departments, community centers, "Y's," hospitals, and shopping malls to organize and lead 260 walking clubs throughout the Commonwealth.

Special library celebration

The Osgood School children have been involved with a special celebration during their library time.

Mrs. Miller the librarian aide and Mrs. Brown the METCO Coordinator have celebrated Kwanzaa with the children.

Kwanzaa is an Afro-American tradition that is celebrated December 26th to January 1st, and has its foundation in the practice of Nguzo Saba, the seven principles of Nation Building, which are Umoja, Kujichagulia, Ujima, Ujamaa, Nia, Kuumba, Imani.

NGUZO SABA

The Seven Principles of Nation Building

UMOJA means Unity (say: oo-MOH-jah). To work together in the FAMILY, NATION, and RACE.

KUJICHAGULIA means SELF-DETERMINATION (say: Koo-gee-CHA-goo-lee-ah). To speak and stand up for ourselves and our beliefs.

UJIMA means COLLECTIVE WORK AND RESPONSIBILITY (say: oo-GEE-mah). To work together to build our community and to make it a better place to live.

UJAMAA means COOPERATIVE ECONOMICS (say: oo-JAH-mah). To build and buy from our own stores.

NIA means PURPOSE (say: NEE-ah). To have a good reason for the things we do.

KUUMBA means CREATIVITY (say: koo-OOM-bah). To make and keep our community beautiful.

IMANI means FAITH (say: ee-MAH-nee). To have faith in our parents, teachers, and leaders and faith in ourselves.

Thank you

A very special thank you to the members of the Cohasset PSO. Your beautiful bouquet arrived just as I was about to have a houseful of guests last weekend. It was the perfect touch for the holidays.

Winter sports scene at Cohasset High School

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

WRESTLING

With eight experienced seniors returning, Cohasset head coach John Sweeney expects a winning season in 1989. Last year, the Skippers finished with a 8-9 record.

"If we stay away from injuries, I am hoping for a winning season," said the sixth-year coach. "I am fortunate to have eight starters back, but the other wrestlers are a young and inexperienced group; they are still learning the sport. Unfortunately, there isn't much depth on our club."

The three seniors that Sweeney will count on in the winter campaign are tri-captains John Rhodes (119 pounds) and twin brothers, Paul (160) and Chris Froio (171). In fact, the three wrestlers qualified for the state tournament last year and Sweeney believes that they will return there again in the spring.

"The three of them are working real hard to qualify for the state's again," added Sweeney.

Other seniors include Matt Deveney (heavyweight), Tim Pierotti (last year's state qualifier in the 130-pound weight class), Dennis Mulligan (140) and Mike Stevens at 135.

Indidentally, Sweeney guarantees that Deveney will qualify for the state's as well.

"We have a good lineup, but there are holes due to the younger kids, said Sweeney, whose club had ended up among the top third out of 15 schools in the South Sectionals three straight years. "Overall, our objectives are to take one match at a time and to keep a level head. I think we have a legitimate shot at the league title."

Randolph and Whitman-Hanson will challenge Cohasset for the league crown, according to Sweeney.

It appears that Cohasset will definitely improve on last year's record with their senior-laden lineup. If not, it is still going to be an exciting 1988-89 season for the Skippers.

GYMNASTICS

Although the coaches in the South Shore League are predicting a rebuilding season for the Cohasset Gymnastics squad, head coach Ruth Anne Sargent still has the best all-around performer in the division, thus making the 1988-89 season something to look forward to.

Junior tri-captain Michelle Hartley is regarded the top gymnast in the league now that Dayna Curran of Hanover has finally departed.

"Michelle is such a hard worker," said Sargent who is starting her third season at the helm. "Coaches and judges have remarked that she has a beautiful routine. She has that extra charisma about her."

As a sophomore, the 1987-88 campaign was a traumatic year for Hartley. She missed the state individual meet due to sickness. Prior to that, she was forced to sit out several regular-season meets because of an injury. Hartley is hoping to return to the state's after a one-year hiatus (she made it as a freshman).

Even though Hartley will get top-billing in every meet this year, Sargent will still have to rely on her other two captains, Liz Buckley and Carrie Ripley for additional leadership.

There is another gymnast that has caught the eye of Sargent since training camp. She is eighth-grader Tara Gallagher, whom Sargent considers "the second-best talented all-arounder on the club."

Recently, Cohasset broke the 100-point mark against Hanover and Duxbury, something they haven't done since 1985.

"Unfortunately, we lost those two opening meets, but you would have thought that we had won the meets when we got over 100 points," said Sargent.

Sargent mentioned that she would like to improve on last year's record of 2-8. However, in order to do that, Cohasset must be competitive against schools such as Duxbury, Norwell, Scituate and Hanover.

"Once the younger kids get the varsity experience under their belts, we should be a very solid club. If we should lose Hartley to an injury, then we become a bad team because we don't have the personnel to replace her," explained Sargent.

The general consensus is that Cohasset may not capture the team state title in 1989, but have the opportunity to win the other half of the gymnastics' jewel — (the state individual crown). It should be a memorable year for Hartley.

Basketball teams open season with victories

Both the boys and girls basketball clubs opened the 1988-89 winter campaign with successful victories last week. However, their unbeaten records did not last long as they fell victim to Rockland December 16.

In the girls' season opener, forward Heather MacDonald scored 15 points and added 10 rebounds and Nancy Riley had the opposite, 10 points and 15 rebounds, leading the Division Three defending state champion Cohasset to a non-league victory over Sharon, 43-41, December 13.

The Lady Skippers led at the half, 24-20, in a closely-contested affair. Sarah Bishop scored the final four Cohasset points to clinch the win.

Against Rockland three nights later, Cohasset could not contain forwards Sharon Burneika and Kelley Realy, each adding 17 and 14 points respectively, to pace the Bulldogs to a 56-43 victory.

Rockland opened a 17-point run, but Cohasset (1-1) went on a 14-0 spurt, sparked by the defensive play of Bishop and the scoring of Kristin Ellinger, who netted seven of her 11 points in that stretch.

A three-point field goal and two free throws restored Rockland's lead back to eight points.

Riley, meanwhile, finished with eight points for Cohasset.

In the boys' season opener Dec. 16, the defending Emass. Division Three champion Skippers won their non-league contest over South Shore Voke Tech, 67-51, as sophomore guard Lincoln Marsac led the attack with 19 points.

Senior forward Jeff Bryant scored 13 points and grabbed 10 rebounds, while junior forward Sean McCarthy added 11 and hauled in 10 rebounds and Jim Reidy contributed with 10 points for Cohasset.

Cohasset then visited Rockland High School and witnessed the return of head coach Bob Fisher, who is considered around the South Shore as the nearest equivalent to the legendary John Wooden, the former collegiate coach at UCLA.

Fisher's return to the bench had a tremendous effect on his players as they overwhelmed the Skippers, 90-52. The Bulldogs placed four men in double figures to lead a balanced attack.

Senior guard, Chris Kelliher led the way with 15 points, followed by center Sean O'Shea and forward Bob O'Brien with 14 apiece and guard Dave McCarthy with 10.

Bryant (17 points) and Marsac (15) led Cohasset in scoring. Rockland jumped to a 18-4 lead after the first quarter and then increased their margin to 45-19 at the half.

WRESTLING

Adam Hill pinned Middleboro's Bill Cook in the 152-pound class to start a sweep of the final five matches for Cohasset, thus enabling the Skippers to produce a 44-24 victory over Middleboro in the season opener for both schools December 14.

1988: A year of money woes and overrides and a warning–more to follow

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

It was not an uneventful year in Cohasset.

It was a year when voters approved their first Proposition 2 1/2 overrides, with the ominous warning that more will follow.

It was late into its budget review when the advisory committee discovered the town was more than $600,000 in the red. With precious little time to spare, the committee prepared a budget to present to two consecutive town meetings, containing all the information on the town's first override attempt.

In other matters, a group of residents, calling themselves the Curtis Estate Action Committee, have thus far succeeded in their year-long effort to stop private development of the former George E. Curtis estate.

A new super-supermarket opened its doors after three years of battling the town. While business has boomed down at the corner of Sohier Street and Rte 3A, the former supermarket down the street sits idle.

Special town meeting last fall approved the town's first affordable housing development. The housing authority will take eight acres of former school land and more than $1 million in state money, to construct 12 units of affordable family housing.

The $1 million town hall addition is just about completed, with town departments open for business in their new offices. The departments currently housed in the Bates Building on Elm Street will soon be moved into the centralized headquarters on Highland Avenue.

It was a pretty quiet year for Cohasset Heights Ltd., although the commercial landfill lost a court decision which now limits the operation to the dumping of demolition debris.

In that same neighborhood, the town is getting set to approve its first comprehensive permit development known as Deck Point. The zoning board of appeals will render a formal decision on that 128-unit development next month, although all indications are that it will be approved. Under the state guidelines for the comprehensive permit process, at least 25 percent of the units must be set aside as affordable housing. Deck Point will be located off Rte. 3A next to the commercial landfill and Norfolk Conveyor.

And 1989 finally saw a successful conclusion to the Ward sewer plan approval process. But just when the town gave its final okay to the plan, which was to include a pipeline connection between Cohasset, Hingham and Hull, the state announced there was no money left to fund the project. State legislation is pending which will renew the dollars once pledged to Cohasset and relieve our long-suffering septic system owners.

January

Just when the town thought it was safe in their own little landfill . . . the state fined the Cedar Street dump $3,630 for the "willful" violation of state regulations. At least one area of concern was that the landfill's leachate was not properly drained and was seeping into surrounding wetlands.

In local sports, Cohasset High's super hockey star Danny Pompeo broke the school's scoring record set back in 1983. His coach, Dennis Walsh, said Pompeo was the kind of kid "who can do it all."

Meanwhile, the town was going crazy for another local athlete, Brian Edwards, who later this year set a state scoring record in basketball.

February

The doors to the long-awaited and debated Super Stop and Shop were opened this month. After three years of negotiations between developer Donald Staszko and the town, the new supermarket replaced the smaller store on Rte. 3A. More than 600 people flocked to the invitational

Fate of Dwyer's headquarters to be decided

A superior court judge is expected to give his decision in about a week on legal questions regarding the reconstruction of the headquarters of Dwyer's Cleaning Spot on Route 3A.

According to Cohasset Town Counsel Richard Henderson, the four-hour trial took place in Dedham Dec. 20 before Judge James P. Lynch, Jr.

"The judge took it under advisement," Henderson said.

Topic of the trial was whether Dwyer's needs a special permit for its new building, and whether it must go to the planning board for a site plan review.

The headquarters for Dwyer's are being rebuilt after an August 5 fire destroyed the $1 million building.

Building Inspector Don Robbins issued a cease and desist order Oct. 20 after he investigated the site at the suggestion of planning board member Al Moore.

In a letter to owner Robert Dwyer, Robbins explained that he had the right to rebuild exactly what was in place.

"Now, I find that instead of a one and half story building, we have a two and a half story building," he said.

Robbins explained that any extension or enlargement requires a special permit from the Zoning Board of Appeals, and any extension over 200 square feet requires a site plan review.

At the Nov. 2 planning board meeting, Dwyer indicated during an informal hearing that the new main office and central processing facility now met local zoning requirements.

But Robbins reiterated that Dwyer should seek a special permit from the ZBA and site plan review from the planning board.

Dwyer's is scheduled to appeal the building inspector's decision at the Jan. 5 ZBA meeting.

The town was granted a preliminary injunction in superior court Dec. 2, prohibiting further construction on the second floor of Dwyer's.

At last week's trial, Dwyer's indicated in their testimony that the square footage is not more but 500 less than before, according to Henderson.

"The testimony given by them seems to suggest that the useable floor space is less than before," said Henderson.

He added that Dwyer's said they used the second floor in the old building even though it was all gabled.

"They argued that they just changed the structure," said Henderson. "Now it is a rectangular shape.

"The court seemed to think the usable space was important," he said. "I don't."

Henderson also said he interprets the town's bylaw as requiring a site plan review for anything larger than 200 square feet.

"That would include anything larger than a doghouse," he said.

Representing the town at the hearing in addition to Henderson were Robbins and town engineer John Modzelewski, he said.

Representing Dwyer's were the owner, builder Richard Kehoe and Atty. Gerald Monaco of Hingham, according to Henderson.

Henderson said he filed a memo stating why he thought the project needed a site plan review and special permit in support of the town's position.

Committee to review two proposals

Proposals to reduce the board of selectmen from five to three members and the creation of a municipal housing authority will be discussed by the town government structure committee Tuesday, Jan. 31, at 8 p.m. at Town Hall.

"Those are two major ongoing issues," said secretary Wilson Pyle during a brief meeting December 27.

In November, Sohier Street resident Robert Davenport submitted a petition to reduce the number of selectmen because "that number would be more efficient and cheaper."

"I don't feel the large number accomplishes anything except to make it more cumbersome," said Davenport.

But others, such as Richard Barrows, a Cohasset police sergeant who worked to increase the number of members from three to five in 1982, disagrees.

"I think it has worked better with five," said Barrows. "There is a lot more input."

The matter is scheduled for the April town meeting.

A proposal to create a municipal housing with five members may also be resubmitted for town meeting. It was voted down at the special town meeting in December.

The authority would have responsibility for such things as administering qualified housing units created by special permit granted by the planning board and promulgating regulations and executive orders for the use, occupancy, sale, rent, lease, joint ownership and other disposition of qualified housing under its authority.

"We opposed the planning board's article because no one met with us," said committee member Roy Fitzsimmons.

Fitzsimmons said that planning board chairman Robert Sturdy plans to meet with the government structure committee.

Fitzsimmons also proposed that in the future, the committee discussed the possible regionalization of any services.

"In the future, we should try to see if any communities are interested," he said.

"We should try to contact any towns which might want to discuss it with us.

"We can discuss if we have any common areas of interest."

The town government structure committee reports to town meeting.

Permits for plans

Louis G. Watson of Cohasset Hardware Company in Cohasset Village has written to the building inspector regarding plans to add a second story at the nearby Pilgrim Cooperative Bank on South Main St.

In his letter to Donald Robbins, Watson said, "Being an abutter to this property, I would assume that any request for an addition similar to this would mean that a notice would be forthcoming from the town of Cohasset.

"I have checked with the firm of Perkins and Sons, Hingham, Ma., who surveyed our property at 40-42 South Main St. and they have told me that our lot line is an additional two feet beyond our back wall.

"We have two windows at this end of our building which not only provide light to our second floor but also ventilation and exits.

"I would like this information to be on record before any permits are issued."

Odors continue

Health Agent Joseph Godzik has notified selectmen that an odor mitigation system for the leachate collection system at the Cohasset Heights Ltd. Landfill is in operation.

But odor incidents have still been noted, said Dr. Godzik.

He said the system became operational Nov. 29.

"The system operates from about 3:30 p.m. to 6:30 a.m. daily," said Godzik in the Dec. 21 memo.

"Whether the system has operated every day since Nov. 29, I don't know.

"Odor incidents have been noted since the installation of the equipment and the board of health will continue to monitor the events."

Godzik explained that the system consists of a large fan which withdraws air from the headspace of each leachate collection tank and the groundwater collection tank.

The air is then filtered through a 4,000 pound cannister of activated carbon which is designed to remove volatile organic compounds, according to Godzik.

The filtered air is then vented through a stack near the top of the landfill, he said.

A special Christmas celebration was held last week at the Community Center for the people involved in the Council on Aging's special needs exercise class. Joining in the celebration were: (l to r) Ruth Mullen, from the South Shore Bank, Kathy Bryanton, senior center director, Claire Gurnett, exercise instructor, Martha Grabowski, Rita Sullivan and Cheryl Proal. No flammable liquids

Cohasset's Fire Chief has directed Dwyer's Cleaning Sport, 754 Chief Justice Cushing Way, to stop using any liquid fueled heating devices and to remove the flammable liquid containers from the building until permits are obtained.

In a Dec. 19 had delivered letter, Chief Daniel Brock said that Dwyer's was in violation of a regulation regarding Oil Burning Equipment and Use and Maintenance of Temporary Portable Space Heating Devices and Equipment used in the Construction Industry.

"You are hereby directed to immediately cease operation of any liquid fueled heating devices and immediately remove the flammable liquid containers from the building," said Brock.

"No further use of of these devices is allowed until the proper permits have been obtained."

Dwyer's is reconstructing its main office and central processing facility after a $1 million fire Aug. 5.

New chairman

Patricia C. Buckley of Forest Ave., Cohasset, was recently elected chairman of the Cohasset Conservation Commission.

Also elected were Jeffrey C. Waal of Old Pasture Road, vice chairman; and Merle S. Brown of Beechwood St., hearing officer for 49 Margin St. (the Oaks) Notice of Intent.

grand opening of the 49,000 square-foot store.

Athletic director, Clark Chatterton, warned the school committee that in the future, Cohasset may have to consider joining teams with other schools. Because of a decrease in student enrollment, participation in high school sports is also on the decline. One option, Chatterton said, may be to combine teams such as hockey, with another town such as Hull.

Meanwhile, a second Milliken Field study committee was formed after an initial presentation was defeated by town meeting. There has been no firm proposal created by this second committee, primarily because of the town's budget crisis uncovered a few weeks later.

March

The owner of Cohasset Heights Ltd., the embattled commercial landfill off Crocker Lane, offered to take the town's trash for nothing until SEMASS is built, in return for an end to the litigation against his business.

Paul Barry, co-owner of Cohasset Heights, made the offer to town officials, and later to town meeting in the spring. His offer was ultimately rejected, and the most expensive litigation in the town's history continues.

This was the month when that $613,000 "black hole" in the town's budget was discovered. The town's new accountant, Mary Matthews, uncovered the budget discrepancies when she tried to balance the estimated local and state receipts with the actual revenue. Town officials scurried about, attempting to solve the fiscal puzzle without devastating the local government in the process.

Despite the town's fiscal woes, there was something to cheer about this month. The girls' varsity basketball team emerged from their post-season play as state champions.

The boys' team was defeated in an agonizing finale against St. Joseph's High School. Despite their defeat however, Cohasset High School is an acknowledged leader on basketball courts throughout the state.

And in other news this month, School Supt. Stephen Hart told the committee that budget cuts could not be recommended in the proposed $5.1 million budget for FY '89. The budget, which represented a 6.9 percent increase over the previous year, represented what Hart called, " a realistic budget, not an ideal budget."

April

Town meeting, town election, and a special town election, were among the highlights of this month in 1988. Town meeting voted to approve a number of items into the town's budget, creating a $515,000 deficit.

After town meeting approved a number of capital expenditures, a special town election was set for May 14. It was to contain nine separate override ballot items.

Also in April, special town meeting in Hull finally approved an intermunicipal sewer agreement with Cohasset. The same document was to be presented to Cohasset voters at their May 2 special town meeting.

Cohasset was to follow that act at the May special town meeting with a $2.2 million appropriation for the construction of the Hull-Cohasset sewer pipeline.

Also this month, local developer Donald Staszko unveiled plans to build a 12-store mall across the parking lot from the Super Stop and Shop. The proposal was later defeated by the planning board in a tie vote in August. The issue is still unresolved, with litigation pending against the planning board in superior court.

May

Town residents overwhelmingly approved six out of seven override questions on the special election ballot. Town officials, who earlier had been sounding the death knell for local government if the overrides were defeated, were comforted by the support from Cohasset taxpayers.

Perhaps one of the happiest groups in town, at least for the moment, was the sewer commissioners. Town meeting without a vote to spare, had previously indicated their support for the Hull-Cohasset project. Their success continued into the special election, when voters again approved the Proposition override necessary to begin the Ward Plan.

The South Shore Music Circus' new executive producer, Edward Kasses, began his duties at the summer theatre on Sohier Street. The 38 year-old former talent agent replaced longtime producer Ron Rawson who retired after 25 years in Cohasset.

The Curtis Estate Action Committee continued its pursuit against the trustees of the former George E. Curtis estate. In May, several local and state officials, including the Norfolk County

N.J. man plan 'Arabian Nights'

District Attorney and the Secretary of Human Services, lent their support to the committee's efforts to use the property as the late benefactor requested.

June

In June, a campaign battle began pitting incumbent state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, against challenger John Silva of Hull. The 32 year-old Hull resident announced his intention to run against the six-term state legislator, citing a lack of regional leadership by Rep. Murray.

The selectmen's executive secretary Donald Andrew decided he would not attempt to renew his contract with the town. Although he had no immediate employment prospects, Andrew decided he had had enough of small town politics. Andrew's decision was prompted by his unhappiness with his job. He noted that working with a five-person board of selectmen proved a more difficult task than working with the three-member board.

Selectmen decided this month that 18 residents would lose their coveted moorings in Cohasset Harbor because they did not renew their fee payment by the June 1 deadline. In addition, several others lost their place on the mooring waiting list because they missed the payment deadline.

This month, local developer Donald Staszko offered the town a four-bedroom home at the corner of Sohier Street and Rte. 3A. The only expense to the town would be to move it. Stazko suggested the house could relocated to town-owned land behind the Super Stop and Shop for use as affordable family housing.

The housing authority would like to accept the home, but is awaiting direction and money to move the structure from the state Executive Office of Communities and Development.

July

The "Arabian Nights" floating resort is still in the planning stages because the Army Corps of Engineers has requested a complete environmental impact study from the developer.

In other news this month, selectmen expressed dismay at plans by the conservation trust to sell the Old Salt House. The Cohasset Harbor building, once owned by the late Jessie Cox, was under the jurisdiction of the conservation trust. Members of the trust negotiated the sale of the building to a local resident, but selectmen opposed the sale. For several weeks, they threatened to begin eminent domain proceedings to regain town ownership of the waterfront property.

The bottom dropped for the sewer commission this month when they were informed by letter that all state funds for the Ward Plan had evaporated. Without warning, the commission was informed that the millions of dollars in state funds would not be available for Cohasset's project, because other towns had priority over the limited financing. The commission's only hope right now is that state legislation will be passed which will supply the needed money for the project.

One Cohasset resident has a lifetime of wonderful memories from her participation at the Democratic National Convention in Atlanta, Ga. Donna McGee, an alternate delegate to the convention and the director of personnel and labor relations for the Executive Office of Human Services, came back from the Dukakis convention buoyed by the hope that her boss would make it to the White House. Alas, it was only a hope.

We had our problems this month at Sandy Beach as raw sewerage from the Boston Harbor treatment facility washed up on our shores. The beach was ordered shut during a hot July weekday when syringes and other plastic debris were found in the Cohasset water. On subsequent days the following week, Cohasset Cove and Sandy Beach were again closed because of the pollution.

August

Selectmen's Executive Secretary Donald Andrew bid farewell to Cohasset this month. Andrew, who had been in Cohasset for three years, beginning as the town's combined executive secretary and accountant, left to begin duties as city auditor in Everett.

In August, the housing partnership rejected plans to build a 128-unit comprehensive permit condominium project called Deck Point off Rte. 3A. Twenty five percent of the units would be designated as affordable housing, under the comprehensive permit process. "The overall quality of life would not be appropriate for a housing development which would include children," the partnership's draft report stated.

The headquarters of Dwyer's Cleaning Spot was destroyed in a fire this month. The fire began in the electrical wires contained in the attic of the two-story wood-framed building. Since that time, a temporary store has been set up within the old Stop and Shop store on Rte. 3A. Although a new store is being constructed, Dwyer's has been ordered to stop all work until permission is obtained from the zoning board for what the building inspector says is an expansion of the original building.

Planning board members were split in their decision on the proposed 12-store Super Stop and Shop mall. Because there was not a three-vote majority, Town Counsel Richard Henderson ruled that the plan was therefore defeated. The developer's attorney, Charles Humphreys, argued that a split decision was no decision at all, and therefore the planning board exceeded the statutory 75 days in which to make a decision. The matter remains unresolved, with court action pending by developer Donald Staszko.

This was the month when town officials finally agreed to and signed an affordable housing agreement with the state. It took more than a year of negotiations by state and local officials to come up with a revised agreement pact. The agreement puts Cohasset in compliance with the state's executive Order 215, which means the town can not be considered restrictive in its housing practices.

Selectmen voted to proceed with the eminent domain taking of the Old Salt House, despite its sale to Cohasset resident Thomas Eisenstadt for $400,000. The watefront building was sold to the attorney by the conservation trust.

September

Local Developer Donald Staszko filed a lawsuit against the planning board and the building inspector, saying the board's 2-2 decision regarding his Cohasset Plaza plans was not a legal decision. Because they did not approve or deny the plan, Atty. Charles Humphreys, representing the developer, said the board exceeded its 75 days in which to make a decision and the site plan must be approved.

In other news, selectmen reversed themselves and decided not to go ahead with the eminent domain taking of the Old Salt House. Selectman Martha Gjesteby suggested that because the waterfront building had been sold, the eminent domain process should be halted. A majority of the board agreed with the suggestion.

While members of the Curtis Estate Action Committee anxiously awaited a court hearing, they welcomed the endorsement of their plans by the state Executive Office of Communities and Development. The state agency informed the comittee that it would support its plans to provide low and moderate income housing on the former George Curtis estate.

The committee expected to be in probate court this month regarding their efforts to gain control of the 55-acre estate.

The conservation commission was gearing up for a series of hearings on the proposed 109 private boat slip project by the new owners of the Oaks estate. The new owners, Oaks Realty Trust, is planning to construct a private dock along the waterfront property, with 48 slips constructed for public use, along with a public parking lot on Margin Street.

And although no decision was reached inside the courtroom at probate court, the trustees of the Curtis Estate and the members of the action committee agreed that one home there could be renovated for a needy, homeless family. In the meantime, Asst. Attorney General Gwen O'Sullivan, who must decide whose position she will support, received a 90-day extension from the court. She wanted the time to review the latest endorsement and funding pledge of the action committee's plan by EOCD.

Lanci Valentine, a former assistant director of the Duxbury Art Complex, was named director of the South Shore Art Center. She replaced Joel Conrad who left the center after one year to take a position in Boston.

The members of the board of selectmen were on the hot seat during last May's town meeting in which the town found itself in a financial hole.

A licensed asbestos inspector told the town's building inspector that a substantial amount of asbestos had been found in the basement of the old town hall. Although National Abatement Services warned that the asbestos could pose a health hazard for the construction workers in the basement, the carcinogenic material has yet to be removed. The company estimated it could take as much as $8,000 to remove the material from the basement.

The town's affordable housing pact was signed by the state secretary of the Executive Office of Communities and Development. The official signing of the document followed more than a year of disagreement over the wording of the pact. By virtue of the agreement, all state discretionary grants assigned to Cohasset may no longer be withheld.

Zoning board reviews Deck Point plans . . .

The town's attorney questioned the legality of plans by the new Oaks estate owners to dredge a portion of the property to make way for 109 boat slips.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson told the owners at a conservation commission hearing that a previous court agreement provided that the property must be maintained in its current condition. That agreement, he said, also applied to the new owners. Oaks Realty Trust had presented plans to dredge 28,000 yards of materials to provide room for the 109 boat slips.

In other news this month, Cohasset High's Jim Reidy set a school scoring record in soccer. The team co-captain broke the record of 68 points set by 1988 Cohasset graduate Todd Fitzpatrick. Reidy furthered his total in the remaining games this season.

The two candidates for state representative, incumbent Mary Jeanette Murray and challenger Jonh Silva, squared off in the first of several cable televised debates.

Meanwhile the zoning board held the first of several hearings on the proposed 128-unit Deck Point condominium project. The developers are seeking a comprehensive permit which will allow them to bypass certain zoning, health and planning regulations. In return, 25 percent of the units will be designated for low and moderate income families. The proposed development will be situated on 16 acres of land on King Street known as Cohasset Hill.

A scale model of the Deck Point condominiums proposed for Cohasset Hill.

The school committee voted to release 14 acres of land to selectmen so the town may decide on a proposal to locate a 5,000 plot cemetery on the property. The land, formerly

Pilgrim Station Update:

Management and plant improvements in place, says NRC.

Two and a half years ago we shut down the Pilgrim electricity generating plant because we recognized the need to make plant improvements. Today, that task is complete.

The Federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission has voted to allow the Pilgrim electricity generating plant to begin the long process of restart. The program, which the company proposed and the NRC approved, to demonstrate operating competence and concern for safety, will last about four months. It follows a series of reports by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission staff and the independent, congressionally established Advisory Committee on Reactor Safety. The NRC staff and the advisory committee both found the plant and its management team ready to begin the power ascension phase.

Agency Approves Long Term, Carefully Monitored Restart Program

Observers from the Nuclear Regulatory Commission will be on hand to review key stages of the restart program. The Commonwealth of Massachusetts has also been invited by the company to send an observer. "Hold" points are included, at which all aspects of performance will be carefully reviewed by the company and the NRC before moving up to the next level. The program will also involve starting up and shutting down the plant at various times for tests and minor modifications. This is not unusual for any power plant that has been shut down for an extended period, although in this case it is likely you will hear news reports each time we shut down.

A New Management Team Getting High Marks

Headed by the respected Ralph Bird, a retired rear admiral, the management team consists of professionals with more than 250 years of successful operating experience in the nuclear Navy and commercial nuclear power plants. Under Bird's leadership, plant managers and employees are committed to achieving ever rising standards of excellence in all aspects of plant operations. The high level of their performance has already been recognized in federal government reports. According to the Advisory Committee on Reactor Safeguards, "the new management group is made up of people of demonstrated competence."

An Industry Leading Safety Enhancement Program

The Safety Enhancement Program has gained national recognition making Pilgrim Station a leader in the area. Consistent with the commitment to achieve rising standards of excellence, more than $200 million have been spent on extensive modifications and improvements to assure that all plant systems meet, and in many cases exceed, the latest NRC requirements and industry guidelines. And, close cooperation with state and federal agencies will continue as further improvements are made on top of the significant progress already seen in emergency planning.

Have A Question? Call Us.

There's a lot more to Pilgrim Station. It's a major source of vitally needed energy for our state and our growing economy. You'll be hearing more about Pilgrim in the weeks and months ahead. If you'd like more information anytime, please call us at 508-747-8280.

Lucia & John Blaser, owners of Fantastic Sam's of Scituate, were delighted with the response to their Mariner Merchant coupon.

"We received a total of 116 coupons from the Mariner Merchant. Forty-two coupons were repeat guests, sixty-five were new guests, and an additional nine coupon returns are unknown"

We have to admit, when the account representative first proposed The Mariner Merchant coupon, we were more attracted by the cost per thousand than its potential...With some stiff competition, the Merchant outdid its competition in cost per return, and final numbers. We're believers. We're already signed on for 1989."

Lucia added she's has also been pleased with Fantastic Sam's Mariner display ads.

Since we opened, Mariner display advertising has brought in 12% of our customers, which my corporate franchise feels is an excellent display result."

Resolutions

The start of a new year always brings with it a flood of resolutions. The slate is wiped clean, and we have an opportunity to do so much better than the previous year.

It's an intriguing thought. And very often, our resolutions surivive a day or two. But after that, it's often back to the old ways - to heck with the new.

Even here at the Mariner, there are so many things we'd like to do differently. There are stories we look back on and wince, and there are a few of which we are proud. There are a small number of issues each year against which all others should be measured. And unfortunately, there are those issues that we silently hope will be somehow overlooked that week by the busy people of this town.

So here we have this clean slate in front of us. We'll try, and sometimes fail, but we'll try again to hold up to these resolutions for the new year of 1989:

As much as is humanly possible, we will try to be objective in our reporting. This means that no one should receive biased attention, be that favorable or not, from our reporters.

We will work much harder this year to present two sides to every story. If someone or some project is being criticized, we will make a simple telephone call to the proper person and request a reply. Although that would seem only common courtesy and common sense, our rush to finish a story before deadline often precludes our obligation to talk to both sides.

We will not be unfairly harsh to anyone in our editorials. Contrary to what some people have said, our editorials are not a cheap attempt to sell newspapers. As far as we can determine, our editorials have never sold a single issue. What those editorials represent is the newspaper's viewpoint on a certain local issue. We try not to be unduly critical, and we try not to take sides on an issue until we have thought the situation out for at least a week or two. But an editorial, after all, is a stated opinion on a certain matter. And that opinion is not always going to coincide with the opinion of everyone in this town.

We will try to make our editorials a little more meaningful, a little more intelligent than in years past. It will hopefully be a forum for community discussion on certain subjects.

But one thing is important. We will continue to write editorials. We will continue to scrutinize the events of this community and offer our opinion as firsthand observers. They will not sell newspapers, but we feel our opinions on certain public matters are as valid, if not more so, than the average person living or doing business in this community.

We will try this year to produce the best newspaper for this town. We simply do not have the staff or the budget to cover all facets of this community - but we will try our best. We will attend many government meetings - and let the taxpayers of this town know how their dollars are being spent. We will continue our feature stories on the people and places of this town. And we will dig out some news stories of which the public may be unaware.

Basically, the Mariner is a simple, local hometown newspaper. It has never pretended to be anything else. With as much enthusiasm we will cover a kindergarten graduation, as a court hearing. We will happily interview the new minister in a church, and we will report on our campaigns and elections.

And we will rely on you to give us ideas and suggestions to make this newspaper better in the new year. We need to know what you would like to read in 1989. We can't always promise speedy results, but your suggestions will never be ignored.

With your help, we can become a better hometown newspaper. That doesn't mean we will never offend anyone. But we will try our best to be honest, accurate, objective and fair to every person in this town.

There were at least a few people offended by our "gifts" to them in last week's Christmas Wish list. We only heard from one, but there were likely more. To that one person who called in his complaint, this week we offer our apologies. You're a good friend to this newspaper and to Cohasset, and we certainly didn't mean to offend you. Best wishes in the new year (and maybe next year we'll leave you off the list).

Residents, selectmen oppose Crystal Woods

under the jurisdiction of the school department, borders Pleasant Lane and Pleasant Street and Smith Place. The cemetery committee will present the proposal to the 1989 annual town meeting.

The Cohasset Dramatic Club, long a familiar feature within the town hall auditorium, began a new season in a new home. The popular musical, "Sugar Babies," a departure from usual dramatic club fare, was presented on their new stage in the former Greenhouse Restaurant on Stagecoach Way.

Members of the Curtis Estate Action Committee worried that, without a unified plan endorsed by all interested Cohasset boards, the town will not win its court case against the trustees. Committee co-chairman Joseph McElroy expressed his concern to selectmen, saying that without the housing authority's support for their plan, they could be in danger of losing the court decision, scheduled for December.

The housing authority insisted it was not against including housing for the retarded in the Curtis Estate plan, but they questioned whether the state would have any money for the proposal.

November

In the latest presentation to the conservation commission, the owners of the Oaks estate offered the town control of the 58-room mansion in exchange for approval of their plans to construct 109 boat slips around the waterfront property. If the plan was not approved, the owners "would go to war over it," stated the attorney representing Oaks Realty Trust.

Meanwhile, a plan to relocate the North Scituate commuter rail station met with mixed reviews by Cohasset residents. The plan now calls for a station to be located on the site of the former Treasuer Chest Advertising building on Country Way, with a parking lot to be situated on Gannett Road where the tennis courts are currently located.

In the November election, incumbent representative Mary Jeanette Murray crushed her opponent John Silva by a three-to-one margin. Massachusetts' native son, Michael Dukakis did not fare so well in Cohasset. He gathered 40 percent of the local vote, compared to 58 percent for the Republican ticket. Native son Gerry Studds defeated his rival, Jon Bryan, by a two-to-one margin in his hometown.

The school committee voted to release 8.72 acres of land so the town could decide on a housing authority proposal to construct 12 units of affordable family housing. The land borders Rte. 3A and Evergreen Lane. The school department still controls more than 50 acres of land behind the Osgood and Deer Hill schools.

Selectmen agreed with the harbor committee this month that the plans to construct 109 private boat slips in Cohasset Harbor "is bad." Selectmen endorsed a ten-point report filed by the harbor committee, outlining their opposition to the plan proposed by the owners of the Oaks estate.

In other news, despite their reservations, selectmen supported the creation of a new town committee to look into possible town uses of the Oaks estate. Selectmen are dubious whether the town could ever gain control of the 58-room mansion, and whether it could afford to maintain the building. The town obtained a $4,600 state grant to study the feasibility. The new committee, headed by planning board chairman Robert Sturdy, will look into the possibilities for municipal use of the estate.

A familiar neon clock on the Robbins garage on North Main Street was stolen this month. The familiar landmark was a valuable piece of property at the Robbins garage for more than 50 years. The timepiece, which may be worth several hundred dollars, has not been recovered.

The housing authority, at the suggestion of member Fred Koed, finally agreed to endorse the Curtis Estate Action Committee plan for the Jerusalem Road property. The plan will include a proposal for eight units of housing for the retarded.

A new harbormaster, Irving Gadow of Plymouth, was named to the post this month by selectmen. The former 30-year Coast Guard officer replaced Steve Osborne who was employed by the town for the past two years.

December

The proposed Crystal Woods housing project located off Brewster and Ledgewood roads, received mixed reviews. The 60-unit housing project, which borders land between Cohasset and Scituate, won the conditional support of the Cohasset Housing Authority. But abutters to the property are strongly opposed to the project, which will include 20 units for moderate income families, saying it will increase traffic and drainage in the neighborhood.

A subsequent court hearing on the Curtis estate, scheduled for December 15, was postponed so that the state attorney general could have more time to review the latest information submitted by the action committee.

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce board of directors voted to oppose the Deck Point housing project on Cohasset Hill, saying it will take away a large amount of the limited industrial-zoned land in town. The directors also voted to appropriate $300 to help with an abutters' appeal if the project wins comprehensive permit approval by the zoning board of appeals.

At the December 5 special town meeting, voters approved the town's first affordable housing development. By an overwhelmingly majority, town meeting supported the housing authority's plans to construct 12 units of affordable family housing on 8.72 acres of land behind the Super Stop and Shop.

The owners of the Oaks estate decided to take a "pause" with their plans to construct 109 boat slips around the Cohasset Harbor property. Because of the strong adverse reaction from town officials, and the resolution supported by the Dec. 5 special town meeting in which the town declared its opposition to the pier proposal, the owners decided to revise their original plan. The conservation commission has agreed to a continuance on the hearings for an order of conditions.

Selectmen this month declared their support for the neighbors of the Crystal Woods housing development, and voted to oppose plans to construct the 60-unit townhouse development. A subsequent attempt by Selectman Martha Gjesteby to reconsider the original vote failed two weeks later.

The zoning board of appeals indicated this month they would approve the Deck Point housing project with a list of conditions, including the elimination of 22 units to create a central open space area. A final vote on the housing project will be taken by the board January 10.
